The Executive Power. Constitution, Art. II, sec. 1.

1. The executive power[1] shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years. * * * Constitution, Art. II, sec. 1.

Power of the President as Commander in Chief. Sec. 2, ibid.

2. The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States, when called into the actual service of the United States;[2] he may require the opinion, in writing,

---

[1] The Executive Power.—The executive power is vested in a President, and, as far as his powers are derived from the Constitution, he is beyond the reach of any other Department, except in the mode prescribed by the Constitution through the impeaching power. Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet., 524, 610; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 166.

Execution of the laws.—The President is required to see that the laws are faithfully executed, but he is not obliged to execute them himself. IV Opin. Att. Gen., 515; Williams v. U. S., 12 Pet., 524, 610. The President speaks and acts through the heads of the several Departments in relation to subjects which appertain to their respective duties. Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet., 498, 513; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S., 755; Runkle v. U. S., 122 U. S., 543, 557. As a general rule, the direction of the President is presumed in all instructions and orders issuing from the competent Department. VII Opin. Att. Gen., 453. In a matter which the law confides to the pure discretion of the Executive, the decision of the President, or proper head of Department, on any question of fact involved is conclusive, and is not subject to review by any other authority in the United States. VI Opin. Att. Gen., 226. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cr., 137, 166. The President can not be restrained by injunction from executing a law of Congress. Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wallace, 475; Bates v. Taylor, 11 S. W. Rep., 266.

[2] Powers as Commander in Chief.—As Commander in Chief he is authorized to direct the movements of the land and naval forces placed by law at his command, and to employ them in the manner he may deem most effectual to harass and conquer and subdue the enemy. He may invade the hostile country and subject it to the sovereignty and authority of the United States. But his conquests do not enlarge the boundaries of this Union, nor extend the operations of our institutions and laws beyond the limits before assigned to them by the legislative power. Fleming v. Page, 9 How., 603, 615. The power of command and control reserved by the Crown was placed by the Constitution in the hands of the President. Street v. U. S., 24 Ct. Cls., 230; 25, ibid, 515, 113, U. S., 299. See, also, the chapter entitled THE EMPLOYMENT OF MILITARY FORCE.

The Cabinet. of the principal officer in each of the Executive Departments upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.[1] Constitution, Art. II, sec. 2.

Power to establish rules and regulations.—The power of the Executive to establish rules and regulations for the government of the Army is undoubted; * * * The power to establish implies, necessarily, the power to modify or repeal, or to create anew. U. S. v. Eliason, 16 Pet., 291, 301. The Army Regulations, when sanctioned by the President, has the force of law because it is done by him by the authority of law. U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How., 556, 567.

May form military governments in occupied territory.—As an incident of the exercise of belligerent rights, the President may form military and civil governments in the territory of the enemy occupied by the armies of the United States. Cross v. Harrison, 16 How., 164, 190, 193. The Grapeshot, 19 Wall., 129, 132. He may also institute temporary governments within insurgent districts occupied by the national forces. Texas v. White, 7 Wall., 700, 730.

May establish courts in occupied territory—Limitation.—The courts established or sanctioned in Mexico, during the war, by the commanders of the United States forces, were nothing more than the agents of the military power, to assist it in preserving order in the conquered territory, and to protect the inhabitants in their persons and property, while it was occupied by the American armies. They were subject to the military power, and their decisions were under its control whenever the commanding officer thought proper to interfere. Neither the President nor any military officer can establish a court in a conquered country, and authorize it to decide upon the rights of the United States, or of individuals in prize cases, nor to administer the laws of nations. Jecker v. Montgomery, 13 How., 498, 515. The Grapeshot, 9 Wall., 129, 132.

For authority to employ secret agents in time of war, see Totten v. U. S., 92 U. S., 105, 107. For powers and duties of the Executive in connection with the Army, the Militia, and the Army Regulations, etc., see the chapters so entitled.

The constitutional power of the President to command the Army and Navy, and of Congress "to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces" are distinct; the President can not, by military orders, evade the legislative regulations; Congress can not, by rules and regulations, impair the authority of the President as Commander in Chief. Swaim v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 173. When a law is passed for the regulation of the Army, which does not impair the efficiency of the President as Commander in Chief, he becomes, as to that law, an executive officer, and is limited in the discharge of his duties by the statute. McBlair v. U. S., 19 ibid., 528.

[1] The pardoning power.—A pardon is an act of grace proceeding from the power intrusted with the execution of the laws, which exempts the individual on whom it is bestowed from the punishment the law inflicts for a crime he has committed. It is the private though official act of the executive magistrate, delivered to the individual for whose benefit it is intended, and not communicated officially to the court. U. S. v. Wilson, 7 Pet., 150, 161; Coke, 3d Inst., 233. The power which the Constitution confers upon the President to grant pardons can not be controlled or limited, in any manner, by Congress. Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall., 333, 380; U. S. v. Klein, 13 Wall., 128, 147; IV Opin. Att. Gen., 458; 19 ibid., 476.

Delivery and acceptance.—The pardon is a private though official act. It is official in that it is the act of the Executive; it is private in that it is delivered to the individual and not to the court. It must be pleaded, or brought officially to the knowledge of the court, in order that the court may give it effect in any given case. There is nothing peculiar in it to distinguish it from other acts It is a deed to the validity of which delivery is essential, and the delivery is not complete without acceptance. It may be rejected by the person to whom it is tendered, and, if rejected, there is no power in the court to force it upon the individual. U. S. v. Wilson, 7 Pet., 150.

Effects.—Subject to exceptions therein provided, a pardon by the President restores to its recipient all rights of property lost by the offense pardoned, unless the property has, by judicial process, become vested in other persons. Osborn v. U. S., 91 U. S., 474; V Opin. Att. Gen., 532.

Power to mitigate and commute.—The President may, by an exercise of the pardoning power, mitigate or commute a punishment imposed by any court of the United States. Ex parte Wells, 18 How., 307; In re Ross, 140 U. S., 453. In mitigating the sentence of a naval court-martial the President may substitute a suspension for a term of years without pay for an absolute dismissal from the service; as suspension is but an inferior degree of the same punishment. I Opin. Att. Gen., 433.

Conditional pardons.—The language of the Constitution is such that the power of the President to pardon conditionally is not one of inference, but is conferred in terms, the language being "to grant reprieves and pardons," which includes absolute as well as conditional pardons. Under this power the President can grant a conditional pardon to a person under sentence of death, offering to commute that punishment into an imprisonment for life. If this is accepted by the convict he has no right to contend that the pardon is absolute and the condition of it void. Ex parte Wells, 18 How., 307; Osborn v. U. S., 91 U. S., 474; U. S. v. Wilson, 7 Pet., 150. When a pardon is granted with conditions annexed the conditions must be performed before the pardon is of any effect. Waring v. U. S., 7 Ct. Cls., 501. One who claims the benefit of a pardon must be held to strict compliance with its conditions. Haym v. U. S., 7 Ct. Cls., 443; Scott v. U. S., 8 ibid., 457. The condition annexed to a pardon must not be impossible, unusual, or illegal; but it may, with the consent of the prisoner, be any punishment recognized by the statutes, or by the common law as enforced by the State. Lee v. Murphy, 22 Grat. (Va.), 789.

Time of exercise.—The President of the United States has the conditional power to pardon as well before trial and conviction as afterwards; but it is a power only to be exercised with reserve and for exceptional considerations. VI Opin. Att. Gen., 20; 1 ibid., 341; 2 ibid., 275; 5 ibid., 687; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall., 333; Dominick v. Davidson, 44 Ga., 457; 5 Blair v. Com., 25 Grat. (Va.), 850. It is competent for the President to grant a pardon after the expiration of the term of sentence, thereby relieving from consequential disabilities. Stetler's Case, 1 Phil., IX, 38; Com. v. Bush, 2 Duv. (Ky.), 264.

Limitation upon the pardoning power.—The Constitution gives to Congress the power to dispose of the public property and to the President only the power to pardon crimes; and the President, having no title to forfeited property, can not restore it, though he may pardon the offense which caused the forfeiture. Property confiscated by judgment to the United States is beyond the reach of executive clemency and is absolutely national property. Knote v. U. S., 10 Ct. Cls., 397, 406; U. S. v. Six Lots of Ground, 1 Woods, 234; Osborn v. U. S., 91 U. S., 474, 477.

Pleading.—A pardon is a deed, to the validity of which delivery is essential, and delivery is not complete without acceptance. * * * The pardon may possibly apply to a different person or to a different crime. It may be absolute or conditional. It may be controverted by the prosecutor and must be expounded by the court. These circumstances combine to show that this, like any other deed, ought to be brought before the court by plea, motion, or otherwise. U. S. v. Wilson, 7 Pet., 150, 161; Ex parte Reno, 66 Mo., 266. The recital of a specific, distinct offense, in a pardon by the President, limits its operation to that offense, and such pardon does not embrace any other offense for which separate penalties and punishments are provided. Ex parte Weimer, 8 Biss., C. Ct., 321. The conviction having been of two offenses, and the pardon reciting only one, the pardon operates upon the offense recited. State v. Foley, 15 Nev., 64.

Officers of the United States.—Any person occupying a position under the Federal Government, conferred upon him by a legally authorized election or appointment, whose duties consist in the exercise of important public powers and trusts, as a part of the regular administration of the Government, such duties being continuing and permanent, not occasional or temporary, and prescribed by the Government or by a on the Vice-President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice-President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected. Constitution, Art. II, sec. 1, par. 6.

Provision for Acting President should vacancy occur in offices of President and Vice-President Jan. 19, 1886, s. 1, v. 24, p. 1.

5. In case of removal, death, resignation, or inability of both the President and Vice-President of the United States, the Secretary of State, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation, or inability, then the Secretary of the Treasury, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation, or inability, then the Secretary of War, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation, or inability, then the Attorney-General, or if there be none, or in case of his superior officer, and whose compensation is paid out of the Treasury, is an officer of the United States. U. S, v. Hartwell, 6 Wallace, 385; U. S. v. Germaine, 99 U. S., 508; U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock., 103. Unless one in the service of the United States holds his office by virtue of an appointment made by one of the courts of justice or heads of departments authorized by law to make such appointment, he is not, strictly speaking, an officer of the United States. U. S. v. Mouat, 124 U. S., 303; U. S. v. Hendee, 124 U. S., 309; U. S. v. Smith, 124 U. S., 525. Noncommissioned officers are not officers in the sense in which the latter term is generally used. Babbitt v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 202.

Appointments to office.—Appointments provided for by act of Congress, merely in general terms, must be made by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. VI Opin. Att. Gen., 1. When a person has been nominated to an office by the President, confirmed by the Senate, and his commission has been signed by the President, and the seal of the United States affixed thereto, his appointment to that office is complete. Congress may provide * * * that certain acts shall be done by the appointee before he shall enter on the possession of the office under the appointment. These acts then become conditions precedent to the complete investiture of the office; but they are to be performed by the appointee, not by the Executive; all that the Executive can do to invest the person with his office has been completed when the commission has been signed and sealed, and when the person has performed the required condition, his title to enter on the possession of the office is also complete. U. S. v. Le Baron, 19 How., 73, 78; U. S. v. Stewart, ibid., 79; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137.

Powers of officers.—All the officers of the Government, from the highest to the lowest, are but agents with delegated powers, and if they act beyond the scope of their delegated powers their acts do not bind the principal. U. S. v. Maxwell Grant, 21 Fed. Rep., 19. An officer can only bind the Government by acts which come within a just exercise of his official power. Hunter v. U. S., 5 Pet., 173, 178; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall., 666; State v. Hastings, 12 Wis., 596. It is a question of law for the court whether an act is a part of the official duty of a public officer. U. S. v. Buchanan, 8 How., 83. Every public officer is required to perform all duties which are strictly official, although they may be required by laws passed after he comes into office, and may be cumulative upon his original duties, and although his compensation therefor be wholly inadequate. In such case he must look to the bounty of Congress for any additional reward. Andrews v. U. S., 2 Story, 202. An officer is bound to use that care and diligence in the discharge of his duties that a conscientious and prudent man, acting under a just sense of his obligations, would exercise under the circumstances of a particular case, and if he fails and neglects to do so he is culpable. U. S. v. Baldridge, 11 Fed. Rep., 552.

Presumptions as to official acts.—The acts of an officer to whom a public duty is assigned, within the sphere of that duty, are prima facie within his power. U. S. v. Arredondo, 6 Pet., 691; U. S. v. Clarke, 8 ibid., 436, 452; Percheman v. U. S., 7 ibid., 51; Delassus v. U. S.; 9 ibid., 117, 134; Strother v. Lucas, 12 ibid., 410, 438; U. S. v. removal, death, resignation, or inability, then the Postmaster-General, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation, or inability, then the Secretary of the Navy, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation, or inability, then the Secretary of the Interior, shall act as President until the disability of the President or Vice-President is removed or a President shall be elected: Provided, That whenever the powers and duties Proviso. of the office of President of the United States shall devolve upon any of the persons named herein, if Congress be not then in session, or if it would not meet in accordance with law within twenty days thereafter, it shall be the duty of the person upon whom said powers and duties shall devolve to issue a proclamation convening Congress in extraordinary session, giving twenty days' notice of the time of meeting. Act of January 19, 1886, 24 Stat. L., 1.

Peralta, 19 How., 343, 347. When a particular functionary is clothed with the duty of deciding a certain question of fact, his decision, in the absence of fraud, is conclusive. Logan v. The County, 16 Wall., 6. He who alleges that an officer intrusted with important duty has violated his instructions must show it. The courts ought to require very full proof that an officer has transcended his powers before they so determine. U. S. v. Peralta, 19 How., 343, 347; Delassus v. U. S., 9 Pet., 117, 134. When a public officer is to do any act on proof of certain facts, of the competency and sufficiency of which he is to judge, it is to be presumed, from the doing of the act, that the proof was regularly and satisfactorily made, and its sufficiency is not subject to reexamination. Phil. and Tren. R. R. Co. v. Stimpson, 14 Pet., 448.

Tenure.—The power to appoint includes the power to remove, when the Constitution has not otherwise provided, and when the laws of Congress have not fixed a tenure of office. Ex parte Hennen, 13 Pet., 230; Parsons v. U. S., 167 U. S., 324; U. S. v. Avery, Deady, 204. When Congress, by law, vests the appointment of inferior officers in the heads of Departments, it may limit and restrict the power of removal as it deems best for the public interests. U. S. v. Perkins, 116 U. S., 483.

Resignation.—That a public office may be vacated by resignation is established by long and familiar practice, and is recognized by express provision of law. Nor can there be any doubt that a resignation may be effected by the concurrence of the officer and the appointing power; its essential elements are an intent to resign on the one side and an acceptance on the other. It may be either in writing or by parol, expressly or by implication. To perfect a resignation nothing more is necessary than that the proper authority manifest in some way its acceptance of the offer to resign. It then becomes effectual, and operates to relieve the incumbent either immediately or on the day specially fixed according to its terms. An offer to resign is revocable prior to acceptance; after acceptance and before it has taken effect it may be modified, or withdrawn by consent of both parties, but this control extends no further. When a resignation once takes effect the official relations of the incumbent are ipso facto dissolved; he has no longer any right to, or hold upon, the office. XIV Opin. Att. Gen., 259.

Removal.—In the absence of all constitutional provision or statutory regulation, it would seem to be a sound and necessary rule to consider the power of removal as incident to the power of appointment. In re Hennen, 13 Pet., 230, 259. It was the purpose of Congress, in the repeal of the tenure of office sections of the Revised Statutes (secs. 1767–1775, Rev. Stat., repealed by act of March 3, 1887, 24 Stat. L., 500), to again concede to the President the power of removal, if taken from him by the original tenure of office act, and, by reason of the repeal, to thereby enable him to remove an officer when in his discretion he regards it for the public good, although the term of office may have been limited by the words of the statute creating the office. Parsons v. U. S., 167 U. S., 324. See, also, ninety-ninth article of war, secs. 1230, 1228, Rev. Stat., and articles 36 and 37 of articles for the government of the Navy; VI Opin. Att. Gen., 4; XII, ibid, 421; XV, ibid, 421; IV, Compt. Dec., 58, 466, 601, and Blake v. U. S., 103 U. S., 227.

Eligibility.
Sec. 2, ibid.

6. The preceding section shall only be held to describe and apply to such officers as shall have been appointed by the advice and consent of the Senate to the offices therein named, and such as are eligible to the office of President under the Constitution, and not under impeachment by the House of Representatives of the United States at the time the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon them respectively.[1] Section 2, ibid.

Treatymaking power.

Appointing power.

7. He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of Departments.[2] Constitution, Art. II, sec. 2, par. 2.

8. The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen duing the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session. Ibid., par. 3.

Recess appointments.

Mar. 2, 1867, s. 3, v. 14, p. 430.
Apr. 5, 1869, s. 3, v. 16, p. 7.

9. The President is authorized to fill all vacancies which may happen during the recess of the Senate by reason of death, or resignation, or expiration of term of office, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session thereafter, and if no appointment, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, is made to an office so vacant or temporarily filled during such next session of the Senate, the office shall remain in abeyance, without any salary, fees, or emoluments attached thereto, until it is filled by appointment thereto by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and during such time all the powers and duties belonging to such office shall be exercised by such other officer as may by law exercise such powers and duties in case of a vacancy in such office.[1]

[1] Sections 146, 147, 148, and 149 of the Revised Statutes were repealed by the act of January 19, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 1).

[2] Public office.—An office is a public station, or employment, conferred by the appointment of Government. The term embraces the ideas of tenure, emolument, and duties. * * * The duties are continuing and permanent, not occasional and transitory, and are defined by rules prescribed by Government and not by contract. * * * A Government office is different from a Government contract. The latter, from its nature, is necessarily limited in its duration and specific in its objects. The terms agreed upon define the rights and obligations of both parties, and neither may depart from them without the assent of the other. U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall., 385, 394; U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brockenbrough, 103. A public officer is the incumbent of an office "who exercises continuously, and as a part of the regular and permanent administration of the Government, its public powers, trusts, and duties." Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall., 93, 96. Unless a person in the service of the Government holds his place by virtue of an appointment by the President, or of one of the courts of justice or heads of Departments authorized by law to make such an appointment, he is not, strictly speaking, an officer of the United States. Sec. 1774, R. S.

11. Whenever the President, without the advice and consent of the Senate, designates, authorizes, or employs any person to perform the duties of any office, he shall forthwith notify the Secretary of the Treasury thereof, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon communicate such notice to all the proper accounting and disbursing officers of his Department. The Secretary of the Senate shall, at the close of each session thereof, deliver to the Secretary of the Treasury, and to each of the Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury, and to each of the Auditors, and to each of the Comptrollers in the Treasury, and to the Treasurer, and to the Register of the Treasury, a full and complete list, duly certified, of all the persons who have been nominated to and rejected by the Senate during such session, and a like list of all the offices to which nominations have been made and not confirmed and filled at such session.

Notification of nominations, rejections, etc., to Secretary of Treasury.

[1] Sections 177 and 178. Revised Statutes: paragraphs 13 and 14, ante.

[2] The President speaks and acts through the heads of the several Executive Departments in relation to subjects which appertain to their respective duties. Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet., 498, 513; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S., 755. It is the general theory of departmental administration that the heads of the Executive Departments are the executors of the will of the President. X Opin. Att. Gen., 527. As a general rule the direction of the President is to be presumed in all instructions and orders issuing from the competent Department. VII id., 453. Official instructions issued by the heads of the several Executive Departments, civil and military, within their respective jurisdictions, are valid and lawful, without containing express reference to the direction of the President. VII id., 453. The duties of the heads of the several Executive Departments are derived, in part, from the Constitution, and are, in part, imposed by statute. In the execution of the former they act as the representatives of the President, to whom they are responsible for their correct performance. For duties imposed by statute their responsibility is to the legislature, and they are controlled in all matters relating to performance by such statutory rules and regulations as Congress may see fit to impose. (See Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cr., 137, and par. 1, note 1.)

The executive power is vested in a President, and so far as his powers are derived from the Constitution he is beyond the reach of any other Department, except in the mode prescribed by the Constitution through the impeaching power, but it by no means follows that every officer in every branch of that Department is under the exclusive direction of the President. * * * There are certain political duties imposed upon many officers in the Executive Department the discharge of which is under the direction of the President, but it would be an alarming doctrine that Congress can not impose upon any executive officer any duty they may think proper, which is not repugnant to any rights secured and protected by the Constitution, and in such cases the duty and responsibility grow out of and are subject to the control of the law and not to the direction of the President, and this is emphatically the case where the duty is of a ministerial character. Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet., 524, 610. See, also, the title Army Regulations in the chapter entitled THE REVISED STATUTES; THE STATUTES AT LARGE; THE ARMY REGULATIONS.

Ministerial and discretionary duties.—The duties performed by the heads of the several Executive Departments are either ministerial or discretionary or quasi judicial in character. "The question whether the legality of an act of the head of a Department be examinable in a court of justice or not must always depend on the nature of the act. By the Constitution of the United States the President is invested with certain important political powers in the exercise of which he is to use his own discretion, and is accountable only to his country in his political character and to his own conscience. To aid him in the performance of these duties he is authorized to appoint certain officers, who act by his authority and in conformity to his orders. In such cases their acts are his acts, and, whatever opinion may be entertained of the manner in which Executive discretion may be used, still there exists and can exist no power to control their discretion. The subjects are political. They respect the nation, not individual rights, and being intrusted to the Executive, the decision of the Executive is conclusive. * * * The conclusion is that where the heads of Departments are the political or confidential agents of the Executive, merely to execute the will of the President, nothing can be more perfectly clear than that their acts are only politically examinable. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cr., 137, 166; Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet., 524, 611; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet., 497, 515. We are not aware of any case in England or this country in which it has been held that a public officer, acting to the best of his judgment and from a sense of duty, in a matter of account with an individual, has been held liable for an error of judgment. * * * A public officer is not liable to an action if he falls into error in a case where the act to be done is not merely a ministerial one but is one in relation to which it is his duty to exercise judgment and discretion, even though an individual may suffer by his mistake. A contrary principle would indeed be pregnant with the greatest mischiefs. Kendall v. Stokes, 3 How., 87, 98; Gould v. Hammond, 1 McAll., 235, 243; Noble v. Union River Logging Co., 147 U. S., 165, 171.

A ministerial duty the performance of which may in proper cases be required of the head of a Department by judicial process is one in respect to which nothing is left to discretion. It is a simple, definite duty, arising under conditions admitted or proved to exist and imposed by law. Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall., 475, 498; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cr., 137; Kendall v. Stockton, 12 Pet., 524. As a mandamus can only be granted because there is no other adequate remedy at law, an action for damages can not be afterwards sustained for the same cause of action, the two being inconsistent. Kendall v. Stokes, 3 How., 87, 102.

Liability for damages.—The executive officers of the United States are personally liable at law for damages, in the ordinary forms of action, for illegal official or ministerial acts or omissions to the injury of an individual. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cr., 137, 166; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall., 347; Amy v. The Supervisors, 11 Wall., 136, 137, 166. Where a ministerial officer acts in good faith he is not liable in exemplary damages for an injury done, but he can claim no further exemption where his acts are clearly against the law. Tracy v. Swartwout, 10 Pet., 80.

Measure of damages.—Where the law requires absolutely a ministerial act to be done by a public officer, and he neglects or refuses to do such act, he may be compelled to respond in damages to the extent of the injury arising from his conduct. A mistake as to his duty and honest intentions will not excuse the offender. Amy v. The Supervisors, 11 Wall., 136. Where an action is brought for an injury done in the discharge of an official duty, the damages are measured generally by the extent of that injury. Bispham v. Taylor, 2 McLean, 408. Pierce v. Strickland, 2 Story, 292. For general provisions respecting public officer, see Chapter IV and par. 4, ante.

Aug. 26, 1842, c. 202, s. 13, v. 5, p. 525.
Sec. 174, R. S.

22. Each chief clerk shall take care, from time to time, that the duties of the other clerks are distributed with equality and uniformity, according to the nature of the case. He shall revise such distribution from time to time, for the purpose of correcting any tendency to undue accumulation or reduction of duties, whether arising from individual negligence or incapacity, or from increase or diminution of particular kinds of business. And he shall report monthly to his superior officer any existing defect that he may be aware of in the arrangement or dispatch of business.

Duty of chief on receipt of report.
Aug. 26, 1842, c. 202, s. 13, v. 5, p. 525.
Sec. 175, R. S.

23. Each head of a Department, chief of a Bureau, or other superior officer, shall, upon receiving each monthly report of his chief clerk, rendered pursuant to the preceding section, examine the facts stated therein, and take such measures, in the exercise of the powers conferred upon him by law, as may be necessary and proper to amend any existing defects in the arrangement or dispatch of business disclosed by such report.

Disbursing clerks.
Mar. 3, 1853, c. 97, s. 3, v. 10, pp. 209, 211; Mar. 3, 1855, c. 175, s. 4, v. 10, p. 669; Mar. 3, 1873, c. 226, s. 1, v. 17, p. 485 (492).
Sec. 176, R. S.

24. The disbursing clerks authorized by law in the several Departments shall be appointed by the heads of the respective Departments, from clerks of the fourth class; and shall each give a bond to the United States for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office according to law in such amount as shall be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and with sureties to the satisfaction of the Solicitor of the Treasury; and shall from time to time renew, strengthen, and increase his official bond, as the Secretary of the Treasury may direct. Each disbursing clerk, except the disbursing clerk of the Treasury Department, must, when directed so to do by the head of the Department, superintend the building occupied by his Department. Each disbursing clerk is entitled to receive, in compensation for his services in disbursing, such sum in addition to his salary as a clerk of the fourth class as shall make his whole annual compensation two thousand dollars a year.

Compensation.

[1] The annual acts of appropriation since that of June 15, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 237), have contained provisions fixing the salaries of laborers and watchmen in the Executive Departments at $660 and of charwomen at $240. See section 2, act of April 17, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 133); see also Garlinger v. U. S., 30 Ct. Cls., p. 208, and Gordon v. U. S., 31 ibid., 254.

[2] Section 4 of the act of April 17, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 134), contains the requirement that "the appropriations herein made for the officers, clerks, and persons employed in the public service shall not be available for the compensation of persons permanently incapacitated for performing such service."

The act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 597), contained the requirement that "hereafter no allowance or compensation for clerks or secretaries of officials of the United States retired from active service shall be authorized."

[3] Under the above provision it is discretionary with the heads of the several Executive Departments to grant or refuse leave of absence, and their acts can not be reviewed. Absence without leave is absence without pay; absence with leave is subject to such conditions and limitations as may be imposed. Hurlbut v. U. S., 30 Ct. Cls., 166.

where a clerk or employee is personally ill, and where to limit the annual leave to thirty days in any one calendar year would work peculiar hardship, it may be extended, in the discretion of the head of the Department, with pay, not exceeding thirty days in any one case or in any one calendar year.

This section shall not be construed to mean that so long as a clerk or employee is borne upon the rolls of the Department in excess of the time herein provided for or granted that he or she shall be entitled to pay during the period of such excessive absence, but that the pay shall stop upon the expiration of the granted leave.[1] *Sec. 7, act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. HOURS OF LABOR IN THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

Hours of labor
Mar. 15, 1898, s. 17, v. 30, p. 316.

52. Hereafter it shall be the duty of the heads of the several Executive Departments, in the interest of the public service, to require of all clerks and other employees, of whatever grade or class, in their respective Departments, not less than seven hours of labor each day, except Sundays and days declared public holidays by law or Executive order: Provided, That the heads of the Departments may, by special order, stating the reason, further extend the hours of any clerk or employee in their Departments, respectively; but in case of an extension it shall be without additional compensation.[1] Section 7, act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 316).

Monthly reports.
Extension of hours of labor.
Ibid.

53. Hereafter it shall be the duty of the head of each Executive Department to require monthly reports to be made to him as to the condition of the public business in the several bureaus or offices of his Department at Washington; and in each case where such reports disclose that the public business is in arrears, the head of the Department in which such arrears exist shall require, as provided herein, an extension of the hours of service to such clerks or employees as may be necessary to bring up such arrears of public business.[2] Ibid.

Sec. 3683, R. S.

54. No part of the contingent fund appropriated to any Department, bureau, or office, shall be applied to the purchase of any articles except such as the head of the Department shall deem necessary and proper to carry on the business of the Department, bureau, or office, and shall, by written order, direct to be procured.[1]

[1] This section operates to repeal section 162, Revised Statutes, in respect to the hours of business in the several Executive Departments. It replaces section 4 of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 563), in relation to the same subject. This requirement has been held by the Comptroller of the Treasury not to apply to laborers and mechanics whose compensation is not fixed by law or regulations. IV Compt. Dec., 578; see, also, Hurlburt v. U. S., 30 Ct. Cls., 16.

[2] For quarterly reports of the condition of business in the several Executive Departments see paragraph 88, post; see, also, paragraph 22, ante. The above enactment replaces section 4 of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 531), and section 5 of the act of March 3, 1893 (27 ibid., 675), in pari materia.

55. No moneys appropriated for contingent, incidental, or miscellaneous purposes shall be expended or paid for official or clerical compensation.[2]

Not to be expended for services. July 12, 1870, s. 3, v. 16, p. 250. Sec. 3682, R. S.

56. The amount expended in any one year for newspapers, for any Department, except the Department of State, including all the bureaus and offices connected therewith, shall not exceed one hundred dollars. And all newspapers purchased with the public money for the use of either of the Departments must be preserved as files for such Department.

Expenditure for newspapers. Aug. 26, 1842, c. 202, s. 16, v. 5, p. 526. Sec. 192, R. S.

57. No executive officer, other than the heads of Departments, shall apply more than thirty dollars, annually, out of the contingent fund under his control, to pay for newspapers, pamphlets, periodicals, or other books or prints not necessary for the business of his office.

The same. Mar. 3, 1839, s. 3, v. 5, p. 349. Sec. 1779, R. S.

58. Hereafter law books, books of reference, and periodicals for use of any Executive Department, or other Government establishment not under an Executive Department, at the seat of Government, shall not be purchased or paid for from any appropriation made for contingent expenses[3] or for any specific or general purpose unless such purchase is authorized and payment therefor specifically provided in the law granting the appropriation. Section 3, act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 316).

Law books, books of reference, etc. Mar. 15, 1898, s. 3, v. 30, p. 316.

[1] Section 3683, Revised Statutes, requires that the written order therein mentioned shall be given by the head of the Department before the articles to be paid for from the contingent fund are procured, and a subsequent approval is not sufficient. II Compt. Dec., 1. This section applies only to cases where an appropriation is made in a lump sum for "contingent, incidental, or miscellaneous expenses," or under similar words, and where Congress has specifically designated appropriations for enumerated items as being for "contingent, incidental, or miscellaneous expenses." Ibid., 42. When an item is properly payable from an appropriation for contingent expenses, the discretion of the officer charged with the duty of expending said fund is not subject to review by the accounting officers upon any question as to the necessity or advisability of his expenditures. Ibid., 80. XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 424.

[2] Section 3682, Revised Statutes, prohibits, absolutely, the use for official or clerical compensation of any money appropriated for contingent, incidental, or miscellaneous purposes. I Compt. Dec., 392; ibid., 410.

[3] The words "contingent expenses," as employed in acts making appropriations, mean such incidental, casual, and unforeseen expenses as are necessary and appropriate to the execution of duties required by law in connection with the object for which the appropriation is made. IV Compt. Dec., 287. There is no discretion conferred upon heads of Departments to use such appropriations for other purposes. Ibid., 287.

The provisions in the act of March 15, 1898, that "hereafter law books, books of reference, and periodicals for the use of any Executive Department, or other Government establishment not under an Executive Department, at the seat of Government, shall not be purchased or paid for from any appropriation made for contingent expenses or for any specific or general purpose, unless such purchase is authorized and payment therefor specifically provided in the law granting the appropriation" does not apply to those branches of the public service located outside of Washington, nor to the Army, which is not a part of the War Department proper. Ibid., 551.

A newspaper is not a periodical within the meaning of the requirement above set forth in the act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 316). Ibid., 694.

Annual report of expenditure of contingent funds.
Aug. 26, 1842, c. 202, s. 20, v. 5, p. 527.
Sec. 193, R. S.

59. The head of each Department shall make an annual report to Congress, giving a detailed statement of the manner in which the contingent fund for his Department, and for the bureaus and offices therein, has been expended, giving the names of every person to whom any portion thereof has been paid; and if for anything furnished, the quantity and price; and if for any service rendered, the nature of such service, and the time employed, and the particular occasion or cause, in brief, that rendered such service necessary; and the amount of all former appropriations in each case on hand, either in the Treasury or in the hands of any disbursing officer or agent. And he shall require of the disbursing officers, acting under his direction and authority, the return of precise and analytical statements and receipts of all the moneys which may have been from time to time during the next preceding year expended by them, and shall communicate the results of such returns and the sums total, annually, to Congress.

When submitted.
Mar. 3, 1877, v. 19, p. 294.

60. Hereafter a detailed statement of the expenditure for the preceding year of all sums appropriated for contingent expenses of the independent treasury, or in any Department or bureau of the Government, shall be presented to Congress at the beginning of each regular session. Act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 294).

REQUISITIONS FOR FUNDS—WARRANTS—ADVANCES.

Requisitions for advances of funds.

61. Every requisition for an advance of money,[1] before being acted on by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be sent to the proper Auditor for action thereon as required by section twelve of this act.[2]

Warrants.
July 31, 1894, s. 11, v. 28, p. 209.

All warrants, when authorized by law and signed by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be countersigned by the Comptroller of the Treasury, and all warrants for the payment of money shall be accompanied either by the Auditor's certificate, mentioned in section seven of this act,[3] or by the requisition for advance of money, which certificate or requisition shall specify the particular appropriation to which the same should be charged, instead of being specified on the warrant, as now provided by section thirty-six hundred and seventy-five of the Revised Statutes; and shall also go with the warrant to the Treasurer, who shall return the certificate or requisition to the proper Auditor, with the date and amount of the draft issued indorsed thereon. Requisitions for the payment of money on all audited accounts, or for covering money into the Treasury, shall not hereafter be required. And requisitions for advances of money shall not be countersigned by the Comptroller of the Treasury. Sec. 11, act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 209).

[1] Section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 207), has no application to questions respecting the advance of funds which, under this section, are subject to the decision of the Auditor, with a review by the Secretary of the Treasury. 1 Compt. Dec., 409.

Whenever any estimate submitted to Congress by the head of a Department asks an appropriation for any new specific expenditure, such as the erection of a public building, or the construction of any public work, requiring a plan before the building or work can be properly completed, such estimate shall be accompanied by full plans and detailed estimates of the cost of the whole work. All subsequent estimates for any such work shall state the original estimated cost, the aggregate amount theretofore appropriated for the same, and the amount actually expended thereupon, as well as the amount asked for the current year for which such estimate is made. And if the amount asked is in excess of the original estimate, the full reasons for the excess and the extent of the anticipated excess shall be also stated.

[1] A statute which fixes the annual salary of a public officer at a designated sum, without limitation as to time, is not abrogated by subsequent enactments appropriating a less amount for his services for a particular fiscal year, but containing no words which expressly or impliedly repeal it. U. S. v. Langston, 118 U. S., 389. It is otherwise, however, when the sum appropriated is "in full compensation" for the salary of a particular officer, in which case the earlier act is suspended for the time covered by the appropriation. U. S. v. Fisher, 109 U. S., 143; U. S. v. Mitchell, ibid., 146. A salary that is established by statute can not be increased nor diminished by executive officers. It is not a subject of contract between such officers. The incumbent of an office is entitled to the salary attached thereto by law, and, if he receives a less sum from disbursing officers, he can claim and receive the balance. Dyer v. U. S., 20 Ct. Cls., 166, 171; Adams v. U. S., ibid., 115. Such recovery may be had though, by the terms of his appointment, he was to receive less and though he may have been compelled to execute a receipt in full therefor. Ibid.

It is not within the power of the head of an Executive Department to reduce or change the salary of an officer which Congress has specifically prescribed; and an agreement to that effect, being contrary to public policy, will not be enforced or given effect as an estoppel. Miller v. U. S., 103, Fed. Rep., 413. But, for express authority to reduce the salaries of clerks, see section 3, act of August 15, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 169), paragraph 36 ante.

[1] Section 7, of the act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 808), paragraph 77 ante, requires reports to be submitted to Congress as to the condition of business in the several Executive Departments, of any arrears that may exist, with the reasons therefor, and a statement of detailed employees.

[2] The word "supplies," as used in section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, evidently has reference to those things which the well-known needs of the public service will from time to time require in its different branches for its successful and efficient administration, and the statute was intended to afford the Government the pecuniary benefits, as well as the protection against fraud and favoritism, which open and honest competition is always likely to secure. It could not have been in the mind of the lawmaking power to require that purchases could only be made after advertisement of small articles which may occasionally be needed, and where in many cases the cost of advertising itself would exceed the value of the article purchased. It can not be said that such cases are governed by the emergency provision in the statute, for there may be, and are, many instances where the officer could not truthfully certify that immediate delivery was necessary. (3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., p. 288.)

The act of March 2, 1861 (sec. 3709, R. S.), while requiring such advertisement, as the general rule invests the officer charged with the duty of procuring supplies or services with a discretion to dispense with advertising, if the exigencies of the public service require immediate delivery or performance. It is too well settled to admit of dispute at this day that, where there is a discretion of this kind conferred on an officer or board of officers, and a contract is made in which they have exercised that discretion, the validity of the contract can not be made to depend on the degree of wisdom or skill which may have accompanied its exercise. U. S. v. Speed, 8 Wall., 77, 83; Childs v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 176; Mason v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 495; Wentworth v. U. S., 5 Ct. Cls., 302. See, also, III Compt. Dec., 175, 314, 470; II ibid., 373, 632.

Section 3709, Revised Statutes, provides, generally, that the making of public contracts for supplies, etc., shall be preceded by an advertising for proposals "when the public exigencies do not require the immediate delivery of the articles or performance of the service." Exigencies growing out of a state of war, or hostilities with Indians, were probably mainly had in view, and it is exigencies of this class which have been considered in the adjudged cases in the Supreme Court and Court of Claims. (a) It is clear, however, that other exigencies may exist requiring that contracts or purchases be made at once or without the delay incident to advertising for proposals. Thus a loss of stores, structures, etc., on hand, caused by an actus Dei or vis major, as fire, storm, freshet, or a sudden riot or violent disorder; or a loss of supplies occasioned by the neglect of military subordinates in charge; or a failure of a contractor to fulfill a contract for supplies, transportation, or other service, might properly be regarded as constituting an "exigency" under the statute, if of such magnitude or injurious consequence to the Army as to necessitate an immediate making good of the deficiency. (b) The general rule, however, of the statute, in requiring a notice and invitation to the public as a preliminary to the awarding of a contract, is founded upon a sound and well-considered public policy, and exceptions thereto, especially in time of peace, should be recognized as admissible only where, if the rule were strictly complied with, the public interests would manifestly be most seriously prejudiced. (c)

[c] As to the authority who is to decide whether there exists such an exigency as is contemplated by the statute, the Supreme Court, in the United States v. Speed, 8 Wallace, 83, has held that it is "the officer charged with the duty of procuring supplies or services who is invested with this discretion." This description is rather general, nor is the term "the purchasing officer," by which the Court of Claims explains it, in Thompson v. United States, 9 Ct. Cls., 196, a much more precise definition. It is clear, however, that a subordinate officer charged with the duty of being the immediate representative of the United States in a contract or purchase should not, in general, venture to dispense with advertising, on the theory of the existence of a public exigency, in the absence of instructions or orders from a proper superior. Nor, on the other hand, will a superior officer, in entering into a contract for his command or branch of the service, properly assume that an "exigency" exists authorizing him to dispense with the statutory forms, when the period is time of peace and no imperative necessity exists for the immediate delivery of the supplies or performance of the service proposed to be contracted for. It is to be noted that the cases both of Speed and Thompson related to contracts entered into during the late war. In the instructive opinions of the Attorney-General on the "Fifteen per cent contracts," of April 27 and May 3, 1877 (XV Opins., 235, 253), it is held that the "exigency" contemplated by the statute can be one of time only, and that it can be regarded as existing only where an immediate delivery or performance is required by a public necessity.

PROSECUTION OF CLAIMS.

110. Subpœnas to witnesses.
111, 112. Witnesses' fees; testimony.
113. Professional assistance, how obtained.
114. Evidence to be furnished by Departments.
115. Employment of attorneys and counsel.
116. Persons formerly in Departments not to prosecute claims.

Subpœnas to witnesses.
Feb. 14, 1871, c. 51, s. 1, v. 16, p. 412.
Sec. 184, R. S.

110. Any head of a Department or Bureau in which a claim against the United States is properly pending may apply to any judge or clerk of any court of the United States, in any State, District, or Territory, to issue a subpœna for a witness being within the jurisdiction of such court, to appear at a time and place in the subpœna stated, before any officer authorized to take depositions to be used in the courts of the United States, there to give full and true answers to such written interrogatories and cross-interrogatories as may be submitted with the application, or to be orally examined and cross-examined upon the subject of such claim.

Witnesses' fees.
Feb. 14, 1871, c. 51, s. 1, v. 16, p. 412.

Sec. 186, R. S.

112. If any witness, after being duly served with such subpœna, neglects or refuses to appear, or, appearing, refuses to testify, the judge of the district in which the subpœna issued may proceed, upon proper process, to enforce obedience to the subpœna, or to punish the disobedience, in like manner as any court of the United States may do in case of process of subpœna ad testificandum issued by such court.

Professional assistance; how obtained.
Feb. 14, 1871, c. 51, s. 3, v. 16, p. 412.
Sec. 187, R. S.

113. Whenever any head of a Department or Bureau having made application pursuant to section one hundred and eighty-four, for a subpœna to procure the attendance of a witness to be examined, is of opinion that the interests of the United States require the attendance of counsel at the examination, or require legal investigation of any claim pending in his Department or Bureau, he shall give notice thereof to the Attorney-General, and of all facts necessary to enable the Attorney-General to furnish proper professional service in attending such examination, or making such investigation, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General to provide for such service.

Evidence to be furnished by the Departments in suits pending in the Court of Claims.

114. In all suits brought against the United States in the Court of Claims founded upon any contract, agreement, or transaction with any Department, or any Bureau, officer, June 25, 1868, c. 71, s. 6, v. 15, p. 76. Sec. 188, R. S.

or agent of a Department, or where the matter or thing on which the claim is based has been passed upon and decided by any Department, Bureau, or officer authorized to adjust it, the Attorney-General shall transmit to such Department, Bureau, or officer, a printed copy of the petition filed by the claimant, with a request that the Department, Bureau, or officer, shall furnish to the Attorney-General all facts, circumstances, and evidence touching the claim in the possession or knowledge of the Department, Bureau, or officer. Such Department, Bureau, or officer shall, without delay, and within a reasonable time, furnish the Attorney-General with a full statement, in writing, of all such facts, information, and proofs. The statement shall contain a reference to or description of all such official documents or papers, if any, as may furnish proof of facts referred to in it, or may be necessary and proper for the defense of the United States against the claim, mentioning the Department, office, or place where the same is kept or may be procured. If the claim has been passed upon and decided by the Department, Bureau, or officer, the statement shall succinctly state the reasons and principles upon which such decision was based. In all cases where such decision was founded upon any act of Congress, or upon any section or clause of such act, the same shall be cited specifically; and if any previous interpretation or construction has been given to such act, section, or clause by the Department, Bureau, or officer, the same shall be set forth succinctly in the statement, and a copy of the opinion filed, if any, shall be annexed to it. Where any decision in the case has been based upon any regulation of a Department, or where such regulation has, in the opinion of the Department, Bureau, or officer transmitting such statement, any bearing upon the claim in suit, the same shall be distinctly quoted at length in the statement. But where more than one case, or a class of cases, is pending, the defense to which rests upon the same facts, circumstances, and proofs, the Department, Bureau, or officer shall only be required to certify and transmit one statement of the same, and such statement shall be held to apply to all such cases, as if made out, certified, and transmitted in each case respectively.[1]

Employment of attorneys or counsel.

115. No head of a Department shall employ attorneys or counsel at the expense of the United States; but when in Duties.

[1] The Department of War and the office of Secretary of War were created by the act of August 7, 1789 (1 Stat. L., 49). The Secretary of War succeeded to the office and functions of the Secretary at War, whose powers and duties were defined in an ordinance of Congress dated January 27, 1785 (1 Stat. L., 49, note b). The office of Secretary of War included that of Secretary of the Navy until April 30, 1798, when the Department of the Navy was established, and so much of the act of August 7, 1789, as imposed duties upon the Secretary of War in connection therewith was repealed (1 Stat. L., 553). For statutory provisions respecting a temporary vacancy in the office of Secretary of War see paragraphs 7 to 14, ante.

[2] The act of August 5, 1882, authorizing the appointment of an Assistant Secretary of War was repealed by the act of July 7, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 331), the power conferred by the act of August 5, 1882, never having been exercised. In the case of Ryan v. U. S., 136 U. S., 18, 80, it was held that the authority vested in the Secretary of War could in his absence be exercised by the officer who under the law became for the time acting Secretary of War.

PERFORMANCE OF DUTIES IN ABSENCE OR ILLNESS OF SECRETARY OF WAR.

Par.
119. General Commanding the Army, etc., may be designated.
120. Chief clerk may sign requisitions, etc., during illness or absence of Secretary.
121. Absence of head of bureau.

Commanding General of the Army, etc., may be designated by President to perform duties of Secretary of War.
Aug. 5, 1882, v. 22, p. 238.

119. The President may authorize and direct the Commanding General of the Army or the chief of any military bureau of the War Department to perform the duties of the Secretary of War under the provisions of section one hundred and seventy-nine of the Revised Statutes, and section twelve hundred and twenty-two of the Revised Statutes shall not be held or taken to apply to the officer so designated by reason of his temporarily performing such duties. Act of August 5, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 238).

120. When, from illness or other cause, the Secretary of War is temporarily absent from the War Department, he may authorize the chief clerk of the Department to sign requisitions upon the Treasury Department, and other papers requiring the signature of said Secretary; the same, when signed by the chief clerk during such temporary absence, to be of the same force and effect as if signed by the Secretary of War himself.[1] Act of March 4, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 19).

Designation of officer to act as chief of bureau.
Feb. 25, 1877, v. 19, p. 242.
Sec. 1132, R. S.

121. During the absence of the Quartermaster-General, or the chief of any military bureau of the War Department, the President is authorized to empower some officer of the department or corps whose chief is absent to take charge thereof, and to perform the duties of Quartermaster-General, or chief of department or corps, as the case may be, during such absence.[2] Act of February 25, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 242).

[2] This section contains the substance of section 5 of the act of July 4, 1836 (5 Stat. L., 117), which was passed in order to enable Q. M. Gen. Thos. S. Jesup to exercise command of the troops engaged in the prosecution of the Florida war. General Jesup served under this assignment from May 19, 1836, to July 7, 1838, when he resumed the performance of his duties as Quartermaster-General in the War Department.

DUTIES OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR.

Par.
122. Management of military affairs.
123. Custody of records.
124. Collection of flags, etc.
125. Designation and purchase of supplies.
126. Transportation of troops.
127. Construction and operation of telegraph lines.
128. Administration of oaths in investigations.

122. The Secretary of War shall perform such duties as shall from time to time be enjoined on or intrusted to him by the President relative to military commissions, the military forces, the warlike stores of the United States, or to other matters respecting military affairs; and he shall conduct the business of the Department in such manner as the President shall direct.[3] (See secs. 3660–3665, 3669, R. S.)

[3] The Secretary of War is the regular constitutional organ of the President for the administration of the military establishment of the nation; and rules and orders publicly promulgated through him must be received as the acts of the Executive and, as such, be binding upon all within the sphere of his legal and constitutional authority. Such regulations can not be questioned or defied because they may be thought unwise or mistaken. The right of so considering and treating the authority of the Executive, vested as it is with the command of the military and naval forces, could not be intrusted to officers of any grade inferior to the Commander in Chief; its consequence, if tolerated, would be a complete disorganization of both the Army and Navy. U. S. v. Eliason, 16 Pet., 291, 302; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet., 498, 513; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S., 755; Runkle v. U. S., 122 U. S., 543, 557; U. S. v. Adams, 7 Wall., 463. The Secretary of War is not required to perform duties in the field. He does not compose any part of the Army, and has no service to perform that may not be done at the seat of government. 1 Opin. Att. Gen., 457; U. S. v. Burns, 12 Wall., 246; see also note 2 to par. 5, and the title Bridges over the navigable waters of the United States, in the chapter entitled THE CORPS OF ENGINEERS.

Duties imposed by statute.—In addition to his duties as the constitutional organ of the President for the administration of the military establishment, the Secretary of War is, by other statutes, charged with the supervision of the administration of the several bureaus or offices of the War Department, their estimates, contracts, expenditures, reports, and returns being under his sole direction and control. He has also been charged, from time to time, with the execution of laws relating to national cemeteries, the Soldiers' Home, the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, the military prison, the detail of officers to colleges, the distribution of relief to sufferers by fire, flood, or by the failure of crops, due to drought or other causes, the construction and operation of canals, roads, and lines of telegraph, the location and construction of bridges over the navigable waters of the United States, of railroads through the public lands, the protection of settlers and emigrants, the establishment of harbor lines, the adjustment of claims, the establishment and maintenance of national military parks, and the location, marking, and preservation of lines of battle on the battlefields of the civil war. Since the act of June 28, 1864, all statutes authorizing the construction of works of river and harbor improvement have contained the provision that the sums appropriated shall be expended under his direction. The Military Academy and the schools of application at Willets Point, Fortress Monroe, and at Forts Leavenworth and Riley are also carried on under the immediate supervision of the Secretary of War. By the act of April 10, 1878, the Secretary of War is authorized to prescribe rules and regulations to be observed in the preparation, submission, and opening of bids for contracts under the War Department. See also pars. 5 and 6 and notes thereunder for general provisions respecting the powers and duties of the heads of the several Executive Departments.

Collecting flags, etc.
Apr. 18, 1814, c. 78, s. 1, v. 3, p. 133.
Sec. 218, R. S.

124. The Secretary of War shall from time to time cause to be collected and transmitted to him, at the seat of government, all such flags, standards, and colors as are taken by the Army from the enemies of the United States.

Purchase and transportation of supplies.
Mar. 3, 1813, c. 48, s. 5, v. 2, p. 817.
Sec. 219, R. S.

125. The Secretary of War shall from time to time define and prescribe the kinds as well as the amount of supplies to be purchased by the Subsistence and Quartermaster departments of the Army, and the duties and powers thereof respecting such purchases; and shall prescribe general regulations for the transportation of the articles of supply from the places of purchase to the several armies, garrisons, posts, and recruiting places, for the safe-keeping of such articles, and for the distribution of an adequate and timely supply of the same to the regimental quartermasters, and to such other officers as may by virtue of such regulations be intrusted with the same; and shall fix and make reasonable allowances for the store rent and storage necessary for the safe-keeping of all military stores and supplies.

Transportation of troops, etc.
Jan. 31, 1862, c. 15, s. 4, v. 12, p. 334.
Sec. 220, R. S.

126. The transportation of troops, munitions of war, equipments, military property, and stores, throughout the United States, shall be under the immediate control and supervision of the Secretary of War and such agents as he may appoint.

Construction of new lines of telegraph, etc.
June 20, 1878, v. 20, p. 219.

127. That the construction of new lines of telegraph shall be under the supervision and direction of the several military commanders, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War.[1] Act of June 20, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 219).

Power to administer oaths.
Mar. 3, 1865, c. 79, s. 25. v. 13, p. 491.
Sec. 225, R. S.

128. The Secretary of War is authorized to detail one or more of the employees of the War Department for the purpose of administering the oaths required by law in the settlement of officers' accounts for clothing, camp and garrison equipage, quartermaster's stores, and ordnance, which oaths shall be administered without expense to the parties taking them.

[1] The act ot October 1, 1890, provides that "the civilian duties now performed by the Signal Corps of the Army shall hereafter devolve upon a bureau, which, on or after July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, shall be established in the Department of Agriculture, and the Signal Corps of the Army shall remain a part of the military establishment, under the direction of the Secretary of War, and all estimates for its support shall be included with other estimates for the support of the military establishment." Vol. 26, Stat. L., ch. 1266, p. 653. This statute operates to repeal so much of sections 221, 222, and 223 of the Revised Statutes as imposed duties upon the Secretary of War and the Chief Signal Officer in connection with the observation and report of storms, leaving under their direction such duties in connection with the construction and repair of military telegraph lines as were imposed by the acts of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. L., p. 388, and June 20, 1878, 20 Stat. L., p. 219. See chapter entitled THE SIGNAL DEPARTMENT, post.

130. Expenditures for contingencies of the Army.
Par.
131. Proposals for public works.
132. Examination of rivers and harbors.
133. Returns of the militia.

129. The Secretary of War shall make an annual report to Congress containing a statement of the appropriations of the preceding fiscal year for the Department of War, showing the amount appropriated under each specific head of appropriation, the amount expended under each head, and the balance which, on the thirtieth day of June preceding such report, remained unexpended. Such reports shall be accompanied by estimates of the probable demands which may remain on each appropriation.

[2] The strength and composition of the clerical force in the War Department and its several bureaus and offices is now fixed and established in the annual acts of appropriation.

The following clerical force in the Secretary's office is authorized by the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat., 988): One "chief clerk, including five hundred dollars as assistant in military park and insular affairs, three thousand dollars; clerk to the chief clerk, two thousand one hundred dollars; clerk to the Secretary, two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars; clerk to the Assistant Secretary, two thousand one hundred dollars; stenographer, one thousand eight hundred dollars; disbursing clerk, two thousand dollars; four chiefs of division, at two thousand dollars each; superintendent of buildings, outside of State, War, and Navy Department building, in addition to compensation as chief of division, five hundred dollars; appointment clerk, two thousand dollars; librarian, one thousand eight hundred dollars; four clerks of class four; five clerks of class three; ten clerks of class two; eleven clerks of class one; four clerks, at one thousand dollars each; carpenter, one thousand dollars; foreman of laborers, one thousand dollars; two carpenters, at nine hundred dollars each; four messengers; seven assistant messengers; eight laborers; hostler, six hundred dollars; two hostlers, and one watchman, at five hundred and forty dollars each; in all, one hundred and four thousand one hundred and fifty dollars."

Temporary clerical force.—The act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 988), makes the following provision: "For continuing the employment of such additional temporary force of clerks, messengers, laborers, and other assistants, rendered necessary because of increased work incident to the war with Spain, as in the judgment of the Secretary of War may be proper and necessary to the prompt, efficient, and accurate dispatch of official business in the War Department and its bureaus, to be allotted by the Secretary of War to such bureaus and offices as the exigencies of the needs of the service may demand; six hundred thousand dollars." The same enactment also contains the following restriction upon the employment of the temporary services therein authorized: "Persons in the classified service of the Government shall not be eligible to appointment under this appropriation or other appropriations for additional employees because of increased work incident to the war with Spain or to be transferred from any position in the classified service to positions paid under this or said other appropriations."

[3] The following offices, created by section 215, Revised Statutes, have ceased to exist: One superintendent of the War Department building, at $250 per year (see sailors from liability to examination for admission to the civil service, but entitles them to a preference for appointment as against other persons of equal qualifications for the place. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 194. See, also, 19 ibid., 318.

Section 1754, Revised Statutes, provides that "persons honorably discharged from the military or naval service * * * shall be preferred for appointment to civil offices, provided they are found to possess the business capacity necessary for the discharge of the duties of such offices," and if the duties assigned to any clerk of one class can be as well performed by a clerk of a lower class, or by a female clerk, it shall be lawful for him to diminish the number of the clerks of the higher grade and increase the number of the lower grade. Section 3, act of August 15, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 169), provides that "in making any reduction of force in any Executive Department the head of such Department shall retain those persons who may be equally qualified who have been honorably discharged from the military or naval service of the United States:" Held, that to entitle an ex-soldier to retention in the service under these statutes, in preference to a civilian, he must be "equally qualified," that qualification must be determined by the head of the Department, and that a court could not enter an Executive Department, examine the acts of its head, inquire into the exercise of his discretion, and investigate as to the causes of its exercise. Keim v. U. S., 33 Ct. Cls., 174.

[1] The civil service law, act of January 16, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 403), was intended to provide a body of civil officers selected solely for competency and fitness, protect them against accountability to any political party, and prevent their discharge, promotion, or degradation for giving or withholding political contributions; but it did not deprive the appointing power of any existing rights to remove or change in rank for other reasons. Duties of commissioners.

147. That it shall be the duty of said commissioners:

Rules. Sec. 2, ibid.

First. To aid the President, as he may request, in preparing suitable rules for carrying this act into effect,[1] and when said rules shall have been promulgated it shall be the duty of all officers of the United States in the Departments and offices to which any such rules may relate to aid, in all proper ways, in carrying said rules, and any modifications thereof, into effect.

Second. And, among other things, said rules shall provide and declare, as nearly as the conditions of good administration will warrant, as follows:

Competitive examinations.

First, for open, competitive examinations for testing the fitness of applicants for the public service now classified or to be classified[2] hereunder. Such examinations shall be practical in their character, and so far as may be shall relate to those matters which will fairly test the relative capacity and fitness of the persons examined to discharge the duties of the service into which they seek to be appointed.

Vacancies, how filled.

Second, that all the offices, places, and employments so arranged or to be arranged in classes shall be filled by selections according to grade from among those graded highest as the results of such competitive examinations.

Apportionment.

Applications for examination.

Third, appointments to the public service aforesaid in the Departments at Washington shall be appointed among the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia upon the basis of population as ascertained at the last preceding census. Every application for an examination shall contain, among other things, a statement, under oath, setting forth his or her actual bona fide residence at the time of making the application, as well as how long he or she has been a resident of such place.

[1] See Appendix, p. 1096.

[2] The term "classified service" indicates the parts of the service within the provisions of the civil-service law and rules requiring appointments therein to be made upon examination and certification by the commission, unless especially excepted from competition; the term "unclassified service" indicates the parts of the service which are not within those provisions, and, therefore, in which appointments may be made without examination and certification by the commission. Sec. 2, Manual for Examinations for the Classified Civil Service.

A vacancy in the classified service may be filled either by original appointment upon examination and certification by the commission, as explained, or by transfer or promotion from certain other positions in the classified service, or by reinstatement.

Probation.

Fourth, that there shall be a period of probation before any absolute appointment or employment aforesaid.

Political contributions and service.

Fifth, that no person in the public service is for that reason under any obligations to contribute to any political fund, or to render any political service, and that he will not be removed or otherwise prejudiced for refusing to do so.

Coercion.

Sixth, that no person in said service has any right to use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body.

Noncompetitive examinations.

Seventh, there shall be noncompetitive examinations in all proper cases before the commission, when competent persons do not compete, after notice has been given of the existence of the vacancy, under such rules as may be prescribed by the commissioners as to the manner of giving notice.

Notice of changes in service.

Eighth, that notice shall be given in writing by the appointing power to said commission of the persons selected for appointment or employment from among those who have been examined, of the place of residence of such persons, of the rejection of any such persons after probation, of transfers, resignations, and removals, and of the date thereof, and a record of the same shall be kept by said commission.

Exceptions to rules.

And any necessary exceptions from said eight fundamental provisions of the rules shall be set forth in connection with such rules, and the reasons therefor shall be stated in the annual reports of the commission.

Regulations for examinations.

Third. Said commission shall, subject to the rules that may be made by the President, make regulations for, and have control of, such examinations, and, through its members or the examiners, it shall supervise and preserve the records of the same; and said commission shall keep minutes of its own proceedings.

Minutes of proceedings.

Investigations.

Fourth. Said commission may make investigations concerning the facts, and may report upon all matters touching the enforcement and effects of said rules and regulations, and concerning the action of any examiner or board of examiners hereinafter provided for, and its own subordinates, and those in the public service, in respect to the execution of this act.

Annual report.

Fifth. Said commission shall make an annual report to the President for transmission to Congress, showing its own action, the rules and regulations and the exceptions thereto in force, the practical effects thereof, and any suggestions it may approve for the more effectual accomplishment of the purposes of this act. Sec. 2, act of January 16, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 403).

Sec. 3, ibid.

148. Said commission is authorized to employ a chief examiner, a part of whose duty it shall be, under its direction, to act with the examining boards, so far as practicable, whether at Washington or elsewhere, and to secure accuracy, uniformity, and justice in all their proceedings, which shall be at all times open to him. The chief examiner shall be entitled to receive a salary at the rate of three thousand dollars a year, and he shall be paid his necessary traveling expenses incurred in the discharge of his duty. The commission shall have a secretary, to be appointed by the President, who shall receive a salary of one thousand six hundred dollars per annum. It may, when necessary, employ a stenographer and a messenger, who shall be paid, when employed, the former at the rate of one thousand six hundred dollars a year, and the latter at the rate of six hundred dollars a year. The commission shall, at Washington, and in one or more places in each State and Territory where examinations are to take place, designate and select a suitable number of persons, not less than three, in the official service of the United States, residing in said State or Territory, after consulting the head of the department or office in which such persons serve, to be members of boards of examiners, and may at any time substitute any other person in said service living in such State or Territory in the place of any one so selected. Such boards of examiners shall be so located as to make it reasonably convenient and inexpensive for applicants to attend before them; and where there are persons to be examined in any State or Territory, examinations shall be held therein at least twice in each year. It shall be the duty of the collector, postmaster, and other officers of the United States, at any place outside of the District of Columbia where examinations are directed by the President or by said board to be held, to allow the reasonable use of the public buildings for holding such examinations, and in all proper ways to facilitate the same. Sec. 3, ibid.

Examination required for appointment and promotion.

150. After the expiration of six months from the passage of this act no officer or clerk shall be appointed, and no person shall be employed to enter or be promoted in either of the said classes now existing, or that may be arranged hereunder pursuant to said rules, until he has passed an examination, or is shown to be specially exempted from such examination in conformity herewith. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to take from those honorably discharged from the military or naval service any preference conferred by the seventeen hundred and fifty-fourth section of the Revised Statutes[1] nor to take from the President any authority not inconsistent with this act conferred by the seventeen hundred and fifty-third section[2] of said statutes; nor shall any officer not in the executive branch of the Government, or any person merely employed as a laborer or workman, be required to be classified hereunder; nor, unless by direction of the Senate, shall any person who has been nominated for confirmation by the Senate be required to be classified or to pass an examination. Sec. 7, ibid.

Preference claimants.

Sec. 10, ibid.

153. No recommendation of any person who shall apply for office or place under the provisions of this act which may be given by any Senator or Member of the House of Representatives, except as to the character or residence of the applicant, shall be received or considered by any person concerned in making any examination or appointment under this act. Sec. 10, ibid.

Applications for examination to be accompanied by certificate of residence.
July 11, 1890, v. 26, p. 235.

154. Hereafter every application for examination before the Civil Service Commission for appointment in the departmental service in the District of Columbia shall be accompanied by a certificate of an officer, with his official seal attached, of the county and State of which the applicant claims to be a citizen, that such applicant was, at the time of making such application, an actual and bona fide resident of said county, and had been such resident for a period of not less than six months next preceding; but this provision shall not apply to persons who may be in the service and seek promotion or appointment in other branches of the Government. Act of July 11, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 235).

Official oaths.
May 13, 1884, s. 2, v. 23, p. 22.

155. Section seventeen hundred and fifty-six of the Revised Statutes is hereby, repealed; and hereafter the oath to be taken by any person elected or appointed to any office of honor or profit either in the civil, military, or naval service, except the President of the United States, shall be as prescribed in section seventeen hundred and fifty-seven[2] of the Revised Statutes. But this repeal shall not affect the oaths prescribed by existing statutes in relation to the performance of duties in special or particular subordinate offices and employments. Sec. 2, act of May 13, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 22).

Not to affect existing rights, etc.
Ibid., s. 3.

156. The provisions of this act shall in no manner affect any right, duty, claim, obligation, or penalty now existing or already incurred; and all and every such right, duty, claim, obligation, and penalty shall be heard, tried, and determined, and effect shall be given thereto, in the same manner as if this act had not been passed. Sec. 3, ibid.

Sec. 1757, R.S.

158. Whenever any person * * * is elected or appointed to any office of honor or trust under the Government of the United States, * * * he shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, take and subscribe in lieu of that oath the following oath:[1] "I, A. B., do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office[2] on which I am about to enter. So help me God." Act of June 6, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 432).

Who may administer oath.

[1] The disabilities to hold office under the United States imposed under the authority conferred by section 3 of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, and which were embodied in section 1218 of the Revised Statutes, as modified by the acts of May 13, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 21), and March 31, 1896 (29 Stat L., 84), were, by the act of June 6, 1898, finally and entirely removed.

[2] For definition of office see U. S. v. Germaine, 99 U. S., 508, and Mouat v. U. S., 124 U. S., 303. See, also, note 1 to paragraph 4, ante. Clerks appointed by the head of an Executive Department are officers, and are required by the Constitution to take the oath of office. 1 Compt. Dec., 4. An employee whose compensation is fixed by the head of an Executive Department is not required to take a new oath of office when his compensation is increased. Ibid., 267. When by law a change is made in the compensation of an office, and in the manner in which such compensation shall be ascertained, the incumbent thereof is entitled from the date of the act to the compensation so fixed and is not required to take a new oath of office. Ibid., 313.

Under the act of February 14, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 670), S. was appointed from civil life to the position of major of engineers in the Army, and thereupon was placed on the retired list of the Army as of that grade; advised, that he must take the oath required by section 1756 of the Revised Statutes, and that this act would be in law a legal acceptance of the office, and, as such, a sufficient formal acceptance. XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 283.

Section 1757, Revised Statutes, and the act of May 13, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 22), which require generally that an officer shall take the oath of office prescribed "before entering upon the duties of his office" are directory only (U. S. v. Eaton, 169 U. S., 331), and a deputy clerk of a United States court whose acceptance of office on the same day he was appointed was evidenced by his entrance upon duty, and who subsequently took the oath, is entitled to compensation from that day. 4 Compt. Dec., 496.

he was still Chief Justice of the United States; of the mission of Mr. Gallatin to London and St. Petersburg, to negotiate a peace, while Secretary of the Treasury under President Madison; and of Mr. Justice Nelson, sitting as a member of the commission which concluded the treaty of Washington, under President Grant. On the other hand, it is the undoubted aim of general legislation respecting salaries to gauge the work so as to give full employment to the capacities of the man likely to be appointed to do it, and to measure the pay according to the work. In construing statutes restraining the Executive from giving dual or extra compensation, courts have aimed to carry out the legislative intent by giving them sufficient flexibility not to injure the public service and sufficient rigidity to prevent Executive abuse. Landram v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 74, 82. The great object has been to establish by law the compensation for public services, whether in offices or agencies, where the nature and character of the duties to be performed were sufficiently known and definite to enable Congress to form an estimate of its value and not leave it to the discretion of the head of an Executive Department. * * * These sections "can by no fair interpretation be held to embrace an employment which has no affinity or connection, either in its character or by law or usage, with the line of his official duty, and where the service to be performed is of a different character and for a different place and the amount of compensation is regulated by law. * * * The just and fair inference from these acts of Congress taken together is that no discretion is left to the head of a Department to allow an officer, who has a fixed compensation, any credit beyond his salary, unless the service he has performed is required by existing laws and the remuneration for them is fixed by law." Converse v. U. S., 21 How., 463, 470, 473; U. S. v. Brindle, 110 U. S., 688, 694; U. S. v. Shoemaker, 7 Wall., 338; Meigs v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 497; XV Opin. Att. Gen., 608; 1 Compt. Dec., 286; 2 ibid., 33; Crosthwaite v. U. S., 30 Ct. Cls., 300.

A question having arisen as to the payment of a per diem to the members and certain employees of the Bering Sea Tribunal of Arbitration, it was held: As to Justice Harlan and Senator Morgan, that the terms of section 1763 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 205), did not apply, as they had been appointed to separate and distinct offices not incompatible with the offices of justice of the Supreme Court, Senator of the United States, and retired judge. Payments to them were therefore allowed. U. S. v. Saunders, 120 U. S., 126. As to Senator Morgan, it was held that membership of a tribunal of arbitration did not constitute the holding of office under the authority of the United States under Article I, section 6, of the Constitution, and that Senator Morgan was not thereby prohibited from sitting thereon. The payment of per diem allowances to clerks and other regular employees of the United States, who had been detailed from the several Executive Departments to assist the tribunal in its labors, was held to be unauthorized under section 1765 of the Revised Statutes. Held, under this section, that a major and paymaster in the Army, detailed as disbursing officer of the Bering Sea Tribunal of Arbitration at Paris, could not receive any other allowances or emoluments than those specified in this section as allowable to officers of the Army. Compt. Dec., 1893–94, 275.

A compensation for extra services, where no certain allowance is fixed by law, can not be paid by the head of a Department to any officer of the Government who has, by law, a certain compensation in the office he holds. X Opin. Att. Gen., 31. The various provisions of law forbidding extra allowance or additional pay for extra service imply extra-service pay or allowance in the same office, not distinct service in distinct offices. VIII Opin. Att. Gen., 325. Where the service is one required by law, but not of any particular official, and compensation therefor is fixed by competent authority, and is appropriated, any officer who, under due authorization, performs the service is entitled to the compensation. XV Opin. Att. Gen., 608. See also Converse, admr., v. U. S., 21 How., 463; U. S. v. Shoemaker, 7 Wall., 338; Stansbury v. U. S., 8 Wall., 33; XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 121. [1] An officer is one who is invested with an office, and an office is authority, granted by law, to exercise a function of Government. An employee is one who is employed under a contract to perform personal service. An office is distinguished from a public employment by the fact that in the one case the authority to perform a public service is derived from the law, while in the other it is derived from a contract. IV Compt. Dec., 696.

[2] Salary is fixed when it is at a stipulated rate for a definite period of time; pay or emolument is fixed when the amount is agreed upon and the service is defined. Hedrick v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 88.

[3] See note to paragraph 167 supra. The provisions of section 1765, Revised Statutes, which prohibit the payment of additional compensation, apply to two classes of persons only, viz, officers in the public service and employees whose compensation is fixed by law or regulations. IV Compt. Dec. 696. See, also, ibid., 424.

[4] The phrase "who is in arrears to the United States," contained in the act of January 25, 1828 (sec. 1766, Revised Statutes), applies only to persons who, having had previous transactions of a pecuniary nature with the Government, are found, upon the settlement of those transactions, to be in arrears. III Opin. Att. Gen., 52. Where an officer of the Army assigned his pay accounts in payment of certain indebtedness, which accounts the Paymaster-General declined to pay, for the reason that, on the maturity thereof, the officer was in arrears to the United States; held that the refusal of the Paymaster-General was in accordance with section 1766 of the Revised Statutes. No officer or employee of the United States mentioned in this act shall discharge, or promote, or degrade, or in any manner change the official rank or compensation of any other officer or employee, or promise or threaten so to do, for giving or withholding or neglecting to make any contribution of money or other valuable thing for any political purpose.[1] Sec. 13, ibid.

Political contributions forbidden.

175. No officer, clerk, or other person in the service of the United States shall, directly or indirectly, give or hand over to any other officer, clerk, or person in the service of the United States, or to any Senator or Member of the House of Representatives, or Territorial Delegate, any money or other valuable thing on account of or to be applied to the promotion of any political object whatever. Sec. 14, ibid.

Any person who shall be guilty of violating any provision of the four foregoing sections shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or by such fine and imprisonment both, in the discretion of the court. Sec. 15, ibid.

Requesting, etc., contributions by officers of Government for political purposes prohibited.
Sec. 6, Aug. 15, 1876, v. 19, p. 169.

177. All executive officers or employees of the United States not appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, are prohibited from requesting, giving to, or receiving from, any other officer or employee of the Government, any money or property or other thing of value for political purposes; and any such officer or employee, who shall offend against the provisions of this section shall be at once discharged from the service of the United States; and he shall also be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars. Sec. 6, act of August 15, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 169).

Prohibition upon taking consideration for procuring contracts, offices, etc.

[1] Sections 1781 and 1782 of the Revised Statutes make it illegal for an officer of the United States to have that sort of connection with a Government contract which an agent, attorney, or solicitor assumes when he procures, or aids in procuring, such contract for another, or when he prosecutes for another any claim against the Government founded thereon. XIV Opin. Att. Gen., 483. But there is in the statutes no general provision whereby officers of the executive branch of the Government are forbidden to contract directly with the Government as principals, in matters separate from their offices and in no way connected with the performance of their official duties; nor are those officers forbidden to be connected with such contracts, after they are procured, by acquiring an interest therein. 182. The various officers of the United States to whom, in virtue of their offices and for the uses thereof, copies of the United States Statutes at Large, published by Little, Brown and Company, have been or may be distributed at the public expense, by authority of law, shall preserve such copies, and deliver them to their successors respectively as a part of the property appertaining to the office. A printed copy of this section shall be inserted in each volume of the Statutes distributed to any such officers.

Sec. 3622, R. S.

185. Every officer or agent of the United States who receives public money which he is not authorized to retain as salary, pay, or emolument, shall render his accounts monthly. Such accounts, with the vouchers necessary to the correct and prompt settlement thereof, shall be sent by mail or otherwise to the Bureau to which they pertain within ten days after the expiration of each successive month, and after examination there shall be passed to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury for settlement. Disbursing officers of the Navy shall, however, render their accounts and vouchers direct to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury. In case of the nonreceipt at the Treasury or proper Bureau of any accounts within a reasonable and proper time thereafter, the officer whose accounts are in default shall be required to furnish satisfactory evidence of having complied with the provisions of this section. Nothing herein contained shall, however, be construed to restrain the heads of any of the Departments from requiring such other returns or reports from the officer or agent, subject to the control of such heads of Departments, as the public interest may require.

[1] Under the provisions of the act of July 31, 1894, the Comptroller of the Treasury is authorized to render decisions, in advance of the settlement of accounts, only upon the request of a disbursing officer or the head of an Executive Department, as provided in section 8 of said act. 1 Compt. Dec., 87.

Under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, the Comptroller of the Treasury is authorized to render decisions, on the application of a disbursing officer or the head of an Executive Department, only upon questions involved in payments to be made by them or under them, and until the head of a Department having control of an appropriation determines to apply it to a particular purpose there is no question which can be properly submitted for the Comptroller's decision. Ibid., 89. Ibid., 31, 139. The Comptroller is not authorized to render a decision at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury when the question involved concerns the use of an appropriation under the control of the Secretary of War. Ibid., 317.

When an expense has not yet been incurred, and a decision of the Comptroller is desired for the guidance of a Department, the request therefor should be presented by the head of the Department having control of the appropriation, and not by the disbursing officer. Ibid., 500.

Under section 8 of this statute, authorizing an application by the head of an Executive Department to the Comptroller of the Treasury for the revision of an account settled by an Auditor, the Comptroller has no jurisdiction to entertain such an application when made by the head of a bureau of a Department. Ibid., 199. Nor can such a decision be rendered upon the application of an Auditor. Ibid., 78; 4 ibid., 653, 727.

Requests for the decision of the Comptroller under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, must be made by the disbursing officer himself, and not by an attorney authorized to represent him in the settlement of his account. Ibid., 502. The Comptroller is authorized to render a decision upon the request of a disbursing officer only when the question submitted is one involved in a payment which he has been directed, by general or special order, to make. Ibid., 500.

Under the act of July 31, 1894, the Auditors of the Treasury are not authorized to render decisions in advance of the settlement of accounts, such authority being, by section 8 of said act, granted only to the Comptroller of the Treasury. 1 Compt. Dec., 94.

Sec. 283, R. S.

197. The Auditors charged with the examination of the accounts of the Departments of War and of the Navy shall keep all accounts of the receipts and expenditures of the public money in regard to those Departments, and of all debts due to the United States on moneys advanced relative to those Departments; shall receive from the Comptroller the accounts which shall have been finally adjusted, and shall preserve such accounts, with their vouchers and certificates, and record all requisitions drawn by the Secretaries of those Departments, the examination of the accounts of which has been assigned to them. They shall annually, on the first Monday in November, severally report to the Secretary of the Treasury the application of the money appropriated for the Department of War and the Department of the Navy, and they shall make such reports on the business assigned to them as the Secretaries of those Departments may deem necessary and require.

Certified balances conclusive on Executive Departments, etc.
Sec. 8, ibid.

198. The balances which may from time to time be certified by the Auditors to the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants, or to the Postmaster-General, upon the settlements of public accounts, shall be final and conclusive upon the Executive branch of the Government, except that any person whose accounts may have been settled, the head of the Executive Department, or of the board, commission, or establishment not under the jurisdiction of an Executive Department, to which the account pertains, or the Comptroller of the Treasury, may, within a year, obtain a revision of the said account by the Comptroller of the Treasury, whose decision upon such revision shall be final Certificate of differences on revision.

200. Upon a certificate by the Comptroller of the Treasury of any differences ascertained by him upon revision, the Auditor who shall have audited the account shall state an account of such differences and certify it to the division of bookkeeping and warrants, except that balances found and accounts stated as aforesaid by the Auditor for the Post-Office Department for postal revenues and expenditures therefrom shall be certified to the Postmaster-General. Sec. 8, ibid.

Accepting payment on Auditor's settlement conclusive.

201. Any person accepting payment under a settlement by an auditor shall be thereby precluded from obtaining a revision of such settlement as to any items upon which payment is accepted; but nothing in this act shall prevent an Auditor from suspending items in an account in order to

[1] This paragraph expressly repeals section 1 of the act of March 30, 1868 (sec. 191, Rev. Stat.). The clause "shall be conclusive upon the Executive Departments of the Government," which formed a part of the repealed section, was enacted to settle a long-pending dispute between the accounting officers and the heads of departments as to their respective powers over claims and accounts, and has been interpreted to relate "only to matters of accounting in the Treasury Department, and of ascertaining the balance in each particular account which shall be drawn from the Treasury. * * * It makes conclusive upon the executive branch of the Government only the 'balances' stated by the accounting officers and their 'decision thereon' for the purpose of determining for what amounts, if any, warrants may be drawn on the Treasury. * * * It does not make such decisions conclusive upon the head of a department in the exercise of his discretion as to orders to be issued to his subordinates in such connections as the one now under consideration." Billings v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 166; McKee v. United States, 12 ibid., 504. It was held in the case of Surgeon Billings (23 Ct. Cls., 166) that the War Department had authority to send a surgeon to the International Medical Congress at London at the expense of the Government, that being a military service which a surgeon could be required to render. In the case of Paymaster Smith (24 Ct. Cls., 209) it was held that the employment of experts before a court-martial was within the legal and proper discretion of the Secretary of War. In the case of the United States v. Jones (18 How., 92, 95) the court held "that the Secretary of the Navy represents the President and exercises his power on the subjects confided to his Department. He is responsible to the people and to the law for any abuse of the powers intrusted to him. His acts and decisions on subjects submitted to his jurisdiction and control by the Constitution and laws do not require the approval of any officer of any other department to make them valid and conclusive. The accounting officers of the Treasury have not the burden cast upon them of reviewing the judgments, correcting the supposed mistakes, or annulling the orders of the heads of departments." When the Government is estopped from further controverting a question adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction it is the duty of the accounting officers obtain further evidence or explanations necessary to their settlement. When suspended items are finally settled, a revision may be had as in the case of the original settlement. Action upon any account or business shall not be delayed awaiting applications for revision: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall make regulations fixing the time which shall expire before a warrant is issued in payment of an account certified as provided in sections seven and eight of this act. Sec. 8, ibid.

Under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, an appeal will not lie to the Comptroller of the Treasury except from the final certificate of an auditor. A suspension of action upon a case by an auditor is not a final decision of such officer. Ibid., 381. An appeal to the Comptroller from the action of an auditor will not lie until the auditor has taken final action in the case. A suspension for further evidence is not a final decision upon which an appeal can be based. I Compt. Dec., 448, 500.

In a case where the Auditor for the War Department disallowed the claim of a soldier for pay and allowances upon the ground of desertion, and, subsequent to said settlement, the Secretary of War has removed the charge of desertion and issued a discharge certificate under the act of March 2, 1889: Held, That the application for pay and allowances upon said amendment of record is a new claim, coming within the jurisdiction of the Auditor for the War Department, and is not to be regarded as an appeal under section 8, act of July 31, 1894, or an application for a rehearing. III Compt. Dec., 144; IV ibid., 303, 332, 471, 622, 723.

Under the act of July 31, 1894, an auditor has no jurisdiction to review his own final action in the settlement of an account, but such settlement can be reopened only on a revision thereof by the Comptroller of the Treasury within a year, as provided in section 8 of said act. Where an auditor disallows certain items in an account which have been allowed claimant by a paymaster, it amounts to a formal settlement of the account of such claimant, from which an appeal may be taken under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894. II Compt. Dec., 4. Under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, appeals from disallowances by the auditors must be taken within a year from the date of the settlement. If taken after the expiration of a year, the Comptroller is without jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. Ibid., 510.

[2] The accounting officers have no jurisdiction to reopen settlements made by their predecessors, because a subsequent decision of the courts has so changed the construction of the law under which the settlements were made as to warrant a different result in the settlements. 2 Compt. Dec., 401.

Settled accounts in the Treasury Department, where the United States have acted on the settlement and paid the balance therein found due, can not be opened or set aside years afterwards merely because some of the prescribed steps in the accounting which it was the duty of a head of a department to see had been taken had in fact been omitted, or on account of technical irregularities when the remedy of the party against the United States is barred by the statute of limitation and the remedies of the United States are intact, owing to its not being subject to an act of limitation. U. S. v. Johnston, 124 U. S., 236, 1 Compt. Dec., 192.

The act of July 31, 1894, does not take from the accounting officers the right to reopen accounts which have been settled, either by themselves or their predecessors, for the purpose of correcting mistakes of fact arising from errors of calculation, or upon the production of newly discovered material evidence, or for fraud or collusion. 4 Compt. Dec., 303. But see 1 ibid., 27; 2 ibid., 210. The Comptroller has the exclusive right to reopen an account which has been revised by himself or his predecessors. 4 ibid., 303. Before the expiration of a year the right of revision by the Comptroller is exclusive, and an Auditor can not reopen an account within that period. After the expiration of a year from the date of settlement, an Auditor has the exclusive right to reopen an account settled by himself or his predecessors. Ibid.

Under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, the Comptroller of the Treasury is authorized to revise, upon his own motion, all items embraced in an account, including items upon which payment has been accepted; and, in particular instances, where justice requires it, such authority may be exercised in favor of a claimant. 4 Compt. [1] Sections 300 A and 300 B of the Revised Statutes authorized certain claims of loyal citizens, for property furnished to the armies of the United States during the war of the rebellion to be prosecuted before the Quartermaster-General and the Commissary-General of Subsistence. By section 2 of the act of June 16, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 75), this jurisdiction was extended, but was finally withdrawn by the operation of the acts of March 3, 1883 (chapters 93 and 116; 22 Stat. L., 457 and 485).

The act of March 3, 1849 (9 Stat. L., 414; secs. 3482–3487, R. S.), provided for the reimbursement of officers and men for horses and other private property lost in the military service. Several limitations upon the filing of claims under this act have been enacted by Congress; but the general limitation will be found in section 2 of the act of January 9, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 401), which contains the requirement that "all claims arising under the act approved March 3, 1849, and all acts amendatory thereof, which shall not be filed in the proper department within one year after the passage of this act shall be forever barred and shall not be received, considered, or audited by any department of the Government." Section 2 of the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 437), suspended the limitation as to the presentation of claims for losses of horses during the war of the rebellion for three years. The act of March 3, 1849, therefore became inoperative in respect to general claims on August 13, 1889, and as to claims for horses, etc., lost during the rebellion, on August 13, 1891.

In the performance of the duty imposed by this statute the Secretary of the Treasury is not subject to the control of the courts of the United States, and the duty not being ministerial in character a writ of mandamus will not lie to compel the allowance of a claim presented under the statute. Kendall v. Stockton, 12 Pet., 524; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet., 497, 515; U. S. v. Guthrie, 17 How., 284, 304; Brashear v. Mason, 6 How., 92, 102. Such action on the part of the courts would also be in the nature of entertaining a suit against the United States, which is not within their jurisdiction. U. S. v. Guthrie, 17 How., 284, 305.

CLAIMS OF OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN FOR PROPERTY LOST AND DESTROYED.

Accounting officers to settle claims of officers and men in military service for property lost or destroyed.

221. The proper accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized and directed to examine into, ascertain, and determine the value of the private property belonging to officers and enlisted men in the military service of the United States which has been, or may hereafter be, lost or destroyed in the military service, under the following circumstances:

When loss or destruction was without fault or negligence.

First. When such loss or destruction was without fault or negligence on the part of the claimant.[1]

When shipped by order on unseaworthy vessel.

Second. Where the private property so lost or destroyed was shipped on board an unseaworthy vessel by order of any officer authorized to give such order or direct such shipment.[2] of fact or material testimony discovered and produced. V Opin. Att. Gen., 664. A head of a department of the Government has no right to review the acts of his predecessors, except to correct an error of calculation. He can not recall a credit given or allowance made. Such action is for the judiciary. U. S. v. Bank of Metropolis, 15 Pet., 377.

The accounting officers of the Treasury have no jurisdiction to settle claims for unliquidated damages arising from the torts of the agents of the Government. II Compt. Dec., 174, 487; McKee v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cls., 556; Dennis v. U. S., 20 ibid, II; XIV Opin. Att. Gen., 24. Nor have the accounting officers such jurisdiction over a claim for unliquidated damages not arising from the tortious act of an officer of the Government. II Compt. Dec., 487; I ibid, 261; II ibid, 174.

[1] Clause first stands alone as an independent basis for a claim, and was intended to reach cases not covered by the other two clauses. This clause is broader in its scope than the two succeeding clauses, but absence of fault or negligence must be proven if the claim is made under it. Broad as this clause is, it does not cover every case of loss an officer or soldier might sustain in his "reasonable, useful, and necessary" property while he was in the military service. II Compt. Dec., 644, 647.

Stating the proposition in other words, it does not make the United States the absolute insurer, against all accidents and contingencies, of the reasonable, useful, and necessary property of officers and soldiers. To entitle a person to reimbursement under this clause the loss or destruction must be without fault or negligence, directly or indirectly, near or remote, of the owner, and must have been caused by, or resulted from, some exigency or necessity of the military service. It must reasonably be attributable to the fact that it was held in the military service, whereby the owner was deprived, in some degree, of the control over it which he would have in civil life, and where it would be subjected to dangers not ordinarily incident to its use in civil life. Under all conditions of a use of such personal property as is covered by the law it is subject to deterioration and loss; but in the military service the dangers are greater and peculiar because of the environments of that service. It was to provide against personal loss resulting from these special and peculiar dangers that this law was enacted. Any other view of the law would make the United States the insurer of all personal property necessarily used in its service by officers and soldiers. This can not have been the intent of Congress. If it be held that absence of fault or negligence is the only condition precedent to reimbursement an officer would be entitled to payment for a horse dying from old age, or a uniform, side arms, or household furniture worn out in use. III Compt. Dec., 637.

[2] The true construction of clause second is that the claimant is entitled to reimbursement without being required to show, affirmatively, that he was not guilty of negligence, "where the private property was shipped on board an unseaworthy vessel by order of any officer authorized to give such order or direct such shipment." The leading idea in this clause is that the loss would be attributable to the unseaworthiness of the vessel, and that the soldier sustaining the loss would have no

When lost in saving property of United States.

Third. Where it appears that the loss or destruction of the private property of the claimant was in consequence of his having given his attention to the saving of the property belonging to the United States which was in danger at the same time and under similar circumstances. And the amount of such loss so ascertained and determined shall be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and shall be in full for all such loss or damage: Provided, That any claim which shall be presented and acted on under authority of this act shall be held as finally determined, and shall never thereafter be reopened or considered: And provided further, That this act shall not apply to losses sustained in time of war or hostilities with Indians: And provided further, That the liability of the Government under this act shall be limited to such articles of personal property as the Secretary of War, in his discretion, shall decide to be reasonable, useful, necessary, and proper for such officer or soldier while option as to the shipment on said vessel and no responsibility for a loss under such circumstances. II Compt. Dec., 647.

To entitle a person to recover under the first clause of the act the following facts, among others, must be established:

1. The loss must be of private property of the officer or soldier.

"The articles must not only belong to him, but must be used by him and for him alone, as it were, personal to him in the performance of his duty."

2. The property must be such as the Secretary of War shall decide to be reasonable, to be useful, and to be necessary for such officer or soldier while in quarters, engaged in the public service in the line of duty.

3. The loss must have been without fault or negligence, in any degree, of the claimant.

4. The loss must have been caused by some exigency or necessity of the military service, such as would naturally be attributable to and would flow from such service. To establish a case under this act the property must have been lost or destroyed in the military service; not merely while it was in use in that service, but because it was in that service. Being in that service must have been the proximate cause of the loss.

5. The loss must not have been caused by the natural wear and tear, or deterioration, of the articles in ordinary use in the service. Inherent defects in articles, on account of which they are unable to stand the ordinary strain of the service, will prevent recovery.

6. Payment must be limited to the commercial value of the articles at the time of their loss, and not exceed the value of such articles as it was necessary for the officer or soldier to have in the service. Unusually expensive articles can not be considered necessary. The purchase price of an article is more likely to be a fair measure of its value than the estimate placed upon it after the purchaser obtains possession of it. The purchase price should not be exceeded without good cause shown.

7. Proof of absence of fault or negligence must state all the circumstances, and be sufficiently elaborate to enable the accounting officers to reach their own conclusions. Mere opinions or conclusions of witnesses, without full statement of facts upon which they are based, are of little value.

8. Any want of proper care either in the claimant or his servant, or the incompetency of the servant, will prevent recovery.

9. It is the duty of owners to care for their property; any voluntary relaxation of that care by intrusting it to others, is negligence within the meaning of the law.

Although under clause second the claimant is not required to show affirmatively that he was not guilty of fault or negligence, this will not be understood as precluding the Government from showing that he was so guilty, and, if so found, he will not be entitled to recover.

in quarters, engaged in the public service, in the line of duty: And provided further, That all claims now existing shall be presented within two years and not after from the passage of this act; and all such claims hereafter arising be presented within two years from the occurrence of the loss or destruction.[1] *Act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. Reimbursement of States, etc., July 8, 1898. v. 30, p. 730.

223. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby, directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to the governor of any State or Territory, or to his duly authorized agents, the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses that have been incurred by him in aiding the United States to raise the Volunteer Army in the existing war with Spain, by subsisting, clothing, supplying, equipping, paying, and transporting men of his State or Territory who were afterwards accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States: Provided, That the transportation paid for shall be only the transportation of such men from the place of their enrollment for service in the Volunteer Army of the United States to the place of their acceptance into the same by the United States mustering officer, and that the names of the men transported shall appear on the muster rolls of the Volunteer Army of the United States: And provided further, That such claims shall be settled upon proper vouchers to be filed and passed upon by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury: And provided further, That, in cases where the money to pay said costs, charges, and expenses has been, or may hereafter, be borrowed by the governors or their respective States or Territories, and interest is paid, or may hereafter be paid, on the same, by the governors or their States or Territories, from the time it was or may be so borrowed to the time of its refundment by the United States, or thereafter, such interest shall not be refunded by the United States; nor shall any interest be paid the governors or their States or Territories on the amounts paid out by them, nor any other amount refunded or paid than is in this act expressly mentioned.[1] Act of July 8, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 730.)

[1] Under clause third the claimant must show that he was not guilty of fault or negligence other than of neglecting his own property in his efforts to save that of the Government. III Compt. Dec., 636; see, also, II ibid., 644; III ibid., 636, 659; XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 693; G. O. 35, A. G. O., 1896; G. O. 39, A. G. O., 1897; Circular 1, A. G. O., 1897.

Paragraph 807, Army Regulations of 1901, contains the following requirement:

"For private property of officers or enlisted men lost or destroyed in the military service, without fault or negligence on the part of the claimant, 'where the private property so lost or destroyed was shipped on board an unseaworthy vessel by order of any officer authorized to give such order or direct such shipment,' or 'where it appears that the loss or destruction of the private property of the claimant was in consequence of his having given his attention to the saving of the property belonging to the United States which was in danger at the same time and under similar circumstances,' compensation may be made under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1885. Proceedings of a board of survey will, if possible, accompany each application under this act, showing fully the circumstances attending the loss * * * ."

224. That the act entitled "An act to reimburse the governors of States and Territories for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain," approved July eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, be so amended that the Secretary of the Treasury shall be, and is hereby, authorized to allow, in the settlement of the claims of the governors of States and Territories for reimbursement under the provisions of the said act, expenses incurred after as well as before July eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety- The same. Mar. 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1356.

[1] All claims for expenses incurred by any State or Territory in aiding the United States to raise the Volunteer Army in the existing war with Spain by subsisting, clothing, supplying, equipping, paying, and transporting men of such State or Territory who were afterwards accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States should be forwarded to the Secretary of the Treasury for audit and settlement by the accounting officers of the Treasury, in accordance with the terms of the above-quoted act. G. O., 97, A. G. O., 1898.

The act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1356), paragraph 230, post, contains a requirement that claims under this statute must be presented on or before January 1, 1902, or be forever barred.

eight: Provided, That no reimbursement shall be made for service of members of the National Guard, or organized militia, or naval reserves of any State or Territory who were not accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States, and no reimbursement shall be allowed for payments made to any person in excess of the pay and allowances authorized by the laws of the State or Territory for the grade in which he was accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States. That the compensation allowed by the laws of the States and Territories to officers and men of the National Guard, or militia, or naval reserves of said States and Territories shall be allowed to the States and Territories, or the governors of the States and Territories, as pay for such officers and men of said National Guard, or militia, or naval reserves as appeared and remained at the place of muster, and who were afterwards received into the service of the United States for the period between the date of assembly at the rendezvous and the date they were mustered into the United States service. Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1356.)

Rates of pay. Ibid.

225. In all States and Territories where no laws exist for the payment of the officers and men of the National Guard, or militia, or naval reserves, there shall be allowed to said States and Territories, or the governors of said States and Territories, for the officers the same pay as allowed officers in the Regular Army holding the same rank, and for the men, one dollar per day, for such officers and men as appeared and remained at the place of muster and were afterwards received into the service of the United States for the period between the date of assembly at the rendezvous and the date they were mustered into the service of the United States: Provided further, That for all officers and men of the National Guard, or militia, or naval reserves of the States and Territories, who appeared at the rendezvous for muster, and were rejected by the medical examiner or mustering officer, pay shall be allowed for the same to the States and Territories or the governors of States and Territories, at the several rates as fixed as aforesaid from the date of assembly to the date of their rejection: Provided further, That where States and Territories have not paid amounts to the officers and men or any part thereof the pay allowed them by this Act, the same shall be paid by the States and Territories direct to the officers and men, and no money allowed by this Act for officers and men shall be covered into the treasury of the State or Territory. Ibid.

226. Under the appropriation made by said Act the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to reimburse the governor of any State or Territory for reasonable expenses incurred by him for the actual transportation of the members of organized militia, or National Guard, or naval reserves of his State from the place of company, battalion, or regimental rendezvous to the State rendezvous, or place designated for examination and acceptance of the members of such organization into the Volunteer Army of the United States, and the actual transportation from such State rendezvous, or such place designated for examination and acceptance, to their respective company, battalion, or regimental rendezvous of such men as were rejected by the medical examiner or mustering officer: Provided, That no reimbursement shall be made for the transportation of any man who did not present himself for enrollment in the Volunteer Army of the United States as provided by law: And provided further, That the provisions of this section shall apply also to payments made by the governor of any State or Territory for the actual transportation of individual volunteers who presented themselves for enrollment in the Volunteer Army of the United States and who were rejected by the medical examiner or mustering officer. Sec. 2, ibid.

Transportation to State rendezvous.
Sec. 2, ibid.

227. Nothing in said Act of July eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, shall be so construed as to prohibit the reimbursement of the governor of any State or Territory for reasonable expenses incurred for the subsistence of the members of any organization of the organized militia or National Guard, or naval reserves of his State or Territory after having been called out by the governor on or after April twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight: Provided, That such organizations shall afterwards have been accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States. Sec. 3, ibid.

Subsistence.

against such State or its representatives to secure the payment of the principal and interest of said bonds or stocks: And provided further, That where the governor of any State or Territory, or any officer of the Army detailed as mustering officer of volunteers, or any commander of a company or companies, or troop or troops, or battery or battalion, or regiment, or brigade, has purchased or authorized the purchase of supplies or equipments, or incurred any necessary expense for the comfort of the men in camp or rendezvous, and said supplies were used and equipments were subsequently taken into the United States service by said volunteers, and no receipts given to such military officer, the certificate to that effect of the governor of the State or Territory to which the volunteers belonged, shall be held sufficient to authorize the settlement and payment of such account on investigation, if the Treasury Department shall be satisfied of the fact of such purchase of such equipment and supplies, or that such necessary expenses were incurred and such use of such supplies, or such taking of such equipments into the United States service, and the voucher or vouchers of said officers be produced by said governor. Sec. 4, ibid.

Transportation of troops. Sec. 5, ibid.

229. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the just and proper account or claim of any railroad, transportation company, or person for transportation of men or troops from place of enrollment to point of rendezvous, furnished at the request of the Quartermaster-General of the Army or his agents, or at the request of any United States mustering officer or other officer authorized by the Secretary of War to enroll, muster, or mobilize volunteers for the war with Spain; and also to pay such just and proper accounts as may be presented for transportation back from point of rendezvous to place of enrollment of men who volunteered and were rejected by the medical examiner or mustering officer: Provided, That the amount allowed and paid for such transportation shall not be in excess of the rates charged for transporting troops of the United States under like circumstances.

All claims under the provision of this Act must be filed in the office of the Auditor for the War Department, and must be supported by proper vouchers or other conclusive evidence of interest. Sec. 5, ibid.

Limitation on claims. Sec. 6, ibid.

230. All claims for reimbursement under this Act or the Act of July eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, shall be presented in itemized form to the Treasury Department on or before January first, nineteen hundred and two, or be forever barred.[1] Sec. 6, ibid.

COMPROMISE OF CLAIMS AND PURCHASE ON EXECUTION.

Compromise of claims.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 76, s. 10, v. 12, p. 740.
U. S. v. George, 6 Blatch., 406.
Sec. 3469, R.S.

231. Upon a report by a district attorney, or any special attorney or agent having charge of any claim in favor of the United States, showing in detail the condition of such claim, and the terms upon which the same may be compromised, and recommending that it be compromised upon the terms so offered, and upon the recommendation of the Solicitor of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to compromise such claim accordingly. But the provisions of this section shall not apply to any claim arising under the postal laws.[2]

May 26, 1824, c. 172, s. 2, v. 4, p. 51.
Sec. 3470, R.S.

232. At every sale, on execution, at the suit of the United States, of lands or tenements of a debtor, the United States may, by such agent as the Solicitor of the Treasury shall appoint, become the purchaser thereof; but in no case shall the agent bid in behalf of the United States a greater amount than that of the judgment for which such estate may be exposed to sale, and the costs. Whenever such purchase is made, the marshal of the district in which the sale is held shall make all needful conveyances, assignments, or transfers to the United States.

SET-OFF.

Amount of debt due United States to be withheld by Secretary of Treasury in paying judgments, etc., of debtor against United States.
Act Mar. 3, 1875, v. 18, p. 481.

233. When any final judgment recovered against the United States or other claim duly allowed by legal authority, shall be presented to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment, and the plaintiff or claimant therein shall be indebted to the United States in any manner, whether as principal or surety, it shall be the duty of the Secretary to withhold payment of an amount of such judgment or claim equal to the debt thus due to the United States; and if such plaintiff or claimant assents to such set-off, and discharges his judgment or an amount thereof equal to said debt or claim, the Secretary shall execute a discharge of [2] Compromise of claims.—Claims against the United States which are disputed by the officers authorized to adjust such accounts may be compromised, and if the claimant voluntarily enters into such a compromise and accepts a smaller sum than the claim and executes a discharge in full for the whole claim, he is bound by the adjustment and can not sue for what he has voluntarily relinquished. the debt due from the plaintiff to the United States. But if such plaintiff, or claimant, denies his indebtedness to the United States, or refuses to consent to the set-off, then the Secretary shall withhold payment of such further amount of such judgment, or claim, as in his opinion will be sufficient to cover all legal charges and costs in prosecuting the debt of the United States to final judgment. And if such debt is not already in suit, it shall be the duty of the Secretary to cause legal proceedings to be immediately commenced to enforce the same, and to cause the same to be prosecuted to final judgment with all reasonable dispatch. And if in such action judgment shall be rendered against the United States, or the amount recovered for debt and costs shall be less than the amounts so withheld as before provided, the balance shall then be paid over to such plaintiff by such Secretary, with six per cent interest thereon for the time it has been withheld from the plaintiff.[1] Act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 481).

ASSIGNMENTS OF CLAIMS, POWERS OF ATTORNEY.

Assignments of claims void, unless, etc.

Feb. 26, 1853, c. 81, s. 1, v. 10, p. 170; July 29, 1846, c. 66, v. 9, p. 41.

Sec. 3477, R. S.

234. All transfers and assignments made of any claim upon the United States, or of any part or share thereof, or interest therein, whether absolute or conditional, and whatever may be the consideration therefor, and all powers of attorney, orders, or other authorities for receiving payment of any such claim, or of any part or share thereof, shall be absolutely null and void, unless they are freely made and executed in the presence of at least two attesting witnesses, after the allowance of such a claim, the ascertainment of the amount due, and the issuing of a warrant for the payment thereof. Such transfers, assignments, and powers of attorney, must recite the warrant for payment, and must be acknowledged by the person making them, before an officer having authority to take acknowledgments of deeds, and shall be certified by the officer; and it must appear by the certificate that the officer, at the time of the acknowledgment, read and fully explained the transfer, assignment, or warrant of attorney to the person acknowledging the same.[1]

[1] Set-off.—When a person is both debtor and creditor of the United States, in any form, the officers of the Treasury Department in settling the accounts not only have the power, but are required, in the proper discharge of their duties, to set off the one indebtedness against the other, and to allow and certify for payment only the balance found due on one side or the other. * * * The right of set-off in such cases exists independently of these enactments (sec. 1766, Rev. Stat., and the act of March 3, 1875; 1 Sup. to Rev. Stat., 185), and is founded upon what is now section 236 of the Revised Statutes. Taggart v. U. S., 17 Ct. Cls., 322, 327; McKnight's Case, 13 ibid., 292; Bonnafon's Case, 14 ibid., 489; Howes v. U. S., 24 ibid., 170; Reeside v. Walker, 11 How., 272, 290. The power in the matter of set-offs conferred upon the Secretary of the Treasury by the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 481), is exclusive, and can not be exercised by the courts. U. S. v. Griswold, 30 Fed. Rep., 604.

Settled accounts in the Treasury Department, where the United States have acted on the settlement and paid the balance therein found due, can not be opened or set aside years afterwards merely because some of the prescribed steps in the accounting which it was the duty of a head of a Department to see had been taken had in fact been omitted, or on account of technical irregularities when the remedy of the party against the United States is barred by the statute of limitation and the remedies of the United States are intact, owing to its not being subject to an act of limitation. U. S. v. Johnston, 124 U. S., 236, 1 Compt. Dec., 192.

[1] The mischiefs which this statute were intended to prevent were mainly two: (1) The danger that the rights of the Government might be embarrassed by having to deal with several persons instead of one, and by the introduction of a party who was a stranger to the original transaction; (2) that, by a transfer of such claim against the Government to one or more persons not originally interested in it, the way might be conveniently opened to such improper influences in prosecuting the claim before the Departments, the courts, or the Congress as desperate cases, when the reward is contingent on success, so often suggest. In Spofford v. Kirk (97 U. S., 490) the Supreme Court had said that the greater of the two evils was the possible combination of interests and influences in the prosecution of claims which might have no real foundation. Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S., 560; Bailey v. U. S., 109 U. S., 438; Milliken v. Barrow, 65 Fed. Rep., 888, 892.

The provisions of section 3477 of the Revised Statutes, prohibiting and making void transfers of any claim against the United States before the allowance of such claim, apply only to claims existing at the time of the transfer, in the form of a right to demand money from the United States, and not to cases where, at the very inception of the transaction out of which a claim against the United States may arise, one party assigns to another the contingent profits he hopes to make, but which do not then exist, and can only be secured by the loan of the assignee's money to the assignor. Milliken v. Barrow, 65 Fed. Rep., 888.

The word "claim" as used in section 3477, Revised Statutes, which provides that "all transfers and assignments made of any claim upon the United States * * * shall be absolutely null and void" unless made as prescribed therein, comprehends all demands against the United States for the payment of money whether liquidated or unliquidated; and an assignment of a judgment against the United States, made before the issuing of a warrant for the payment thereof, is within the meaning of the statute and void. IV Compt. Dec., 196; I ibid., 276. The provisions of section 3477, Revised Statutes, touching transfers and assignments of claims against the United States, and powers of attorney, etc., for receiving payment thereof, do not apply to undisputed claims or any claim about which no question is made as to its validity or extent. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 545; XXI ibid., 75; XX ibid., 578.

The provision of the Revised Statutes (section 3477), making void transfers and assignments of claims against the United States, relates to voluntary assignments, and does not extend to transfers by operation of law, or interfere with the equitable doctrine of subrogation. Amer. Tob. Co. v. U. S., 32 Ct. Cls., 207; II Comp. Dec., 49. While section 3477 of the Revised Statutes declares null and void all powers of attorney given prior to the settlement of a claim and the issuing of a warrant in payment, yet when payments are made upon valid, unrevoked, and undisputed powers of attorney, credit must be given in settlements of the disbursing officer making them. I Compt. Dec., 431; ibid., 119; ibid., 453. Under the decisions of the courts the accounting officers are required, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3477 of the Revised Statutes, to credit disbursing officers with payments actually made by them under powers of attorney, provided it is shown that, at the time of such payment, such powers are undisputed and have not been revoked, either by the voluntary action of the principal or by his death. Ibid., 142. Payments may be made to a corporation under a contract entered into by an attorney duly authorized to act for the corporation in the making of such contract. II Compt. Dec., 30; ibid., 295. See also decision of Secretary of War of November 7, 1895, in Circular 13, A. G. O., 1895.

Claims of disloyalists. Mar. 2, 1867, Res. 46, v. 14, p. 571. Sec. 3480, R. S.

237. It shall be unlawful for any officer to pay any account, claim, or demand against the United States which accrued or existed prior to the thirteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, in favor of any person who promoted, encouraged, or in any manner sustained the late rebellion, or in favor of any person who during such rebellion was not known to be opposed thereto, and distinctly in favor of its suppression; and no pardon heretofore granted, or hereafter to be granted, shall authorize the payment of such account, claim, or demand, until this section is modified or repealed. But this section shall not be construed to prohibit the payment of claims founded upon contracts made by any of the Departments, where such claims were assigned or contracted to be assigned prior to the first day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, to the creditors of such contractors, loyal citizens of loyal States, in payment of debts incurred prior to the first day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one.[2]

Claims for collecting, etc., volunteers to be presented prior to June 30, 1874.

238. No claims against the United States, for collecting, drilling, or organizing volunteers for the war of the rebellion, shall be audited or paid unless presented before the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four. No claims for horses lost prior to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, shall be audited or paid unless presented before the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four.

244. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe rules and regulations governing the recognition of agents, attorneys, or other persons representing claimants before his Department, and may require of such persons, agents and attorneys, before being recognized as representatives of claimants, that they shall show that they are of good character and in good repute, possessed of the necessary qualifications to enable them to render such claimants valuable service, and otherwise competent to advise and assist such claimants in the presentation of their cases. And such Secretary may after due notice and opportunity for hearing suspend, and disbar from further practice before his Department any such person, agent, or attorney shown to be incompetent, disreputable, or who refuses to comply with the said rules and regulations, or who shall with intent to defraud, in any manner willfully and knowingly deceive, mislead, or threaten any claimant or prospective claimant, by work, circular, letter, or by advertisement. *Act of July 7, 1884 (23 Stat. Priority of sureties. Mar. 2, 1799, c. 22, s. 65, v. 1, p. 676. Sec. 3468, R. S.

247. Whenever the principal in any bond given to the United States is insolvent, or whenever, such principal being deceased, his estate and effects which come to the hands of his executor, administrator, or assignee, are insufficient for the payment of his debts, and, in either of such cases, any surety on the bond, or the executor, administrator, or assignee of such surety pays to the United States the money due upon such bond, such surety, his executor, administrator, or assignee, shall have the like priority for the recovery and receipt of the moneys out of the estate and effects of such insolvent or deceased principal as is secured to the United States; and may bring and maintain a suit upon the bond, in law or equity, in his own name, for the recovery of all moneys paid thereon.[2]

DISCHARGE OF POOR DEBTORS.

Par.
248. Discharge by Secretary of Treasury.
Par.
249. Discharge by President.

Discharge of poor debtor by Secretary of the Treasury. June 6, 1798, c. 49, ss. 1, 3, v. 1, pp. 561, 562. Sec. 3471, R. S.

248. Any person imprisoned upon execution issuing from any court of the United States, for a debt due to the United States, which he is unable to pay, may, at any time after commitment, make application in writing, to the Secretary of the Treasury, stating the circumstances of his case, and his inability to discharge the debt; and thereupon the Secretary may make, or require to be made, an examination and inquiry into the circumstances of the debtor, by the oath of the debtor, which the Secretary, or any other person by him specially appointed, is authorized to administer, or otherwise, as the Secretary shall deem necessary and expedient, to ascertain the truth; and upon proof made to his satisfaction, that the debtor is unable to pay the debt for which he is imprisoned, and that he has not concealed or made any conveyance of his estate, in trust, for himself, or with an intent to defraud the United States, or to deprive them of their legal priority, the Secretary is authorized to receive from such debtor any deed, assignment, or conveyance of his real or personal estate, or any collateral security, to the use of the United States. Upon a compliance by the debtor with such terms and conditions as the Secretary may judge reasonable and proper, the Secretary must issue his order, under his hand, to the keeper of the prison, directing him to discharge the debtor from his imprisonment under such execution. The debtor shall not be liable to be imprisoned again for the debt; but the judgment shall remain in force, and may be satisfied out of any estate which may then, or at any time afterward, belong to the debtor. The benefit of this section shall not be extended to any person imprisoned for any fine, forfeiture, or penalty, incurred by a breach of any law of the United States, or for moneys had and received by any officer, agent, or other person, for their use; nor shall its provisions extend to any claim arising under the postal laws.[1]

249. Whenever any person is imprisoned upon execution for a debt due to the United States, which he is unable to pay, and his case is such as does not authorize his discharge by the Secretary of the Treasury, under the preceding section, he may make application to the President, who, upon proof made to his satisfaction that the debtor is unable to pay the debt, and upon a compliance by the debtor with such terms and conditions as the President shall deem proper, may order the discharge of such debtor from his imprisonment. The debtor shall not be liable to be imprisoned again for the same debt; but the judgment shall remain in force, and may be satisfied out of any estate which may then, or at any time afterward, belong to the debtor.[2]

SUITS TO RECOVER BALANCES DUE THE UNITED STATES.

250. Whenever any person accountable for public money neglects or refuses to pay into the Treasury the sum or balance reported to be due to the United States upon the adjustment of his account, the [Auditors under the direction of the] Comptroller of the Treasury shall institute suit for the recovery of the same, adding to the sum stated to be due on such account the commissions of the delinquent, which shall be forfeited in every instance where suit is commenced and judgment obtained thereon, and an interest of six per centum from the time of receiving the money until it shall be repaid into the Treasury.[1] *Section 4, act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. Execution against officer.
May 15, 1820, c. 107, s. 2, v. 3, p. 593.
Sec. 3627, R. S.

253. The marshal authorized to execute any warrant of distress shall, by himself or by his deputy, proceed to levy and collect the sum remaining due, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such delinquent officer, having given ten days' previous notice of such intended sale, by affixing an advertisement of the articles to be sold at two or more public places in the town and county where the goods or chattels were taken, or in the town or county where the owner of such goods or chattels may reside. If the goods and chattels be not sufficient to satisfy the warrant, the same may be levied upon the person of such officer, who may be committed to prison, there to remain until discharged by due course of law.

Postponement of proceedings for nonaccounting, when allowed.
May 15, 1820, c. 107, s. 3, v. 3, p. 594.
Sec. 3635, R.S.

262. Any person who considers himself aggrieved by any warrant of distress issued under the foregoing provisions may prefer a bill of complaint to any district judge of the United States, setting forth therein the nature and extent of the injury of which he complains; and thereupon the judge may grant an injunction to stay proceedings on such warrant altogether, or for so much thereof as the nature of the case requires. But no injunction shall issue till the party applying for it gives bond, with sufficient security, in a sum to be prescribed by the judge, for the performance of such judgment as may be awarded against him; nor shall the issuing of such injunction in any manner impair the lien produced by the issuing of the warrant. And the same proceedings shall be had on such injunction as in other cases, except that no answer shall be necessary on

Sec. 3637, R. S.

263. When the district judge refuses to grant an injunction to stay proceedings on a distress warrant, as aforesaid, or dissolves such injunction after it is granted, any person who considers himself aggrieved by the decision in the premises may lay before the circuit justice, or circuit judge of the circuit within which such district lies, a copy of the proceeding had before the district judge; and thereupon the circuit justice or circuit judge may grant an injunction, or permit an appeal, as the case may be, if, in his opinion, the equity of the case requires it. The same proceedings, subject to the same conditions, shall be had upon such injunction in the circuit court as are prescribed in the district court.

271. All sums appropriated for the various branches of expenditure in the public service shall be applied solely to the objects for which they are respectively made, and for no others.[1]

No expenditures beyond appropriations.

272. No Department of the Government shall expend, in any one fiscal year, any sum in excess of appropriations made by Congress for that fiscal year, or involve the Government in any contract for the future payment of money in excess of such appropriations.[1]

[1] An appropriation by Congress of a given sum of money for a named purpose is not the designation of a specific fund for that purpose, but simply a legal authority to apply so much of any money in the Treasury to the indicated object. Every appropriation for the payment of a particular demand, or a class of demands, necessarily involves and includes the recognition by Congress of the legality and justice of each demand and is equivalent to an express mandate to the Treasury officers to pay it. This recognition is not affected by any previous adverse action of Congress, for the last expression by that body supersedes all such previous action. Hukill v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 562, 585. When an appropriation has been made by Congress for a general purpose, contemplating a multitude of acts to be done by the Department, its agency is general within those limits. Leavitt v. U. S., 34 F. R., 623. When an alleged liability of the Government rests wholly upon an appropriation, they must stand or fall together, so that when the latter is exhausted the former comes to an end. Shipman v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 138.

The disposition of public money is in the discretion of Congress, and its reasons for passing an act of appropriation and the consideration thereof can not be inquired into nor its will thwarted by any executive officers or by the courts. Mumford v. U. S., 31 Ct. Cls., 210, 215; Jordan v. U. S., 19; Ibid., 108; 113, U. S., 418. In view of the requirements of this section a disbursing officer is not authorized to use public moneys advanced to him from one appropriation in the payment of liabilities arising under another appropriation. IV Comp. Dec., 569.

Administrative discretion in expenditures.—Ordinarily, where discretionary power is lodged in a judicial officer, his decision is not reviewable save by the court of which he is a member, and then only when there has been a clear abuse of the discretion committed to him. Far more cogent reasons exist why this rule should be applied to administrative officers, who are empowered to use their discretion as to the manner in which public moneys shall be expended, for great embarrassment and confusion might result if officers in one Executive Department could sit in judgment upon the decisions of the officers of another Executive Department in cases involving the exercise of judgment and discretion. III Comp. Dec., 21. Wherever the exercise of discretion by the War Department in disbursing moneys appropriated for the support of the Army is permitted by a statute, the manner in which such discretion has been exercised is a matter of administration with which the accounting officers have no concern. It is the province of the military authorities to determine the needs of a given military depot or post and the quantity of a specified article to be allotted to said depot or post, while it is the province of the accounting officers to determine whether or not Congress has made an appropriation covering a specific expenditure, or whether or not such expenditure was made in conformity with law. Ibid., 21. The degree of wisdom displayed in the exercise of the discretion given an officer of the Army, under the authority of the Secretary of War, is not a subject for review by the accounting officers. If the officer is responsible for his action in the premises to anyone, it is to the source from which he derived his authority. Ibid., 22.

The evidence required by the War Department from the disbursing officers and agents of the Army for administrative purposes is a matter peculiarly within the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War. Ibid., 497.

This section, however, shall not extend to the contingent fund connected with the foreign intercourse of the Government, placed at the disposal of the President.

[1] The legal liability of the Government does not generally depend upon appropriations. The constitutional provision, in Article I, section 9, that "no money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law," is a mere limitation and restriction upon the executive officers of the Treasury Department, and does not prevent Congress, the law-making power, from involving the Government in contracts to pay money to any extent. When such contracts are made, the parties who acquire rights to compensation thereunder must wait until an appropriation is made before they can receive their money, but the right on their part and the obligation on the part of the United States remain unchanged. Failing to obtain direct appropriations for their benefit, public creditors may sue in this court and thus obtain payment out of any money appropriated for the payment and satisfaction of private claims. Mitchell v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 281, 286. The excepting clause in section 3732, Revised Statutes (a) in relation to contracts for and purchases of clothing, subsistence, forage, fuel, quarters, etc., operates to withdraw such contracts and purchases from the prohibition contained in this paragraph in relation to expenditures in excess of the appropriations for a particular fiscal year, and such purchases may be made, provided the necessities of the current fiscal year be not exceeded.

A deficiency appropriation is one made to pay a liability legally created, for the payment of which an appropriation previously made is insufficient; it supplements the original appropriation, partakes of its nature, and is subject to the same limitations which attach by law to the use of the original appropriation. IV Comp. Dec., 61.

[2] The Revised Statutes (section 3682) forbid money appropriated for contingent, incidental, or miscellaneous purposes being used for official or clerical compensation. The adjectives "contingent," "incidental," and "miscellaneous" have a technical and well-understood meaning; and, where a specific appropriation is made for specific objects, such as clerks, messengers, light, fuel, no disbursement can be made therefor from the appropriation for "miscellaneous expenses." 22 Ct. Cls., 269. See, also, for other statutory provisions respecting the disbursement of contingent funds, paragraphs 42 and 54 to 60 ante.

The words "contingent expenses" as employed in acts making appropriations, means such incidental, casual, and unforeseen expenses as are necessary and appropriate to the execution of duties required by law in connection with the object for which the appropriation was made. IV Comp. Dec., 287. There is no discretion conferred upon the heads of departments to use such appropriations for other purposes. Ibid.

For payment of bounty to soldiers, or their widows or legal heirs, under the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth sections of "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and for other purposes."[2]

Apr. 12, 1871, c. 12, ss. 1, 2, v. 17, pp. 641, 642.

Payment to certain military organizations in Kansas:

To pay to the members of the military organizations known as the Westport Police Guards, Hickman's Mills Company, and Companies A, B, C, D, and E of the Kansas City Station Guards, under private act of April twelve, eighteen hundred and seventy-one, chapter twelve, the pay and allowances of volunteers in the service of the United States.

Traveling expenses of California and Nevada volunteers:

Mar. 2, 1867, c. 170, s. 7, v. 14, p. 487.

To pay for the traveling expenses of such California and Nevada volunteers as were discharged in New Mexico, Arizona, or Utah, and at points distant from the place or places of enlistment, such proportionate sum, according to the distance traveled, as has been paid to the troops of other States similarly situated.

[1] Permanent appropriations are those made for an unlimited period. Indefinite appropriations are those in which no amount is named. XIII Opin. Att. Gen., 289. A "permanent specific appropriation" is one which requires the money payable by virtue of it to be applied to an object specifically pointed out by law, and which may be so applied at any time in the future, and not merely for the service of the current fiscal year. It exists when the act of Congress which made it points out the purpose to which it applies, and shows that it was intended to be used in the future, without limit as to time. If the object to which it is to be applied has no reference to, or connection with, the service of any particular year, the appropriation may be considered as permanent, where such intention is apparent in the act making it. If it be for the discharge of an existing obligation having no connection with the service of the current year, and not in part discharge of a continuous service, it may reasonably be supposed that Congress intended the liability to be paid without reference to time. 2 Lawrence, Compt. Dec., 2d ed., 246; III Compt. Dec., 623, 625.

[2] By the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 343), the clause of the above section making a permanent appropriation for the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers was repealed.

Allowance for reduction of wages under eight-hour law:

May 18, 1872, c. 172, s. 2, v. 17, p. 134.

Of such sum as may be required in the settlement of all accounts for the services of laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed by or on behalf of the Government, between the twenty-fifth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, the date of the act constituting eight hours a day's work for all such laborers, workmen, and mechanics, and the nineteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, the date of the proclamation of the President concerning such pay, to settle and pay for the same without reduction on account of reduction of hours of labor by said act, when it shall be made to appear that such was the sole cause of the reduction of wages. Annual appropriation for arms and equipments.

Apr. 23, 1808, c. 55, s. 1, v. 2, p. 490; Apr. 29, 1816, c. 135, s. 1, v. 3, p. 320; Mar. 3, 1875, c. 133, s. 3, v. 18, p. 455; Feb. 12, 1887, v. 24, p. 401.

Sec. 1661, R.S.

277. The sum of one million dollars is hereby annually appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of providing arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the militia.[1] Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 662).

Tolls not to be levied or collected on canals, etc.

Sec. 4, July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 147.

Payments for actual expenses of operation and repair authorized.

278. No tolls or operating charges whatsoever shall be levied or collected upon any vessel or vessels, dredges, or other passing water craft through any canal or other work for the improvement of navigation belonging to the United States; and for the purpose of preserving and continuing the use and navigation of said canals, rivers, and other public works without interruption, the Secretary of War, upon the application of the chief engineer in charge of said works, is hereby authorized to draw his warrant or requisition from time to time upon the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the actual expenses of operating and keeping said works in repair, which warrants or requisitions shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, however, That an itemized statement of said expenses shall accompany the annual report of the Chief of Engineers. Sec. 4, act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 147).

[1] By the act of April 23, 1808 (2 Stat. L., 490, sec. 1661, R. S.), a permanent appropriation of $200,000 was authorized for arming and equipping the militia. This appropriation was increased to $400,000 by the act of February 12, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 401). By the act of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 372), it was provided that the appropriation should not lapse as to any unexpended portion in any fiscal year, but that such unexpended portion should constitute a fund to be applied to the purpose contemplated by the statute. By the act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 662), the annual appropriation was increased to $1,000,000.

APPLICATION OF BALANCES.

Par.
279. To be covered into the Treasury at the end of fiscal year.
280. Appropriations for public buildings exempt from being covered in.
281, 282. Disposition of balances after two years.

Application of balances of appropriations. July 12, 1870, c. 251, s. 5, v. 16, p. 251. Sec. 3690, R. S.

279. All balances of appropriations contained in the annual appropriation bills and made specifically for the service of any fiscal year, and remaining unexpended at the expiration of such fiscal year, shall only be applied to the payment of expenses properly incurred during that year, or to the fulfillment of contracts properly made within that year; and balances not needed for such purposes shall be carried to the surplus fund. This section, however, shall not apply to appropriations known as permanent or indefinite appropriations.[1]

Exemption in respect to public buildings. June 23, 1874, v. 18, p. 275.

280. All moneys heretofore appropriated for the construction of public buildings and now remaining to the credit of the same on the books of the Treasury Department, or which may hereafter be appropriated for such buildings, shall remain available until the completion of the work for which they are, or may be, appropriated. And upon the final completion of said buildings, and the payment of all outstanding liabilities therefor, the balance

[1] The use of every fiscal-year appropriation is limited by section 3690 of the Revised Statutes and by its own terms to the payment of expenses properly incurred during the fiscal year for which it is made, or to the fulfillment of contracts properly made within that year; and balances not needed for such purposes must be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury in conformity with the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874. (18 Stat. L., 110); 3 Dig., 2d Compt. Dec., par. 96. The use of any part of an appropriation made for one fiscal year for the payment of any liability incurred during a succeeding fiscal year is prohibited by section 3679 as well as by section 3690 of the Revised Statutes. Ibid., par. 99.

An appropriation is properly chargeable with all the expenses necessary to accomplish the object for which it is made, unless particular items of expense are specifically provided for by some other appropriation. IV Compt. Dec. 24, I ibid., 472, 517; II ibid., 74; III ibid., 623. There is no authority under an act of appropriation, made specifically for the service of a particular fiscal year, to enter into a contract for supplies, etc., for the service of a subsequent fiscal year, and therefore, as to that appropriation, such a contract is not "properly made within that year," within the meaning of section 3690, Revised Statutes. IV ibid., 553. While it is a rule that a specific appropriation excludes the use, for the same objects, of a general appropriation, yet when there are two appropriations both applicable to the same object they are to be treated as cumulative, and either or both can be used in the discretion of the head of the Department. Ibid., 121. See, also, I ibid., 533. The balance of an appropriation which has been treated as not limited to a fiscal year will, upon the accomplishment of the object for which it was made, be covered into the Treasury, in analogy to the practice required by law (a) in the case of balances of appropriations for the construction of public buildings. I Compt. Dec., 487.

An appropriation found in an annual appropriation act and made specifically for the service of a certain fiscal year is not available thereafter except in payment of expenses properly incurred, or in the fulfillment of contracts properly made within the year as provided in section 3690 of the Revised Statutes. I Compt. Dec., 170.

or balances remaining shall be immediately covered into the Treasury. Act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 275).

Disposal of balances after two years.
Sec. 6, ibid.
June 20, 1874, c. 328, v. 18, p. 110.
Sec. 3691, R. S.

281. All balances of appropriations which shall have remained on the books of the Treasury, without being drawn against in the settlement of accounts, for two years from the date of the last appropriation made by law, shall be reported by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Auditor of the Treasury, whose duty it is to settle accounts thereunder, and the Auditor shall examine the books of his office, and certify to the Secretary whether such balances will be required in the settlement of any accounts pending in his office; and if it appears that such balances will not be required for this purpose, then the Secretary may include such balances in his surplus-fund warrant, whether the head of the proper Department shall have certified that it may be carried into the general Treasury or not. But no appropriation for the payment of the interest or principal of the public debt, or to which a longer duration is given by law, shall be thus treated.

June 20, 1874, s. 5, v. 18, p. 85.

282. From and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, and of each year thereafter, the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause all unexpended balances of appropriations which have remained upon the books of the Treasury for two fiscal years to be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury: Provided, That this provision shall not apply to permanent specific appropriations, appropriations for rivers and harbors, light-houses, fortifications, public buildings, or the pay of the Navy and Marine Corps; but the appropriations named in this proviso shall continue available until otherwise ordered by Congress. Sec. 5, Act of June 20, 1784 (18 Stat. L., 85).

DESIGNATED DEPOSITORIES.

289. All national banking associations, designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be depositaries of public money, except receipts from customs, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary, but receipts derived from duties on imports in Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, and other islands under the jurisdiction of the United States may be deposited in such depositaries subject to such regulations; and such depositaries may also be employed as financial agents of the Government; and they shall perform all such reasonable duties as depositaries of public moneys and financial agents of the Government as may be required of them. The Secretary of the Treasury shall require the associations thus designated to give satisfactory security, by the deposit of United States bonds and otherwise, for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of public money deposited with them, and for the faithful performance of their duties as financial agents of the Government. And every association so designated as receiver or depositary of the public money shall take and receive at par all of the national currency bills, by whatever association issued, which have been paid into the Government for internal revenue or for loans or stocks. Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 1448).

National banks as depositories.

Mar. 3, 1901, v. 31, p. 1448.

Sec. 5153, R. S.

290. In places * * * where there is no treasurer or assistant treasurer, the Secretary of the Treasury may, when he deems it essential to the public interest, specially authorize in writing the deposit of such public money in any public depository, or, in writing, authorize the same to be kept in any other manner, and under such rules and regulations as he may deem most safe and effectual to facilitate the payments to public creditors.

Depositories.

Sec. 3620, R. S.

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to designate one or more banks or bankers in the Philippine Islands and in the islands of Cuba and Porto Rico in which public moneys may be deposited: Provided, That the banks or bankers thus designated shall give satisfactory security for the safe-keeping and prompt payment of the public moneys so deposited by depositing in the Treasury United States bonds to an amount not less than the aggregate sum at any time on deposit with such banks or bankers: And provided further, That this act shall apply to Cuba only while occupied by the United States. Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 658).

DISBURSING AGENTS.

Par.
291. Collectors to act as disbursing agents.
292. Special disbursing agents.
293. Limit on compensation.
294. Compensation of certain disbursing agents.
295. Bonds of special agents.
295a. Expenses of fiscal agents.

Collectors to act as disbursing agents. June 12, 1858, c. 154, s. 17, v. 11, p. 327. Sec. 3657, R. S.

291. The collectors of customs in the several collection districts are required to act as disbursing agents for the payment of all moneys that are or may hereafter be appropriated for the construction of custom-houses, court-houses, post-offices, and marine hospitals; with such compensation, not exceeding one-quarter of one per centum, as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem equitable and just. (See sec. 255.)

Special disbursing agents. July 28, 1866, c. 302, v. 14, p. 341. Sec. 3658, R. S.

292. Where there is no collector at the place of location of any public work specified in the preceding section, the Secretary of the Treasury may appoint a disbursing agent for the payment of all moneys appropriated for the construction of any such public work, with such compensation as he may deem equitable and just.

Limit on extra compensation. Mar. 3, 1869, v. 15, p. 112. Mar. 3, 1875, v. 18, p. 415. Sec. 3654, R. S.

293. No extra compensation exceeding one-eighth of one per centum shall in any case be allowed or paid to any officer, person, or corporation for disbursing moneys appropriated to the construction of any public building.[1]

Compensation of certain disbursing agents. Aug. 7, 1882, v. 22, p. 306.

294. Any disbursing agent who has been or may be appointed to disburse any appropriation for any United States court-house and post-office, or other building or grounds, not located within the city of Washington, shall be entitled to the compensation allowed by law to collectors of customs for such amounts as have been or may be disbursed. Act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 306).

[1] Section 4 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 402), contained the requirement that this section "was intended and shall be deemed and held to limit the compensation to be allowed to any disbursing officer who disbursed moneys appropriated for and expended in the construction of any public building to three-eighths of one per centum for said services."

295. Whenever it becomes necessary for the head of any Department or office to employ special agents, other than officers of the Army or Navy, who may be charged with the disbursement of public moneys, such agents shall, before entering upon duty, give bond in such form and with such security as the head of the Department or office employing them may approve. Sec. 3614, R. S.

Sec. 3615, R.S.

299. All collectors and receivers of public money of every description, within the District of Columbia, shall, as often as they may be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury or the Postmaster-General so to do, pay over to the Treasurer of the United States, at the Treasury, all public moneys collected by them or in their hands. All such collectors and receivers of public moneys within the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, San Francisco, Baltimore, Charleston, and St. Louis shall, upon the same direction, pay over to the assistant treasurers in their respective cities, at their offices, respectively, all the public moneys collected by them, or in their hands; to be safely kept by the respective depositaries, until otherwise disposed of according to law. It shall be the duty of the Secretary and Postmaster-General, respectively, to direct such payments by the collectors and receivers at all the said places, at least as often as once in each week, and as much oftener as they may think proper.

Sec. 3620, R.S.

301. It shall be the duty of every disbursing officer having any public money intrusted to him for disbursement to deposit the same with the Treasurer or some one of the assistant treasurers of the United States, and to draw for the same only as it may be required for payments to be made by him in pursuance of law [and draw for the same only in favor of the persons to whom payment is made]; and all transfers from the Treasurer of the United States to a disbursing officer shall be by draft or warrant on the Treasury or an assistant treasurer of the United States. In places, however, where there is no treasurer or assistant treasurer, the Secretary of the Treasury may, when he deems it essential to the public interest, specially authorize in writing the deposit of such public money in any other public depository, or, in writing, authorize the same to be kept in any other manner, and under such rules and regulations as he may deem most safe and effectual to facilitate the payments to public creditors. 315. This oath or affirmation may be taken before any officer, civil or military, holding a commission under the United States, and such officer is hereby authorized to administer and certify such oath or affirmation. Ibid.

CLASSIFICATION OF MAIL MATTER.

Classes of mail matter. Mar. 3, 1879, s. 7, v. 20, p. 358.

316. Mailable matter shall be divided into four classes:

First, written matter;

Second, periodical publications;

Third, miscellaneous printed matter;

Fourth, merchandise.

First class.

Mailable matter of the first class shall embrace letters, postal cards, and all matters wholly or partly in writing, except as hereinafter provided.[1]

RATES OF LETTER POSTAGE.

Rates of postage. Mar. 3, 1885, vol. 23, p. 386.

Soldiers' letters.

317. On mailable matter of the first class, except postal cards and drop letters, postage shall be prepaid at the rate of two cents for each ounce or fraction thereof; postal cards shall be transmitted through the mails at a postage charge of one cent each, including the cost of manufacture; and drop letters shall be mailed at the rate of two cents per ounce or fraction thereof, including delivery at letter-carrier offices, and one cent for each ounce or fraction thereof where free delivery by carrier is not established. The Postmaster-General may, however, provide by regulation, for transmitting unpaid and duly certified letters of soldiers, sailors, and marines in the service of the United States to their destination, to be paid on delivery.[2] Act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 386).

SPECIAL DELIVERY.

Special-delivery stamps. Sec. 3, Mar. 3, 1885, vol. 23, p. 386.

318. A special stamp of the face valuation of ten cents may be provided and issued, whenever deemed advisable or expedient, in such form and bearing such device as may meet the approval of the Postmaster-General, which, when attached to a letter, in addition to the lawful postage thereon, the delivery of which is to be at a free-delivery office, or at any city, town, or village containing a population of four thousand or over, according to the Federal census, shall be regarded as entitling such letter to immediate delivery within the carrier limit of any free-delivery office which may be designated by the Postmaster-General as a special-delivery office, or within one mile of the post-office at any other office coming within the provisions of this section which may in like manner be designated as a special-delivery office. Sec. 3, act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 386).

[1] For description of matter embraced in the second, third, and fourth classes see the act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 358).

[2] This statute replaces the corresponding provision of the act of March 3, 1879, (20 Stat. L., 358.)

Specially stamped letters to be delivered. Sec. 4, ibid.

319. Such specially stamped letters shall be delivered from seven o'clock ante meridian up to twelve o'clock midnight at offices designated by the Postmaster-General under section three of this act. Sec. 4, ibid.

OFFICIAL LETTERS.

Letters, etc., on official business may be sent free.

Sec. 5, Mar. 3, 1877, v. 19, p. 335.

Penalty for using official envelopes to avoid payment of postage

320. It shall be lawful to transmit through the mail, free of postage, any letters, packages, or other matters relating exclusively to the business of the Government of the United States: Provided, That every such letter or package to entitle it to pass free shall bear over the words "Official business" an endorsement showing also the name of the department, and, if from a bureau or office, the names of the department and bureau or office, as the case may be, whence transmitted. And if any person shall make use of any such official envelope to avoid the payment of postage on his private letter, package, or other matter in the mail, the person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and subject to a fine of three hundred dollars, to be prosecuted in any court of competent jurisdiction.[1] Sec. 5, act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 335).

Official envelopes to be provided. Sec. 6, ibid.

Indorsement thereon.

321. For the purpose of carrying this act into effect, it shall be the duty of each of the Executive Departments of the United States to provide for itself and its subordinate offices the necessary envelopes; and in addition to the indorsement designating the department in which they are to be used, the penalty for the unlawful use of these envelopes shall be stated thereon. Sec. 6, ibid.

[1] For regulations respecting the use of penalty envelopes in the transmission of official correspondence, see paragraphs 813–817 Army Regulations of 1895, Circular 12, A. G. O., 1895; Circulars of June 29, 1895; July 13, 1895, and G. O. 8, A. G. O., 1897.

These envelopes are for use in domestic correspondence only, and will not cover the transportation of letters to foreign countries, upon which postage stamps must be used.

Senators, members, etc., may send documents free
Sec. 7, ibid.

322. Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress, the Secretary of the Senate, and Clerk of the House of Representatives may send and receive through the mail all public documents printed by order of Congress;[1] and the name of each Senator, Representative, Delegate, Secretary of the Senate, and Clerk of the House shall be written thereon, with the proper designation of the office he holds; and the provisions of this section shall apply to each of the persons named therein until the first day of December following the expiration of their respective terms of office. Sec. 7, ibid.

How franked.

Correspondence with officials, etc.
June 3, 1898, v. 30, p. 443.

323. Hereafter the Vice-President, Members and Members-elect of and Delegates and Delegates-elect to Congress shall have the privilege of sending free through the mails, and under their frank, any mail matter to any Government official or to any person, correspondence not exceeding two ounces in weight, upon official or departmental business. Act of June 3, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 443).

Extension of franking privilege.
Sec. 3, July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 158.

324, 325. The provisions of the fifth and sixth sections of the act entitled "An act establishing post routes, and for other purposes" approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, for the transmission of official mail matter, be, and they are hereby, extended to all officers of the United States Government, not including members of Congress, the envelopes of such matter in all cases to bear appropriate indorsements containing the proper designation of the office from which or officer from whom the same is transmitted, with a statement of the penalty for their misuse. And the provisions of said fifth and sixth sections are hereby likewise extended and made applicable to all official mail matter of the Smithsonian Institution. Sec. 3, act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 158).

Official mail matter of Smithsonian Institution.

Return penalty envelopes.

326. Any Department or officer authorized to use the penalty envelopes may inclose them with return address to any person or persons from or through whom official information is desired, the same to be used only to cover such official information, and indorsements relating thereto. Ibid.

Mail matter of Executive Departments, etc., may be registered free.

327. Any letter or packet to be registered by either of the Executive Departments, or bureaus thereof, or by the Agricultural Department, or by the Public Printer, may be registered without the payment of any registry fee; and any part paid letter or packet addressed to either of said departments or bureaus may be delivered free; but where there is good reason to believe the omission to prepay the full postage thereon was intentional, such letter or packet shall be returned to the sender: Provided further, That this act shall not extend or apply to pension agents or other officers who receive a fixed allowance as compensation for their services, including expenses of postages. And section thirty-nine hundred and fifteen of the Revised Statutes of the United States, so far as the same relates to stamps and stamped envelopes for official purposes, is hereby repealed. Sec. 3, act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 158).

PURCHASE OF ENVELOPES FOR USE OF THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

Postmaster-General to contract for all envelopes for Executive Departments.
Sec. 96, Jan. 12, 1895, v. 28, p. 624.

328. The Postmaster-General shall contract for all envelopes, stamped or otherwise, designed for sale to the public, or for use by his own or other Departments, and may contract for them to be plain or with such printed matter as may be prescribed by the Department making requisition therefor: Provided, That no envelope furnished by the Government shall contain any business address or advertisement.[1] Sec. 96, act of January 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 624).

ESTABLISHMENT OF POST-OFFICES AT MILITARY CAMPS.

June 6, 1898, v. 30, p. 432.

329. During the continuance of the existing war the Postmaster-General may, in his discretion, establish a temporary post-office at any military post or camp for the purpose of supplying the officers and troops there encamped with mails, the location of which post-office may at any time be changed to any other post or camp. On the establishment of such post-office he shall cooperate with the Secretary of War or officer commanding such post or camp for the purpose of securing the detail of an officer of the Regular or Volunteer Army of suitable rank to act as postmaster, who shall, when the exigency will permit, execute a bond to the United States as such, and of a sufficient number of noncommissioned officers and privates to act as clerks in said post-office, who shall serve as such without additional salary, pay, or compensation other than that attaching to their rank and position in the Army. Each of said persons shall, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, take the oath prescribed for persons employed in the postal service. In any case where it is deemed impracticable by the military authorities to detail persons from the Army to act as postmaster or clerks the Postmaster-General is authorized to appoint a civilian as postmaster, and also to make a special order allowing to him reasonable compensation for clerical services and to meet the necessary expenses of said office, as well as a proportionate increase of salary to the postmaster during the period of such extraordinary business as may attach to his office, under the provisions of section thirty-eight hundred and sixty-three, Revised Statutes, payable out of the appropriations for the postal service. He may also provide for the issue and payment of money orders at any post-office established under the provisions of this act after the postmaster shall have given bond as required by law. Act of June 6, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 432).

[1] In the event of an exigency requiring the immediate delivery of envelopes, the head of the Department in which the exigency exists may make the purchase required by the exigency. XXI Opin. Att. Gen., 181.

Supplies.

330. The Postmaster-General shall supply to post-offices referred to in the preceding section all necessary postage stamps, stamped envelopes, postal cards, and other supplies of whatever description. He may also prescribe regulations for the conduct of the business at such post-offices in conformity, so far as the same may be applicable, to the regulations relating to the ordinary postal service. Sec. 2, ibid.

Branch offices.

331. In any case where, in the judgment of the Postmaster-General, any military post or camp can be better and more economically supplied by a branch post-office, he may, without reference to its distance from the main office, establish the same and meet the expenses thereof by special order, as in the case of post-offices referred to in the preceding section. [1]Sec. 3, ibid.

[1] The act of June 2, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 253), and subsequent acts of appropriation make provision for the "postal service in the Philippine Islands or territory held by military occupation, and for additional transportation to and from said territory, also including postal service for military camps or stations, to be used in the discretion of the Postmaster-General."

The district attorneys of the United States, upon the application of the Attorney-General, shall furnish any assistance or information in their power in relation to the titles of the public property lying within their respective districts. And the Secretaries of the Departments, upon the application of the Attorney-General, shall procure any additional evidence of title which he may deem necessary, and which may not be in the possession of the officers of the Government, and the expense of procuring it shall be paid out of the appropriations made for the contingencies of the Departments respectively.[1]

Suspension of statute in cases of emergency.
J. R. 18, Apr. 11, 1898, v. 30, p. 737.

335. In case of emergency when, in the opinion of the President, the immediate erection of any temporary fort or fortification is deemed important and urgent, such temporary fort or fortification may be constructed upon the written consent of the owner of the land upon which such work is to be placed; and the requirements of section three hundred and fifty-five of the Revised Statutes shall not be applicable in such cases. Joint Res. No. 18, of April 11, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 751).

[1] The Attorney-General in certifying the title of land purchased by the Government must look at the question as one of pure law, and can not relax the rules of law on account either of the desirableness of the object or the smallness of the value of the land. VI Opin. Att. Gen., 432. See the chapters entitled THE PUBLIC LANDS, CONTRACTS AND PURCHASES, AND THE CORPS OF ENGINEERS. See, also, I Compt. Dec., 348.

[2] The Attorney-General is not authorized to give an official opinion in any case, except on the call of the President or some one of the heads of Departments. I Opin. Att. Gen., 211. Subordinate officers of the Government who desire an official opinion of the Attorney-General must seek it through the head of the Department to which they are accountable. Ibid.

Reference of questions by Attorney-General to subordinates.
June 22, 1870, c. 170, s. 4, v. 16, p. 162.
Sec. 358, R. S.

339. Any question of law submitted to the Attorney-General for his opinion, except questions involving a construction of the Constitution of the United States, may be by him referred to such of his subordinates as he may deem appropriate, and he may require the written opinion thereon of the officer to whom the same may be referred. If the opinion given by such officer is approved by the Attorney-General, such approval indorsed thereon shall give the opinion the same force and effect as belong to the opinions of the Attorney-General.[2]

Sec. 359, R. S.

340. Except when the Attorney-General in particular cases otherwise directs, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General shall conduct and argue suits and writs of error and appeals in the Supreme Court and suits in the Court of Claims in which the United States is interested, and the Attorney-General may, whenever he deems it for the interest of the United States, either in person conduct and argue any case in any court of the United States in which the United States is interested, or may direct the Solicitor-General or any officer of the Department of Justiceto to do so.

[1] The Attorney-General will only give official opinions on questions of law arising on facts which are authoritatively stated by a head of Department. X ibid., 267. He has no authority to settle questions of fact, nor to give advice on questions of law, except for the assistance of the officer calling for his opinion on points stated. He takes the facts as they are stated to him and predicates his opinion on them. III ibid., 309. It is not the duty of the Attorney-General to give opinions on questions of fact, nor to review the proceedings of a court-martial in search of questions of law. V ibid., 626.

The Attorney-General will not give a speculative opinion on an abstract question of law, which does not arise in any case presented for the action of an Executive Department. XI ibid., 189. Nor will he review the opinion of a former Attorney-General, unless a proper case is presented therefor, and submitted by the head of a Department. Ibid.

Where an official opinion from the Attorney-General is desired on questions of law arising on any case, the request should be accompanied by a statement of the material facts in the case, and also the precise questions on which advice is wanted. XIV ibid., 367. See note to paragraph 339, post.

[2] The opinions of successive Attorneys-General, possessed of greater or less amount of legal acumen, acquirement, and experience, have come to constitute a body of legal precedents and exposition, having authority the same in kind, if not the same in degree, with decisions of the courts of justice. VI ibid., 326. The opinion of the Attorney-General for the time being is, in terms, advisory to the Secretary who calls for it; but it is obligatory as the law of the case unless, on appeal by such Secretary to the common superior of himself and the Attorney-General, namely, the President of the United States, it be by the latter overruled. VII ibid., 692. The Attorney-General will not give a speculative opinion, on an abstract question of law, which does not arise in any case presented for the action of an Executive Department. XIX ibid., 189. He will only give opinions on questions of law arising on facts which are authoritatively stated by a head of Department. X ibid., 267. Although the acts prescribing the duties of the Attorneys-General do not declare the effect of their advice, it has been the practice of the Departments to heed it. It has been found greatly advantageous, if not absolutely necessary, to have uniformity of action upon analogous questions and cases; and that result is more likely to be attained under the guidance of a single Department, constituted for the purpose, than by a disregard of its opinions and advice. V ibid., 97.

Sec. 361, R. S.

342. The officers of the Department of Justice, under the direction of the Attorney-General, shall give all opinions and render all services requiring the skill of persons learned in the law necessary to enable the President and heads of Departments, and the heads of Bureaus and other officers in the Departments, to discharge their respective duties; and shall, on behalf of the United States, procure the proper evidence for, and conduct, prosecute, or defend all suits and proceedings in the Supreme Court and in the Court of Claims, in which the United States, or any officer thereof, as such officer, is a party or may be interested; and no fees shall be allowed or paid to any other attorney or counselor at law for any service herein required of the officers of the Department of Justice, except in the cases provided by section three hundred and sixty-three.

Attendance of counsel.
Feb. 14, 1871, c. 51, s. 3, v. 16, p. 412.
Sec. 364, R. S.

343. Whenever the head of a Department or Bureau gives the Attorney-General due notice that the interests of the United States require the service of counsel upon the examination of witnesses touching any claim, or upon the legal investigation of any claim, pending in such Department or Bureau, the Attorney-General shall provide for such service.

June 22, 1870, c. 150, s. 5, v. 16, p. 162.
Sec. 367, R. S.

344. The Solicitor-General, or any officer of the Department of Justice, may be sent by the Attorney-General to any State or District in the United States to attend to the interests of the United States in any suit pending in any of the courts of the United States, or in the courts of any State, or to attend to any other interest of the United States.

Publication of opinions.

Sec. 383, R. S.

345. The Attorney-General shall from time to time cause to be edited, and printed at the Government Printing Office, an edition of one thousand copies of such of the opinions of the law officers herein authorized to be given as he may deem valuable for preservation in volumes, which shall be, as to size, quality of paper, printing, and binding, of uniform style and appearance, as nearly as practicable, with volume eight of such opinions, published, by Robert Farnham, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-eight. Each volume shall contain proper headnotes, a complete and full index, and such footnotes as the Attorney-General may approve. Such volumes shall be distributed in such manner as the Attorney-General may from time to time prescribe.[1]

[1] A justice of the Supreme Court may issue the writ in any part of the United States where he happens to be, and may make it returnable to himself, or may refer it to the court for determination. in term time or by a justice or judge of a Federal court, having jurisdiction to issue the writ, in vacation, or at any time, and may be issued by a justice of the Supreme Court in any part of the country, wherever he may be. Hurd, Hab. Corp., 214; U. S. v. Clarke, 100 U. S., 403. The usual course of proceeding is for the court, on the application of the prisoner for a writ of habeas corpus, to issue the writ and, on its return, to hear and dispose of the case; but where the cause of imprisonment is fully shown by the petition, the court may, without issuing the writ, consider and determine whether, upon the grounds presented in the petition, the prisoner, if brought before the court, would be discharged. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall., 2. Under the requirements of this section, the writ, though a matter of right, does not issue as a matter of course and may be refused if, upon the showing made in the petition, it appear that the petitioner, if brought into court would be remanded. In re King, 51 F. R., 434; In re Jordan, 49 F. R., 238; In re Haskell, 52 F. R., 795. Suspension of the privilege of the writ does not suspend the writ itself. The writ issues as a matter of course; and, on its return, the court decides whether the applicant is denied the privilege of proceeding any further. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall., 2.

[2] The duty of an officer of the Army upon whom a writ of habeas corpus is served is prescribed in the following paragraphs of the Army Regulations of 1901:

Should a writ of habeas corpus issued by a State court or judge be served upon an Army officer commanding him to produce an enlisted man or general prisoner and show cause for his detention, the officer will decline to produce in court the body of the person named in the writ, but will make respectful return in writing to the effect that the man is a duly enlisted soldier of the United States or a general prisoner under sentence of court-martial, as the case may be, and that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that a magistrate or court of a State has no jurisdiction in such a case.

A writ of habeas corpus issued by a United States court or judge will be promptly obeyed. The person alleged to be illegally restrained of his liberty will be taken before the court from which the writ has issued and a return made setting forth the reasons for his restraint. The officer upon whom such a writ is served will at once report by telegraph the fact of such service direct to the Adjutant-General of the Army and to the Commanding General of the Department.

1. The return under paragraph 1075, Army Regulations, will be made in accordance with Form A of this order, and will refer, as in last paragraph of that form, to the brief of authorities which follows the forms of this order, and a copy of that brief will be annexed to the return. Should the court order the discharge of the party, the officer making the return, or counsel, should note an appeal pending instructions from the War Department, and he will report to the Adjutant-General the action taken by the court and forward a copy of the opinion of the court as soon as it can be obtained.

2. The return under paragraph 1074, Army Regulations, will be made in accordance with Form B of this order, but a copy of the brief of authorities is not intended to be attached to the return to writ of habeas corpus issuing from a State court. G. O. 127, A. G. O., 1900.

FORM A.

HABEAS CORPUS BY UNITED STATES COURT.

RETURN TO WRIT.

In re (name of party held) ——— ———.

[Writ of habeas corpus—Return of respondent.]

To the (court or judge) ——— ———.

The respondent, Maj. ——— ———, U. S. Infantry, upon whom has been served a writ of habeas corpus for the production of ——— ———, respectfully makes return and states that he holds the said ——— ——— by authority of the United

Form of return. Feb. 5, 1867, c. 28, s. 1, v. 14, p. 385. Sec. 757, R. S.

352. The person to whom the writ is directed shall certify to the court, or justice, or judge before whom it is returnable the true cause of the detention of such party.

States as a soldier in the United States Army (or "as a general prisoner under sentence of general court-martial") under the following circumstances:

That the said ——— ——— was duly enlisted as a soldier in the service of the United States at ———, ———, on ——— —, 1900, for a term of —— years. [If the offense is fraudulent enlistment, this recital should be omitted.]

[Here state the offense. If it is fraudulent enlistment by representing himself to be of age, it may be stated as follows:]

That on the —— day of ———, 1900, at ———, ———, the said ——— ———, being then a minor, did fraudulently enlist in the military service of the United States for the term of —— years, by falsely representing himself to be over twenty-one years of age, to wit: —— years and —— months; and has, since said enlistment, received pay and allowances (or either) thereunder.

[If the offense is desertion, it may be stated substantially as follows:]

That the said ——— ——— deserted said service at ———, ———, on ——— —, 1900, and remained absent in desertion until he was apprehended at ———, ———, on ——— —, 1900, by ——— ———, and was thereupon committed to the custody of the respondent as commanding officer of the post of ——— ———.

The said ——— ——— has been placed in confinement (or "arrest," as the case may be), charged with said offense, and formal charges against him therefor have been preferred, a copy of which is hereto annexed (or "are being prepared"), and that he will be brought to trial thereon as soon as practicable before a court-martial to be convened by the commanding general of the Department of ——— (or "convened by Special Orders, No. ——, dated Headquarters Department of ———, ———, 1900, a copy of which order is hereto annexed").

[If the party held is a general prisoner, the following paragraph should be substituted for the preceding paragraph:]

That the said ——— ——— was duly arraigned for said offense before a general court-martial, convened by Special Orders, No. ——, dated Headquarters Department of ———, ———, 1900, was convicted thereof by said court, and was sentenced to be ———, which sentence was duly approved on the —— day of ———, 1900, by the officer ordering the court (or "by the officer commanding said Department of ——— for the time being"), as required by the 104th article of war. A copy of the order promulgating said sentence is hereto attached.

In obedience, however, to the said writ of habeas corpus the respondent herewith produces before the court the body of the said ———, respectfully refers to the decisions cited in the annexed brief, and for the reasons set forth in this return prays this honorable court to dismiss the said writ.

Major, —— U. S. Infantry.

Dated ——— ———,
——— ———, 1900.

FORM B.

HABEAS CORPUS BY STATE COURT.

RETURN TO WRIT.

[Make return as in case of writ by a United States court, except as to last paragraph, for which substitute as follows:]

And said respondent further makes return that he has not produced the body of the said ———, because he holds him by authority of the United States as above set forth, and that (this court or your honor, as the case may be) is without jurisdiction in the premises, and he respectfully refers to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in Ableman v. Booth, 21 Howard, 506, and Tarble's case, 13 Wallace, 397, as authority for his action, and prays (this court or your honor) to dismiss the writ.

tract of enlistment is not voidable by the minor, nor by his parents or guardian, if at the time of the filing of the petition the soldier is held in pursuance of a sentence of a court-martial, or any step has been taken with a view to bringing him before such court.

1. CONTRACT NOT VOIDABLE BY MINOR.

(a) When soldier is not in confinement.—United States ex rel. Wagner v. Gibbon, 24 Federal Reporter, 135. In this case Wagner, becoming "tired of the service," sought his discharge from the Army "solely on the ground of minority at the time of enlistment." This the court refused to grant, holding that section 1117, Revised Statutes, "was made for the exclusive benefit of parents and guardians," and that, quoting from the syllabus—

"A minor over sixteen years of age, who at the time of his enlistment makes affidavit that he is twenty-one years of age, will not, on his own application, be released on habeas corpus on the ground that he was a minor at the time of his enlistment, and that the written consent of his guardian was not obtained."

(b) When soldier is in confinement.—In re Morrissey, 137 United States, 157; In re Grimley, 137 United States, 147; In re Wall, 8 Federal Reporter, 85; In re Davison, 21 Federal Reporter, 618; In re Zimmerman, 30 Federal Reporter, 176; In re Hearn, 32 Federal Reporter, 141; In re Spencer, 40 Federal Reporter, 149; In re Lawler, 40 Federal Reporter, 233; Solomon v. Davenport, 87 Federal Reporter, 318.

In the Morrissey case the Supreme Court of the United States settles this beyond question. Morrissey, a minor of seventeen years of age, enlisted without the consent of his mother, who was living. He deserted, remained in concealment until he reached his majority, and then presented himself before a recruiting officer and demanded his discharge from the Army on the ground that he was a minor when enlisted. The court said that the provision of section 1117, Revised Statutes, "is for the benefit of the parent or guardian, * * * but it gives no privilege to the minor. * * * An enlistment is not a contract only, but effects a change of status. It is not, therefore, like an ordinary contract, voidable by the infant. * * * The contract of enlistment was good so far as the petitioner is concerned. He was not only de facto, but de jure, a soldier—amenable to military jurisdiction."

All the cases cited are instructive as illustrative of the different circumstances under which this principle has been declared.

In the Lawler case the deserter was arrested and "held as such awaiting trial, which will be as soon as a court-martial can be convened and organized for that purpose."

In the case of Solomon v. Davenport, the deserter was held by a sheriff under a warrant of United States commissioner.

In the Spencer case the court said: "The authorities which have been read to me seem to establish very conclusively this rule—that the enlistment of a minor is voidable, not necessarily void; and that he does really become by such enlistment, although under age, engaged in the service of the United States, and subject to the power and jurisdiction of the military authorities; and, such being the case, the court-martial had jurisdiction to arrest and try him for the charge of desertion."

2. CONTRACT NOT VOIDABLE BY PARENTS OR GUARDIANS IF THE SOLDIER IS HELD PURSUANT TO A SENTENCE OF A COURT-MARTIAL OR ANY STEP HAS BEEN TAKEN WITH A VIEW TO BRINGING HIM BEFORE SUCH COURT.

In re Kaufman, 41 Federal Reporter, 876; In re Dohrendorf et al., 40 Federal Reporter, 148; In re Cosenow, 37 Federal Reporter, 668; In re Dowd, 90 Federal Reporter, 718; ex parte Anderson, 16 Iowa, 595; McConologue's case, 107 Massachusetts, 170.

In the Kaufman case the father sought the discharge of his son, who was held by the military authorities and had been ordered before a military court for trial as a deserter. Quoting from the syllabus: "A minor who enlists in the United States Army upon his representation that he is of age, and receives pay and clothing and afterwards deserts and is arrested as a deserter, and at the time of his petition is held by the United States awaiting trial by a court-martial for the crime of desertion, will not be released under a writ of habeas corpus upon the ground that being a minor his enlistment was unlawful and contrary to the Revised Statutes of the United States."

In the Cosenow case the minor swore that he was twenty-one years and seven months old at the time of enlistment. He deserted and at the time of the filing of the petition was held in custody awaiting the action of the reviewing authority on the proceedings of the court-martial. His father sought the discharge of his son on the ground of infancy at the time of enlistment. The court refused to discharge him, holding that "an enlistment contrary to law is not void, but voidable;" that the court-martial had jurisdiction of the offense, and the soldier "must be remanded to await the result of his trial."

The Dowd case arose on the application of the mother for the release of her son, who was held under sentence of a summary court. The court held, quoting from the syllabus: "The enlistment of a minor in the Army without the consent of his parents or guardian, required by Revised Statutes, section 1117, is not void, but voidable only, and while he remains in the service under such enlistment the minor is amenable to the Articles of War, and can not be remanded to the custody of his parents by a civil court on a writ of habeas corpus while undergoing a sentence imposed on him by a court-martial for a violation of such articles."

In the Anderson case it appears that a minor enlisted without his father's consent, and being held for trial before a court-martial for desertion, his father sought his discharge on habeas corpus. The court refused to discharge the soldier, saying "he must abide by the decision of the latter court (court-martial) before the question of the validity of his enlistment can be determined in the civil courts on habeas corpus."

In McConologue's case the court said: "A minor's contract of enlistment is indeed voidable only and not void, and if, before a writ of habeas corpus is sued out to avoid it, he is arrested on charges of desertion, he should not be released by the court while proceedings for his trial by the military authorities are pending."

Under the custom of the service the parents or guardian of a minor who enlists without their consent can obtain his discharge upon application to the Secretary of War, prior to the commission of a military offense. Their rights under section 1117, Revised Statutes, are thus sufficiently protected; but when the minor has committed a military offense the interests of the public in the administration of justice are paramount to the right of the parent, and require that the soldier shall abide the consequences of his offense before the right to his discharge be passed upon. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 389–390.

The soldier should not be allowed to escape punishment for his offense, even though his parents assert their right to his services. A minor in civil life is liable to punishment for a crime or misdemeanor, even though his confinement may interfere with the rights of his parents.

[1] The purpose of the writ is to enable the court to inquire, first, if the petitioner is restrained of his liberty. If he is not, the court can do nothing but discharge the writ. If there is such restraint, the court can then inquire into the causes of it, and if the alleged cause is unlawful, it must then discharge the prisoner. * * * In the case of a man in the military or naval service, where he is, whether as an officer or private, always more or less subject in his movements, by the very necessity of military rule and subordination, to the orders of his superior officer, it should be quite clear that some unusual restraint upon his liberty of personal movement exists to justify the issue of the writ; otherwise every order of the superior officer directing the movements of the subordinate, which necessarily to some extentc ontrols his freedom of will, may be held to be a restraint of his liberty and the party so ordered may seek relief from obedience by means of a writ of habeas corpus. Something more than moral restraint is necessary to make a case for habeas corpus. There must be actual confinement or the present means of enforcing it. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S., 564, 571. Where a court-martial has jurisdiction of the person and of the subject-matter and is competent to pass the sentence under which the prisoner is held, its proceedings can not be collaterally impeached, and a writ of habeas corpus can not be made to perform the function of a writ of error. Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S., 564. Where a person is in custody under process from a State court of original jurisdiction for an alleged offense against the laws of such State, and it is claimed that he is restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution of the United States, the circuit court has a discretion whether it will discharge him upon a habeas corpus, in advance of his trial in the court in which he is indicted; that discretion, however, to be subordinated to any special circumstances requiring immediate action. When the State court has finally acted upon the case, the circuit court has still a discretion whether, under all the circumstances, the accused, if convicted, shall be put to his writ of error from the highest court of the State, or whether it will proceed, by writ of habeas corpus, summarily to determine whether the prisoner is restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution of the United States. Appeals in cases of habeas corpus to circuit court.

Sec. 763, R. S.

358. From the final decision of any court, justice, or judge inferior to the circuit court, upon an application for a writ of habeas corpus or upon such writ when issued, an appeal may be taken to the circuit court for the district in which the cause is heard:

1. In the case of any person alleged to be restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution, or of any law or treaty of the United States.

2. In the case of any prisoner who, being a subject or citizen of a foreign State, and domiciled therein, is committed or confined, or in custody by or under the authority or law of the United States, or of any State, or process discharged, he can not afterwards be tried by the State courts. Cunningham v. Neagle, 135 U. S., 1. See, also, In re Boardman, 169 U. S., 39; Baker v. Grice, ibid., 284; Nishimura Ekin v. U. S., 142 ibid., 651, 166 U. S., 391; Iasigi v. Van de Curr, 166 U. S., 391.

Conflict of State and Federal authority.—The writ of habeas corpus is a high prerogative writ known to the common law, the great object of which is the liberation of those who may be imprisoned without sufficient cause. It is in the nature of a writ of error to examine the legality of the commitment. Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet., 202. The Federal courts by whom, and the cases in which, it may be issued are described in sections 751, 752, 753, 754, 762, 763, 764, and 765 of the Revised Statutes. Subject to the paramount authority of the National Government, by its own tribunals, to inquire into the legality of custody of prisoners held by the United States courts or officers, the States may inquire into the grounds on which any person in their respective limits is restrained of his liberty. Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S., 624. A State court has no jurisdiction by habeas corpus to release a prisoner held by order of Federal court. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How., 506. And a judicial officer of a State can not, by means of a writ of habeas corpus, take and discharge a person held by or under color of authority of the United States. If it appear upon the return to a writ of habeas corpus that the person is detained under color of the authority of the United States, the State court has no further jurisdiction. Tarble's case, 13 Wall., 397. We do not question the authority of the State court or judge who is authorized by the laws of the State to issue the writ of habeas corpus to issue it in any case where the party is imprisoned within its territorial limits, provided it does not appear, when the application is made, that the person imprisoned is in custody under the authority of the United States. The court or judge has a right to inquire, in this mode of proceeding, for what cause and by what authority the prisoner is confined within the territorial limits of the State sovereignty. And it is the duty of the marshal or other person having the custody of the prisoner to make known to the judge or court, by a proper return, the authority by which he holds him in custody. * * * But after the return is made and the State judge or court judicially apprised that the party is in custody under the authority of the United States, they can proceed no further. * * * And although, as we have said, it is the duty of the marshal or other person holding him to make known, by a proper return, the authority under which he detains him, it is at the same time imperatively his duty to obey the process of the United States, to hold the prisoner in custody under it, and to refuse obedience to the mandate or process of any other Government. And consequently it is his duty not to take the prisoner, nor suffer him to be taken, before a State judge or court upon a habeas corpus issued under State authority. No State judge or court, after they are judicially informed that the party is imprisoned under the authority of the United States, has any right to interfere with him, or to require him to be brought before them. And if the authority of a State, in the form of a judicial process or otherwise, should attempt to control the marshal or other authorized officer or agent of the United States, in any respect in the custody of his prisoner, it would be his duty to resist it and to call to his aid any force that might be necessary to founded thereon, for or on account of any act done or omitted under any alleged right, title, authority, privilege, protection, or exemption, set up or claimed under the commission, order, or sanction of any foreign State or sovereignty, the validity and effect whereof depend upon the law of nations, or under color thereof.[1]

360. The appeals allowed by the two preceding sections shall be taken on such terms, and under such regulations and orders, as well for the custody and appearance of the person alleged to be in prison or confined or restrained of his liberty, as for sending up to the appellate tribunal a transcript of the petition, writ of habeas corpus, return thereto, and other proceedings, as may be prescribed by the Supreme Court, or, in default thereof, by the court or judge hearing the cause.[2] maintain the authority of law against illegal interference. No judicial process, whatever form it may assume, can have any lawful authority outside of the limits of the jurisdiction of the court or judge by whom it was issued, and an attempt to enforce it beyond these boundaries is nothing less than lawless violence. Ableman v. Booth, 21 How., 506. A State judge has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of habeas corpus for a prisoner in custody of an officer of the United States if the fact of such custody is known to him before issuing the writ; and if such fact appears on the return to the writ, all further proceedings by him are void. And if the United States officer resist the enforcement of the State writ and is imprisoned therefor, he will be discharged by the Federal court. Ex parte Sifford, 5 Am. Law Reg., O. S., 659. A military officer of the United States is not bound to produce the body of an enlisted soldier in answer to a writ of habeas corpus issued from a State court or judge. In re Neill, 8 Blatch., 166. The return of a military officer to a writ of habeas corpus need not be on oath. In re Neill, 8 Blatch., 165. The validity of the enlistment of a soldier can not be inquired into by a State court by the issue of a writ of habeas corpus, and an officer of the Army may properly refuse to discharge an enlisted man in his command upon the order of a State court. In re Farrand, 1 Abbot, 140, 147.

An officer or agent of the United States engaged in the performance of a duty arising under the laws and authority of the United States, is not liable to a criminal prosecution in the courts of a State for acts done by him in his official capacity. (In re Waite, 81 Fed. Rep., 359.) An officer who, in the performance of what he conceives to be his official duty, transcends his authority and invades private rights, is answerable therefor to the Government under which he acts, and to individuals injured by his action; but where there is no criminal intent he is not liable to answer the criminal process of another Government. In re Lewis, 83 ibid., 159; in re Neagle, 135 U. S., 1. Federal courts have authority in habeas corpus proceedings to inquire into the guilt or innocence of persons committed on preliminary examination by a State tribunal on a criminal charge for acts done in the service of the United States, so far as to determine whether the acts were done wantonly and with a criminal intent. Ibid., 159. When an officer of the United States is sought to be held in a State court for punishment for acts done in the performance of his duty to the United States, it is not a sufficient reason for refusing his release upon habeas corpus that he may raise the question of his immunity in the State court, and carry the matter by writ of error to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary, since the operations of the Federal Government would, in the meantime, be obstructed by the confinement of its officer. In re Waite, 81 Fed. Rep., 359.

Pending the proceedings or appeal in the cases mentioned in the three preceding sections, and until final judgment therein, and after final judgment of discharge, any proceeding against the person so imprisoned or confined or restrained of his liberty, in any State court, or by or under the authority of any State, for any matter so heard and determined, or in process of being heard and determined, under such writ of habeas corpus, shall be deemed null and void. That no appeal shall be had or allowed after six months from the date of the judgment or order complained of. Act of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 751).

SUSPENSION OF THE PRIVILEGE OF THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

The privilege[1] of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.[2]

[1] The privilege of the writ must here mean the right to the writ. Paschal, 141. The power to issue the writ is not the privilege; to ask for it is. Ibid.

[2] It would seem, as the power is given to Congress to suspend the privilege of the writ in cases of rebellion or invasion, that the right to judge whether the exigency had arisen must exclusively belong to that body. Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat., 19; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall., 2; VIII Opin. Att. Gen., 365. The privilege of the writ was suspended by the act of March 12, 1863 (12 Stat. L., 755), which contained the following requirement: "During the present rebellion the President of the United States whenever, in his judgment the public safety may require it, is authorized to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, in any case, throughout the United States or any part thereof." Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall., 2, 115–116; Vallandigham's trial, 259. On September 15, 1863, the President, by proclamation, suspended the privilege of the writ during the rebellion, throughout the United States, in all cases "when, by the authority of the President of the United States, the military, naval, and civil officers of the United States, or any of them, held persons under their command or in their custody, either as prisoners of war, spies, or aiders or abettors of the enemy, or officers, soldiers, or seamen, enrolled, drafted, or mustered or enlisted in or belonging to the land or naval forces of the United States, or as deserters therefrom, or otherwise amenable to military law, or the Rules and Articles of War, or the rules or regulations prescribed for the military or naval service by authority of the President of the United States, or for resisting a draft, or for any other offense against the military or naval service." [1] The Court of Claims was established by the acts of February 24, 1855 (10 Stat. L., 612); March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. L., 765), and May 8, 1872 (17 Stat. L., 85). This court was created with a view to give legal redress to the citizen as against the Government where he would have had legal redress as against another citizen. It is a curious fact, not generally known, that the example of Prussia and the German States in guarding the private rights of persons by subjecting the Government, in matters of account, to the judicial power of ordinary courts of justice, led to the establishment of the Court of Claims. Brown v. U. S., 5 Ct. Cls., 571, 577. The provisions of the act of March 3, 1863, authorizing the Court of Claims to hear and determine, without a jury, claims against Government with set-offs, is not unconstitutional. McElrath v. U. S., 102 U. S., 426.

[2] A claimant presenting a claim founded upon a law of Congress has a legal right, under section 1059, Revised Statutes, to a definitive adjudication; and the power of the court to afford that can not be considered as interfered with by anything short of a lodgment of the power of definitive adjudication in some other tribunal or officer. Thomas v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 522. The rejection of a claim by the accounting officers leaves the party to pursue his remedy at law, viz, an action in this court, though he may have accepted the portion allowed. Longwill v. U. ferring that power and thereby giving such regulations the force of law. A mere order of the President or of a Secretary is not a regulation. Harvey v. U. S., 3 Ct. Cls., 38. By the term "any regulation" is doubtless intended any regulation within the lawful discretion of the head of an Executive Department. * * * When Congress permits regulations to be formulated and published and carried into effect year after year, the legislative ratification must be implied. Maddox v. U. S., 20 Ct. Cls., 193, 198.

[3] The jurisdiction of the Court of Claims is confined to suits arising from contracts express or implied. Langford v. U. S., 101 U. S., 341. The United States can not be sued in the Court of Claims on equitable considerations merely. Bonner v. U. S., 9 Wall., 156. The language of the statutes which confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims excludes, by the strongest implication, demands against the Government founded on torts. In such cases, where it is proper for the nation to furnish a remedy, Congress has wisely reserved the matter for its own determination. Gibbons v. U. S., 8 Wall., 269, 275; Reed v. U. S., 11 Wall., 591; Langford v. U. S., 101 U. S., 341. See, also, paragraphs 339–353, post.

CONTRACTS.

The Court of Claims, in the construction and enforcement of contracts, is bound to apply the principles which govern like contracts between individuals. U. S. v. Smoot, 15 Wall., 36; Curtis v. U. S., 2 Ct. Cls., 144; Brooke v. U. S., ibid., 180. All questions of salary are questions of contract, and whether the salary is fixed by law, or by order of a Department under authority of law, the Government contracts to pay the officer his salary, and, failing to do so, a suit therefor may be maintained in this court, whether the case arises under a revenue act or any other. Patton v. U. S., 7 Ct. Cls., 362. The United States can no more discharge its contracts by such performance than can an individual person do so. Congress may fail to appropriate, in whole or in part, the money required for payment of a public creditor, and thus leave the public officer without authority to draw money from the Treasury for that purpose, but the indebtedness and liability remain in force. Mitchell v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 281, 287; Graham v. U. S., 1 ibid., 380; Collins v. U. S., 15 ibid., 22; French v. U. S., 16 ibid., 419. An officer who has been wholly retired from the service, but in whose case the order of retirement has been revoked by the President, who directs his name to be placed on the retired list, is an officer de facto, and though illegally on such retired list, money paid him by way of salary, so long as he holds the office in good faith, can not be recovered back. When one claiming to be an officer renders no service and holds no official relations with the Government, money paid him for service may be recovered back. Miller v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 338. In an action in the Court of Claims to recover a balance claimed to be due on pay account, the United States can set up, as a counter claim, an alleged overpayment to him on account of pay, and can have judgment for its collection. U. S. v. Burchard, 125 U. S., 176; McElrath v. U. S., 102 U. S., 426.

An officer can only bind the Government by acts which come within a just exercise of his official power. Hunter v. U. S., 5 Pet., 173, 178; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall., 666; Whiteside v. U. S., 93 U. S., 247. Unless the Government has ratified a contract of an officer in excess of his authority, or received the benefit of it, it is not liable. The ratification of some of a series of unauthorized acts is not to be construed to be an approval of any not specified. Pitcher v. U. S., 1 Ct. Cls., 7; De Celis v. U. S., 13 Ct. Cls., 117.

IMPLIED CONTRACTS.

To constitute an implied contract "there must have been some consideration moving to the United States; or they must have received the money, charged with a duty to pay it over; or the claimant must have had a lawful right to it when it was received, as in the case of money paid by mistake. Knote v. U. S., 95 U. S., 149, 156. A contract to reimburse is implied when the Government takes private property for public use. Such a taking of private property by the Government when the emergency of the public service in time of war, or impending public danger, is too urgent to admit of delay, is everywhere regarded as justified, if the necessity for the use of the property is imperative and immediate and the danger, as heretofore described, Second. All set-offs,[1] counterclaims, claims for damages, whether liquidated or unliquidated, or other demands whatsoever, on the part of the Government of the United States against any person making claim against the Government in said court.

Third. The claim of any paymaster, quartermaster, commissary of subsistence, or other disbursing officer of the United States, or of his administrators or executors, for relief from responsibility on account of capture or otherwise, while in the line of his duty, of Government funds, vouchers, records, or papers in his charge, and for which such officer was and is held responsible.[2] is impending; and it is equally clear that the taking of such property, under such circumstances, creates an obligation on the part of the Government to reimburse the owner to the full value of the service. Private rights, under such extreme and imperious circumstances, must give way, for the time, to the public good, but the Government must make full restitution for the sacrifice. U. S. v. Russell, 13 Wall., 623, 629. Beneficial volunteer service does not raise an implied contract, unless there has been an inducement, agreement, or ratification. Boston v. The District of Columbia, 19 Ct. Cls., 31. The court has jurisdiction of a suit by a patentee for the royalty agreed to be paid for the use of his invention by an authorized officer of the Government. Burns v. U. S., 12 Wall., 246.

A contract is implied from the fact that the Government manufactured a patented military device, without market value, on the solicitation of the patentee, that it should pay for the right to use the invention. Palmer v. U. S., 128 U. S., 262. The United States may be sued for use of a patented invention by its officers for its benefit if the right of the patentee is acknowledged. Hollister v. Benedict Manufacturing Co., 113 U. S., 59; U. S. v. Burns, 12 Wall., 246. When an officer of the Government is properly assigned to the work of devising something to be used in the public service, the Government meeting the expenses and paying the officer his usual salary, the Government is not liable for royalty on the invention, though it was made by the officer previous to the time he was assigned to the work, if the labor and expense of perfecting it was borne by the Government. Solomons v. U. S., 22 Ct. Cls., 335; 21 ibid., 479. The policy of the War Department of late years toward inventors has been one of neutrality, neither denying nor admitting legal rights, but taking inventions to perfect the Government arms, leaving inventors free to seek redress without prejudice before other tribunals than an Executive Department. Berdan v. U. S., 26 Ct. Cls., 48, 60. See, also, Clyde v. U. S., 13 Wall., 38; U. S. v. Russell, 13 Wall., 623; U. S. v. Bostwick, 94 U. S., 53; Fichera's case, 9 Ct. [1] The right of set-off did not exist at common law, and is everywhere founded upon statutory regulation. Tillou v. U. S., 1 Ct. Cls., 454; 2 ibid., 588, and U. S. v. Eckford, 6 Wall., 484. State laws in such a case do not constitute the rule of decision, but the question arises, exclusively, under the act of Congress; and no local law nor usage can have any influence in its determination. up on the part of the Government against any person making claim against the Government in said court, the court shall hear and determine such claim or demand both for and against the Government and claimant; and if upon the whole case it finds that the claimant is indebted to the Government, it shall render judgment to that effect, and such judgment shall be final, with the right of appeal, as in other cases provided for by law. Any transcript of such judgment, filed in the clerk's office of any district or circuit court, shall be entered upon the records thereof, and shall thereby become and be a judgment of such court and be enforced as other judgments in such courts are enforced.[1]

Decree on accounts of paymasters, etc.
May 9, 1866, c. 75, s. 2, v. 14, p. 44.
Sec. 1062, R. S.

365. Whenever the Court of Claims ascertains the facts of any loss by any paymaster, quartermaster, commissary of subsistence, or other disbursing officer, in the cases hereinbefore provided, to have been without fault or negligence on the part of such officer, it shall make a decree setting forth the amount thereof, and upon such decree the proper accounting officers of the Treasury shall allow to such officer the amount so decreed, as a credit in the settlement of his accounts.

Claims referred by Departments.
June 25, 1868, c. 71, s. 7, v. 15, p. 76.
Sec. 1063, R. S.

366. Whenever any claim is made against any Executive Department, involving disputed facts or controverted questions of law, where the amount in controversy exceeds three thousand dollars, or where the decision will affect a class of cases, or furnish a precedent for the future action of any Executive Department in the adjustment of a class of cases, without regard to the amount involved in the particular case, or where any authority, right, privilege, or exemption is claimed or denied under the Constitution of the United States, the head of such Department may cause such claim, with all the vouchers, papers, proofs, and documents pertaining thereto, to be transmitted to the Court of Claims, and the same shall be there proceeded in as if originally commenced by the voluntary action of the claimant; and the Secretary of the Treasury may, upon the certificate of any Auditor or Comptroller of the Treasury, direct any account, matter, or claim, of the character, amount, or class described in this section, to be transmitted, with all the vouchers, papers, documents, and proofs pertaining thereto, to the said court, for trial and adjudication: Provided, That no case shall be referred by any head of a Department unless it belongs to one of the several classes of cases which, by reason of the subject-matter and character, the said court might, under existing laws, take jurisdiction of on such voluntary action of the claimant.

Procedure in cases transmitted by Departments.
June 25, 1868, c. 71, s. 7, v. 15, p. 76.
Sec. 1064, R. S.

367. All cases transmitted by the head of any Department, or upon the certificate of any Auditor or Comptroller, according to the provisions of the preceding section, shall be proceeded in as other cases pending in the Court of Claims, and shall, in all respects, be subject to the same rules and regulations.[1]

Judgments in cases transmitted by Departments, how paid.
June 25, 1868, c. 71, s. 7, v. 15, p. 76.
Sec. 1065, R. S.

368. The amount of any final judgment or decree rendered in favor of the claimant, in any case transmitted to the Court of Claims under the two preceding sections, shall be paid out of any specific appropriation applicable to the case, if any such there be; and where no such appropriation exists, the judgment or decree shall be paid in the same manner as other judgments of the said court.

Claims growing out of treaties not cognizable therein.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 92, s. 9, v. 12, p. 767.
Sec. 1066, R. S.

369. The jurisdiction of the said court shall not extend to any claim against the Government not pending therein on December one, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, growing out of or dependent on any treaty stipulation entered into with foreign nations or with the Indian tribes.

Claims pending in other courts not to be prosecuted in Court of Claims.
June 25, 1868, c. 71, s. 8, v. 15, p. 77.
Sec. 1067, R. S.

370. No person shall file or prosecute in the Court of Claims, or in the Supreme Court on appeal therefrom, any claim for or in respect to which he or any assignee of his has pending in any other court any suit or process against any person who, at the time when the cause of action alleged in such suit or process arose, was, in respect thereto, acting or professing to act, mediately or immediately, under the authority of the United States.

Aliens.
July 27, 1868, c. 276, s. 2, v. 15, p. 243.
Sec. 1068, R. S.

371. Aliens, who are citizens or subjects of any Government which accords to citizens of the United States the right to prosecute claims against such Government in its courts, shall have the privilege of prosecuting claims against the United States in the Court of Claims, whereof such court, by reason of their subject-matter and character, might take jurisdiction.[2]

Limitation.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 92, s. 10, v. 12, p. 767.
Sec. 1069, R. S.

372. Every claim against the United States, cognizable by the Court of Claims, shall be forever barred unless the petition setting forth a statement thereof is filed in the court, or transmitted to it by the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives as provided by law, within six years after the claim first accrues: Provided, That the claims of married women first accrued during marriage, of persons under the age of twenty-one years first accrued during minority, and of idiots, lunatics, insane persons, and persons beyond the seas at the time the claim accrued, entitled to the claim, shall not be barred if the petition be filed in the court or transmitted, as aforesaid, within three years after the disability has ceased; but no other disability than those enumerated shall prevent any claim from being barred, nor shall any of the said disabilities operate cumulatively.

Burden of proof and evidence as to loyalty.
June 25, 1868, c. 71, s. 3, v. 15, p. 75.
Sec. 1074, R. S.

377. Whenever it is material in any claim to ascertain whether any person did or did not give any aid or comfort to the late rebellion, the claimant asserting the loyalty of any such person to the United States during such rebellion shall be required to prove affirmatively that such person did, during said rebellion, consistently adhere to the United States, and did give no aid or comfort to persons engaged in said rebellion; and the voluntary residence of any such person in any place where, at any time during such residence, the rebel force or organization held sway, shall be prima facie evidence that such person did give aid and comfort to said rebellion and to the persons engaged therein.

Power to call upon Departments for information.
Feb. 24, 1855, c. 122, s. 11, v. 10, p. 614.
Sec. 1076, R. S.

379. The said court shall have power to call upon any of the Departments for any information or papers it may deem necessary, and shall have the use of all recorded and printed reports made by the committees of each House of Congress, when deemed necessary in the prosecution of its business. But the head of any Department may refuse and omit to comply with any call for information or papers when, in his opinion, such compliance would be injurious to the public interest.

Testimony not to be taken, when.
Feb. 24, 1855, c. 122, s. 4, v. 10, p. 613.
Sec. 1077, R. S.

380. When it appears to the court in any case that the facts set forth in the petition of the claimant do not furnish any ground for relief, it shall not be the duty of the court to authorize the taking of any testimony therein.

Witnesses not excluded on account of color.

381. No witness shall be excluded in any suit in the Court of Claims on account of color.[1]

New trial on motion of United States.
June 25, 1868, c. 71, s. 2, v. 15, p. 75.
Sec. 1088, R. S.

390. The Court of Claims, at any time while any claim is pending before it, or on appeal from it, or within two years next after the final disposition of such claim, may, on motion on behalf of the United States, grant a new trial and stay the payment of any judgment therein, upon such evidence, cumulative or otherwise, as shall satisfy the court that any fraud, wrong, or injustice in the premises has been done to the United States; but until an order is made staying the payment of a judgment, the same shall be payable and paid as now provided by law.[1]

Payment of judgments.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 92, s. 7, v. 12, p. 766.
Sec. 1089, R. S.

391. In all cases of final judgments by the Court of Claims, or, on appeal, by the Supreme Court, where the same are affirmed in favor of the claimant, the sum due thereby shall be paid out of any general appropriation made by law for the payment and satisfaction of private claims, on presentation to the Secretary of the Treasury of a copy of said judgment, certified by the clerk of the Court of Claims, and signed by the chief justice, or, in his absence, by the presiding judge of said court.

Interest.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 92, s. 7, v. 12, p. 766.
Sec. 1090, R. S.

392. In cases where the judgment appealed from is in favor of the claimant, and the same is affirmed by the Supreme Court, interest thereon at the rate of five per centum shall be allowed from the date of its presentation to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment as aforesaid, but no interest shall be allowed subsequent to the affirmance, unless presented for payment to the Secretary of the Treasury as aforesaid.

Sec. 1093, R.S.

THE BOWMAN ACT.

396. Whenever a claim or matter is pending before any committee of the Senate or House of Representatives, or before either House of Congress, which involves the investigation and determination of facts, the committee or House may cause the same, with the vouchers, papers, proofs, and documents pertaining thereto, to be transmitted to the Court of Claims of the United States, and the same shall there be proceeded in under such rules as the court may adopt. When the facts shall have been found, the court shall not enter judgment thereon, but shall report the same to the committee or to the House by which the case was transmitted for its consideration. Sec. 1, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 485).

Claims, etc., pending before Congress involving investigation to be referred to Court of Claims.
Sec. 1, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 485.

397. That when a claim or matter is pending in any of the Executive Departments which may involve controverted questions of fact or law, the head of such Department may transmit the same, with the vouchers, papers, proofs, and documents pertaining thereto, to said court, and the same shall be there proceeded in under such rules as the court may adopt. When the facts and conclusions of law shall have been found, the court shall not enter judgment thereon, but shall report its findings and opinions to the Department by which it was transmitted for its guidance and action.[1] Sec. 2, ibid.

Certain claims pending in Executive Departments may be transmitted, etc. to Court of Claims.

398. The jurisdiction of said court shall not extend to or include any claim against the United States growing out of the destruction or damage to property by the Army or Navy during the war for the suppression of the rebellion, or for the use and occupation of real estate by any part of the military or naval forces of the United States in the operations of said forces during the said war at the seat of war; nor shall the said court have jurisdiction of any claim against the United States which is now barred by virtue of the provisions of any law of the United States. Sec. 3, ibid.

Claims not within jurisdiction of court.

[1] Where claims are referred by the head of an Executive Department, of his own motion, and without the consent of the claimant, the court will take jurisdiction under the Bowman Act. Billings v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 166, 175.

Claims for supplies, etc., furnished for suppression of the rebellion.

399. In any case of a claim for supplies or stores taken by or furnished to any part of military or naval forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the petition shall aver that the person who furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom such supplies or stores were taken, did not give any aid or comfort to said rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States, and the fact of such loyalty shall be a jurisdictional fact; and unless the said court shall, on a preliminary inquiry, find that the person who furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same were taken as aforesaid, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war, the court shall not have jurisdiction of such cause, and the same shall, without further proceedings, be dismissed. Sec. 4, ibid.

Loyalty to be a jurisdictional fact.

Defense, etc., for the United States.
Sec. 5, ibid.

400. That the Attorney-General, or his assistants under his direction, shall appear for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States in all cases which may be transmitted to the Court of Claims under this act, with the same power to interpose counterclaims, offsets, defenses for fraud practiced or attempted to be practiced by claimants, and other defenses, in like manner as he is now required to defend the United States in said court. Sec. 5, ibid.

Parties in interest may testify, etc.
Sec. 6, ibid.

401. That in the trial of such cases no person shall be excluded as a witness because he or she is a party to or interested in the same. Sec. 6, ibid.

Reports of Court of Claims may be continued, etc., for action.
Sec. 7, ibid.

402. That reports of the Court of Claims to Congress under this act, if not finally acted upon during the session at which they are reported, shall be continued from session to session and from Congress to Congress until the same shall be finally acted upon.[1] Sec. 7, ibid.

THE TUCKER ACT.

Suits against the Government.

403. That the Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the following matters:

Jurisdiction of Court of Claims.
R. S., sec. 1058, p. 195.

First. All claims founded upon the Constitution of the United States[2] or any law of Congress, except for pensions, Second. All set-offs, counterclaims, claims for damages, whether liquidated or unliquidated, or other demands whatsoever on the part of the Government of the United States against any claimant against the Government in said court: Provided, That no suit against the Government of the United States shall be allowed under this act unless the same shall have been brought within six years after the right accrued for which the claim is made. Act of March 3, 1887, vol. 24, p. 505. Provided further, That no suit against the Government of the United States, brought by any officer of the United States to recover fees for services alleged to have been performed for the United States, shall be allowed under this act unless an account for said fees shall have been rendered and finally acted upon according to the provisions of the act of July 31, 1894,[1] unless the proper accounting officer of the Treasury fails to finally act thereon within six months after the account is received in said office. Act of June 27, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 494); sec. 3, act of July 1, 1898 (30 ibid., 649).

District and circuit courts to have concurrent jurisdiction with Court of Claims; limit.

404. That the district courts of the United States shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the Court of Claims as to all matters named in the preceding section where the amount of the claim does not exceed one thousand dollars, and the circuit courts of the United States shall have such concurrent jurisdiction in all cases where the amount of such claim exceeds one thousand dollars and does not exceed ten thousand dollars. All causes brought and tried under the provisions of this act shall be tried by the court without a jury. Sec. 2, ibid. The jurisdiction hereby conferred upon the said circuit and district courts shall not extend to cases brought to recover fees, salary, or compensation for official services of officers of the United States or brought for such purpose by persons claiming as such officers or as assignees or legal representatives thereof. Sec. 2, act of June 27, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 494).

405. That whenever any person shall present his petition to the Court of Claims alleging that he is or has been indebted to the United States as an officer or agent thereof, or by virtue of any contract therewith, or that he is the guarantor, or surety, or personal representative of any officer, or agent, or contractor so indebted, or that he, or the person for whom he is such surety, guarantor, or personal representative has held any office or agency under the United States, or entered into any contract therewith, under which it may be or has been claimed that an indebtedness to the United States has arisen and exists, and that he or the person he represents has applied to the proper Department of the Government requesting that the account of such office, agency, or indebtedness may be adjusted and settled, and that three years have elapsed from the date of such application and said account still remains unsettled and unadjusted, and that no suit upon the same has been brought by the United States, said court shall, due notice first being given to the head of said Department and to the Attorney-General of the United States, proceed to hear the parties and to ascertain the amount, if any, due the United States on said account. The Attorney-General shall represent the United States at the hearing of said cause. The court may postpone the same from time to time whenever justice shall require. The judgment of said court or of the Supreme Court of the United States, to which an appeal shall lie, as in other cases, as to the amount due, shall be binding and conclusive upon the parties. The payment of such amount so found due by the court shall discharge such obligation. An action shall accrue to the United States against such principal, or surety, or representative to recover the amount so found due, which may be brought at any time within three years after the final judgment of said court. Unless suit shall be brought within said time, such claim and the claim on the original indebtedness shall be forever barred. Sec. 3, ibid.

406. That the jurisdiction of the respective courts of the United States proceeding under this act, including the right of exception and appeal, shall be governed by the law now in force, in so far as the same is applicable and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act; and the course of procedure shall be in accordance with the established rules of said respective courts, and of such additions and modifications thereof as said courts may adopt. Sec. 4, ibid.

Petition for settlement of claims. Sec. 5, ibid.

407. That the plaintiff in any suit brought under the provisions of the second section of this act shall file a petition, duly verified, with the clerk of the respective court having jurisdiction of the case, and in the district where the plaintiff resides. Such petition shall set forth the full name and residence of the plaintiff, the nature of his claim, and a succinct statement of the facts upon which the claim is based, the money or any other thing claimed, or the damages sought to be recovered and praying the court for a judgment or decree upon the facts and law. Sec. 5, ibid.

Service. Sec. 6, ibid.

408. That the plaintiff shall cause a copy of his petition filed under the preceding section to be served upon the district attorney of the United States in the district wherein suit is brought, and shall mail a copy of the same, by registered letter, to the Attorney-General of the United States, and shall, thereupon cause to be filed with the clerk of the court wherein suit is instituted an affidavit of such service and the mailing of such letter. It shall be the duty of the district attorney upon whom service of petition is made as aforesaid to appear and defend the interests of the Government in the suit, and within sixty days after the service of petition upon him, unless the time should be extended by order of the court made in the case to file a plea, answer, or demurrer on the part of the Government, and to file a notice of any counterclaim, set-off, claim for damages, or other demand or defense whatsoever of the Goverement in the premises: Provided, That should the district attorney neglect or refuse to file the plea, answer, demurrer, or defense, as required, the plaintiff may proceed with the case under such rules as the court may adopt in the premises; but the plaintiff shall not have judgment or decree for his claim, or any part thereof, unless he shall establish the same by proof satisfactory to the court. Sec. 6, ibid.

Defense.

Proviso. Proceedings on failure of Government to answer.

Opinions. Sec. 7, ibid.

409. That it shall be the duty of the court to cause a written opinion to be filed in the cause, setting forth the specific findings by the court of the facts therein and the conclusions of the court upon all questions of law involved in the case, and to render judgment thereon. If the suit be in equity or admiralty, the court shall proceed with the same according to the rules of such courts. Sec. 7, ibid.

Interested parties may testify.

410. That in the trial of any suit brought under any of the provisions of this act, no person shall be excluded as a witness because he is a party to or interested in said suit; and any plaintiff or party in interest may be examined as a witness on the part of the Government.

Section ten hundred and seventy-nine of the Revised Statutes is hereby repealed. The provisions of section ten hundred and eighty of the Revised Statutes shall apply to cases under this act. Sec. 8, ibid.

Appeals and writs of error.
Sec. 9, ibid.

411. That the plaintiff or the United States, in any suit brought under the provisions of this act shall have the same rights of appeal or writ of error as are now reserved in the statutes of the United States in that behalf made, and upon the conditions and limitations therein contained.

Procedure.

The modes of procedure in claiming and perfecting an appeal or writ of error shall conform in all respects, and as near as may be, to the statutes and rules of court governing appeals and writs of error in like causes. Sec. 9, ibid.

Adverse judgments to United States to be certified to Attorney-General.
Sec. 10, ibid.

412. That when the findings of fact and the law applicable thereto have been filed in any case as provided in section six of this act, and the judgment or decree is adverse to the Government, it shall be the duty of the district attorney to transmit to the Attorney-General of the United States certified copies of all the papers filed in the cause, with a transcript of the testimony taken, the written findings of the court, and his written opinion as to the same; whereupon the Attorney-General shall determine and direct

Sec. 11, ibid.

413. That the Attorney-General shall report to Congress, and at the beginning of each session of Congress, the suits under this act in which a final judgment or decree has been rendered giving the date of each, and a statement of the costs taxed in each case. Sec. 11, ibid.

Claims referred by Departments. Sec. 12, ibid.

Claims referred under Bowman Act. Sec. 13, ibid.

415. That in every case which shall come before the Court of Claims, or is now pending therein, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," approved March third, eighteen hundred and eighty-three, if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court, upon the facts established, that it has jurisdiction to render judgment or decree thereon under existing laws or under the provisions of this act, it shall proceed to do so, giving to either party such further opportunity for hearing as in its judgment justice shall require, and report its proceedings therein to either House of Congress or to the Department by which the same was referred to said court. Sec. 13, ibid.

Judgment.

416. That whenever any bill, except for a pension, shall be pending in either House of Congress providing for the payment of a claim against the United States, legal or equitable, or for a grant, gift, or bounty to any person, the House in which such bill is pending may refer the same to the Court of Claims, who shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and eighty-three, entitled An "act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," and report to such House the facts in the case and the amount, where the same can be liquidated, including any facts bearing upon the question whether there has been delay or laches in presenting such claim or applying for such grant, gift, or bounty, and any facts bearing upon the question whether the bar of any statute of limitation should be removed or which shall be claimed to excuse the claimant for not having resorted to any established legal remedy. Sec. 14, ibid.

Costs. Sec. 15, ibid.

417. If the Government of the United States shall put in issue the right of the plaintiff to recover the court may, in its discretion, allow costs to the prevailing party from the time of joining such issue. Such costs, however, shall include only what is actually incurred for witnesses, and for summoning the same, and fees paid to the clerk of the court.[2] Sec. 15, ibid.

420. The commandant of the Marine Corps shall have the rank and pay of a brigadier-general. Vacancies in the grade of brigadier-general shall be filled by selection from officers on the active list of the Marine Corps not below the grade of field officer.[2] Section 18, act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1008).

Restriction on appointments.
Mar. 3, 1899, s. 21, v. 30, p. 1009.

421. Upon the passage of this Act not more than forty-five of the captains, forty-five first lieutenants and forty-five second lieutenants herein provided for shall be appointed; fifteen captains, fifteen first lieutenants and fifteen second lieutenants to be appointed subsequently to January first, nineteen hundred. Sec. 21, act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1009).

APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS.

Vacancies, restriction.
Mar. 3, 1899, s. 19, v. 30, p. 1009.

422. That the vacancies existing in said Corps after the promotions and appointments herein provided for shall be filled by the President from time to time, whenever the actual needs of the naval service require it, first, from the graduates of the Naval Academy in the manner now provided by law; or second, from those who are serving or who have served as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps during the war with Spain; or, third, from meritorious noncommissioned officers of the Marine Corps; or, fourth, from civil life: Provided, That after said vacancies are once filled there shall be no further appointments from civil life. Sec. 19, act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1009).

Limit of age; examination.

423. That no person except such officers or former graduates of the Naval Academy as have served in the war with Spain, as hereinbefore provided for, shall be appointed a commissioned officer in the Marine Corps who is under twenty or over thirty years of age; and that no person shall be appointed a commissioned officer in said Corps until he shall have passed such examination as may be prescribed by the President of the United States, except graduates of the Naval Academy, as above provided. That the officers of the Marine Corps above the grade of captain, except brigadier-general, shall, before being promoted, be subject to such physical, mental and moral examination as is now, or may hereafter be, prescribed by law for other officers of the Marine Corps.[1] Sec. 20, ibid.

[1] The act of January 30, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 287), contained the requirement that there should be no more appointments, except by way of promotion, in the Marine Corps until the total number of officers therein should be reduced to seventy-five.

[2] By the act of June 6, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 58), the rank of the commandant of the Marine Corps was reduced from brigadier-general to colonel, upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the office of brigadier-general commandant, then authorized by law. A vacancy having occurred on November 1, 1876, a commandant was appointed with the rank of colonel. By section 18 of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1008), the rank of brigadier general commandant was restored. The act of June 6, 1874, had contained the requirement that the commandant of the Marine Corps should be selected and appointed from the officers of the Corps.

EXAMINATIONS FOR PROMOTION.

Examinations. July 28, 1892, v 27, p. 321.

424. Hereafter promotions to every grade of commissioned officers in the Marine Corps below the grade of commandant shall be made in the same manner and under the same conditions as now are or may hereafter be prescribed, in pursuance of law, for commissioned officers of the Army: Provided, That examining boards which may be organized under the provisions of this act, to determine the fitness of officers of the Marine Corps for promotion, shall, in all cases, consist of not less than five officers, three of whom shall, if practicable, be officers of the Marine Corps, senior to the officer to be examined, and two of whom shall be medical officers of the Navy: Provided further, That when not practicable to detail officers of the Marine Corps as members of such examining board, officers of the line of the Navy shall be so detailed.[1] Act of July 28, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 321).

STAFF.

425. The staff of the Marine Corps shall consist of one adjutant and inspector, one quartermaster and one paymaster, each with the rank of colonel; one assistant adjutant and inspector, two assistant quartermasters and one assistant paymaster, each with the rank of major; and three assistant quartermasters with the rank of captain. That the vacancies created by this act in the departments of the adjutant and inspector and paymaster shall be filled first by promotion according to seniority of the officers in each of these departments respectively, and then by selection from the line officers on the active list of the Marine Corps not below the grade of captain, and who shall have seen not less than ten years' service in the Marine Corps. That the vacancies created by this act in the quartermaster's department of said corps shall be filled, first by promotion according to seniority of the officers in this department, and then by selection from the line officers on the active list of said corps not below the grade of first lieutenant. Sec. 22, ibid.

The officers of the Marine Corps shall be entitled to receive the same pay and allowances, and the enlisted men shall be entitled to receive the same pay and bounty for re-enlisting, as are or may be provided by or in pursuance of law for the officers and enlisted men of like grades in the infantry of the Army.[2]

No commutation of forage.

Jan. 30, 1885, v. 23, p. 287.

430. No commutation for forage shall be paid. Act of January 30, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 287).

Retirement of officers.

431. The commissioned officers of the Marine Corps shall be retired in like cases, in the same manner, and with the same relative conditions, in all respects, as are provided for officers of the Army, except as is otherwise provided in the next section.

July 11, 1798, c. 72, s. 6, v. 1, p. 596.
Sec. 1619, R. S.

443. The Marine Corps shall be liable to do duty in the forts and garrisons of the United States, on the seacoast, or any other duty on shore, as the President, at his discretion, may direct.

Regulations.
June 30, 1834, c. 132, s. 8, v. 4, p. 713.
Sec. 1620, R. S.

444. The President is authorized to prescribe such military regulations for the discipline of the Marine Corps as he may deem expedient.

Subject to laws governing the Navy, except when serving with the Army.
June 30, 1834, c. 132, s. 2, v. 4, p. 713; July 11, 1798, c. 72, s. 4, v. 1, p. 595.
Sec. 1621, R. S.

445. The Marine Corps shall, at all times, be subject to the laws and regulations established for the government of the Navy, except when detached for service with the Army by order of the President; and when so detached they shall be subject to the rules and articles of war prescribed for the government of the Army.

Articles of War.
Service on army courts-martial.
78th art. of war.

446. Officers of the Marine Corps detached for service with the Army by order of the President may be associated with officers of the Regular Army on courts-martial for the trial of offenders belonging to the Regular Army, or to forces of the Marine Corps so detached; and in such cases the orders of the senior officer of either corps who may be present and duly authorized shall be obeyed. Seventy-eighth article of war.

TRANSFERS.

Transfers from military to naval service.
July 1, 1864, c. 201, s. 1, v. 13, p. 342.
Sec. 1421, R.S.

447. Any person enlisted in the military service of the United States may, on application to the Navy Department, approved by the President, be transferred to the Navy or Marine Corps, to serve therein the residue of his term of enlistment, subject to the laws and regulations for the government of the Navy. But such transfer shall not release him from any indebtedness to the Government, nor, without the consent of the President, from any penalty incurred for a breach of the military law.

DETAILS OF NAVAL OFFICERS.

448. The President may detail, temporarily, three competent naval officers for the service of the War Department in the inspection of transport vessels, and for such other services as may be designated by the Secretary of War.

Officers of the Navy may be detailed for service of the War Department.
Feb. 12, 1862, c. 21, v. 12, p. 333.
Sec. 1437, R. S.

PROHIBITION OF PUNISHMENTS ON VESSELS OF WAR.

449. No other punishment[1] shall be permitted on board of vessels belonging to the Navy, except by sentence of a general or summary court-martial. All punishments inflicted by the commander, or by his order, except reprimands, shall be fully entered in the ship's log. Article 24, Rules for the Government of the Navy.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS.

450. Judges-advocate of naval general courts-martial and courts of inquiry, and all commanders in chief of naval squadrons, commandants of navy-yards and stations, officers commanding vessels of the Navy, and recruiting officers of the Navy, and the adjutant and inspector, assistant adjutant and inspector, commanding officers, and recruiting officers of the Marine Corps be, and the same are hereby, authorized to administer oaths for the purposes of the administration of naval justice and for other purposes of naval administration.[2] Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 1086).

Oaths.
Mar. 3, 1901, v. 31, p. 1086.

Commissioners to revise and consolidate the General Statutes of the United States.

June 27, 1866, v. 14, p. 74.

[1] The Revised Statutes must be accepted as the law on the subjects which they embrace as it existed on the 1st day of December, 1873, and were enacted to present the entire body of the laws in a concise and compact form. When the language of the Revised Statutes is plain and unambiguous, the grammatical structure simple and accurate, and the meaning of the whole intelligible and obvious, a court is not at liberty, by construction, to reproduce the law as it stood before the revision. U. S. v. Bowen, 100 U. S., 508. See also Wright v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 80, 86; U. S. v. No. Am. Com. Co., 74 Fed. Rep., 145.

their nature, which shall be in force at the time such commissioners may make the final report of their doings. Act of June 27, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 74).

Duties of the commissioners. Sec. 2, ibid.

455. In performing this duty the commissioners shall bring together all statutes and parts of statutes which, from similarity of subject, ought to be brought together, omitting redundant or obsolete enactments, and making such alterations as may be necessary to reconcile the contradictions, supply the omissions, and amend the imperfections of the original text; and they shall arrange the same under titles, chapters, and sections, or other suitable divisions and subdivisions, with headnotes briefly expressive of the matter contained in such divisions; also with side notes, so drawn as to point to the contents of the text, and with references to the original text from which each section is compiled, and to the decisions of the Federal courts, explaining or expounding the same, and also to such decisions of the State courts as they may deem expedient; and they shall provide by a temporary index, or other expedient means, for an easy reference to every portion of their report. Sec. 2, ibid.

Work to be submitted to Congress. Sec. 3, ibid.

456. That when the commissioners have completed the revision and consolidation of the statutes, as aforesaid, they shall cause a copy of the same, in print, to be submitted to Congress, that the statutes so revised and consolidated may be reenacted, if Congress shall so determine; and at the same time they shall also suggest to Congress such contradictions, omissions, and imperfections as may appear in the original text, with the mode in which they have reconciled, supplied, and amended the same; and they may also designate such statutes or parts of statutes as, in their judgment, ought to be repealed, with their reasons for such repeal.[1] Sec. 3, ibid.

[1] The act of June 27, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 74), was revived by the act of May 4, 1870, (16 Stat. L., 96), which authorized the President to appoint three commissioners to prosecute and complete the work prescribed by that statute. The work of revision was to be completed within three years from the date of passage of the act (May 4, 1870). The act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat. L., 579), authorized the appointment of a joint committee of Congress to accept the draft of the revision of laws, so far as the same was completed at the expiration of the time designated for that purpose (May 4, 1873). The same statute authorized the existing joint committee to contract with some suitable person or persons to prepare a revision of the statutes, already reported by the commissioners, in the form of a bill to be presented at the opening of the Forty-third Congress. The publication of the first edition of the Revised Statutes was authorized by the act of June 20, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 113); pp. 401–403, post.

457. That the statutes so revised and consolidated shall be reported to Congress as soon as practicable, and the whole work closed without unnecessary delay. Sec. 5, ibid.

The incorporation of a particular statutory provision into the Revised Statutes, adopted in 1874, was a legislative declaration that the law on that subject was as therein provided; and, in the absence of any obscurity in the meaning, the court can not look to the preexisting statutes to see whether or not they were correctly incorporated. two of "An act providing for publication of the revised statutes and laws of the United States," approved June twentieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, shall be made by the Secretary of State under the seal of the Department of State, and so much of said section as provides that such certificate shall be under the seal of the United States, is hereby repealed. Act of December 28, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 293).

SCOPE OF THE REVISED STATUTES AND REPEAL PROVISIONS.

Scope of Revised Statutes. Sec. 5595, R.S.

462. The foregoing seventy-three titles embrace the statutes of the United States general and permanent in their nature, in force on the first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, as revised and consolidated by commissioners appointed under an act of Congress, and the same shall be designated and cited, as The Revised Statutes of the United States.[1]

Repeal of acts embraced in revision. Sec. 5596, R.S.

463. All acts of Congress passed prior to said first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, any portion of which is embraced in any section of said revision, are hereby repealed, and the section applicable thereto shall be in force in lieu thereof; all parts of such acts not contained in such revision having been repealed or superseded by subsequent acts, or not being general and permanent in their nature: Provided, That the incorporation into said revision of any general and permanent provision, taken from an act making appropriations, or from an act containing other provisions of a private, local, or temporary character, shall not repeal, or in any way affect any appropriation, or any provision of a private, local, or temporary character, contained in any of said acts, but the same shall remain in force; and all acts of Congress passed prior to said last-named day, no part of which are embraced in said revision, shall not be affected or changed by its enactment.

Accrued rights reserved. Sec. 5597, R.S.

464. The repeal of the several acts embraced in said revision shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal, but all rights and liabilities under said acts shall continue, and may be enforced in the same manner, as if said repeal had not been

---

[1] The Revised Statutes are an act of Congress. The enactment was approved and became the law on June 22, 1874. Wright v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 80. In case of doubt, ambiguity, or uncertainty the previous statutes may be referred to. Ibid. See also Bowen v. U. S., 100 U. S., 508. U. S. v. Bowen, 100 U. made; nor shall said repeal in any manner affect the right to any office, or change the term or tenure thereof.

Prosecutions and punishments.
Sec. 5598, R.S.

465. All offenses committed, and all penalties or forfeitures incurred under any statute embraced in said revision prior to said repeal, may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if said repeal had not been made.

Acts of limitation.
Sec. 5599, R.S.

466. All acts of limitation, whether applicable to civil causes and proceedings, or to the prosecution of offenses, or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures, embraced in said revision and covered by said repeal, shall not be affected thereby, but all suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to said repeal, may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time as if said repeal had not been made.

Arrangement and classification of sections.
Sec. 5600, R.S.

467. The arrangement and classification of the several sections of the revision have been made for the purpose of a more convenient and orderly arrangement of the same, and therefore no inference or presumption of a legislative construction is to be drawn by reason of the title under which any particular section is placed.

Acts passed since Dec. 1, 1873, not affected.
Feb. 18, 1875, c. 84, v. 18, p. 329; Mar. 3, 1875, c. 130, s. 9, v. 18, p. 401.
Sec. 5601, R.S.

468. The enactment of the said revision is not to affect or repeal any act of Congress passed since the 1st day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, and all acts passed since that date are to have full effect as if passed after the enactment of this revision, and so far as such acts vary from or conflict with any provision contained in said revision, they are to have effect as subsequent statutes, and as repealing any portion of the revision inconsistent therewith.

SECOND EDITION OF THE REVISED STATUTES.

EDITION OF 1878.

Commissioner to prepare new edition of Revised Statutes.
Mar. 2, 1877, v. 19, p. 268.

469. That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, one person, learned in the law, as a commissioner, for the purpose of preparing and publishing a new edition of the first volume of the Revised Statutes of the United States.[1] Act of March 2, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 268).

---

[1] The second edition of the Revised Statutes is only a new publication; a compilation, containing the original law, with specific amendments incorporated therein according to the judgment of the editor. Wright v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 80. The Revised Statutes did not affect statutes passed between December 1, 1873, and June 22, 1874. See note 1 to paragraph 405, ante.

Duty of commissioner. Sec. 2, ibid.

470. That in performing this duty, said commissioner shall be required to incorporate into the text of the Revised Statutes as published in the year anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-five, under the act of June twentieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, all the amendments which have been made in the revision so published since the first day of December, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, and all that shall be made up to the close of the present session of Congress, with marginal references to such amendatory acts, and to all the decisions of the several courts of the United States (as far as the same may have been published) which may have been made subsequent to those already cited in the margin of the present revision, and may include also citations to such judicial decisions of the various State courts as he may deem important; and he shall also make marginal references to the various statutes passed by Congress since the first day of December, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, not expressly therein declared to be amendments to the Revised Statutes, but which, in the opinion of said commissioner, may in any manner affect or modify any of the provisions of the said Revised Statutes, or any of the amendments thereto, indicating in such marginal notes by a difference in type the references to statutes of this kind, and he shall revise the indexes and incorporate therein references to the additions herein required. Sec. 2, ibid.

Amendments.

References.

Revision of indexes.

Additional matter to be included. Sec. 3, ibid.

471. That there shall also be included in said edition the Articles of Confederation, the Declaration of our National Independence, the Ordinance of seventeen hundred and eighty-seven for the government of the Northwestern Territory, the Constitution of the United States, with footnotes referring to decisions of the Federal courts thereon, the "Act to provide for the revision and consolidation of the statute laws of the United States," approved June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and the "Act providing for publication of the Revised Statutes and the laws of the United States," approved June twentieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, as well as the present act. Sec. 3, ibid.

When to be completed. Sec. 4, ibid.

472. That said new edition shall be completed in manuscript by said commissioner by the first day of January, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and by him presented to the Secretary of State for his examination and approval, who is hereby required to examine and compare the same, as amended, with all the amendatory acts, and, within two months after having been submitted

New edition of Revised Statutes to be prima facie evidence.

Mar. 9, 1878, v. 20, p. 27.

[1] Under the authority conferred by this statute the Hon. George S. Boutwell was appointed a commissioner to prepare the new edition. The following extract from the preface to the second edition of the Revised Statutes will explain its scope.

By an act of Congress approved March 2, 1877 (v. 19, c. 82, p. 268), authority was given for the appointment by the President of a commissioner, whose duty it should be to prepare and publish, subject to the examination and approval of the Secretary of State, a new edition of the first volume of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The jurisdiction of the commissioner was defined and limited by the statute. He was directed to incorporate into the text of the first edition of the statutes all the amendments made since the first day of December, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, including those made by the Forty-fourth Congress, with marginal references to the acts of amendment and to the decisions of the several courts of the United States, with like references to all the statutes passed in the same period, which, in the opinion of the commissioner, might in any many affect or modify any of the provisions of the first edition of the Revised Statutes.

He was also directed to include in the new edition the Articles of Confederation, the Declaration of our National Independence, the Ordinance of Seventeen hundred and eighty-seven for the Government of the Northwestern Territory, and the Constitution of the United States, with footnotes referring to the decisions of the Federal courts thereon. These papers were not printed with the first edition of the statutes.

This edition is not in any proper sense a new revision of the statutes of the United States. The commissioner was not clothed with power to change the substance or to alter the language of the existing edition of the Revised Statutes, nor could he correct any errors or supply any omissions therein except as authorized by the several statutes of amendment. Of specific amendments there are, however, several hundred, which have been incorporated with the text. The portions of the statutes repealed are printed in italics and included in brackets, and the new matter introduced is printed in the ordinary roman letter and also included in brackets.

So much of the work as affects the text of the present edition has been examined under the direction of the Hon. William M. Evarts, Secretary of State, by Hon. Charles P. James, one of the commissioners by whom the first edition of the Revised Statutes was prepared.

The acts of Congress passed since the first edition of the Revised Statutes was issued, and affecting the text thereof, are referred to in the margin of the respective sections so affected.

In this edition full and, it is believed, complete notes of reference to the opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States will be found under the several para-the ninth and tenth lines of section four,[1] as published in the nineteenth volume of the Statutes at Large, the words "and conclusive;" and, in the tenth line, the words "and treaties;" and, by inserting after the word "Territories," at the end of the eleventh line, the following words, to wit: "but shall not preclude reference to, nor control, in case of any discrepancy, the effect of any original act as passed by Congress since the first day of December, eighteen hundred and seventy-three." Act of March 9, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 27).

graphs of the Constitution to which the opinions respectively relate, and reference is also made to the small number of decisions which interpret or in any manner touch the Ordinance for the Government of the Northwestern Territory.

The appendix contains the various statutes which provide for or relate to the "revision and consolidation of the statute laws of the United States," and also a cross index by which the various provisions of the Revised Statutes may be traced to the original enactments in the Statutes at Large.

In the preparation of the index I have had the best assistance which I could command, and no labor has been avoided that could contribute in the least to the perfectness of the work. While it is not probable that the end sought has been attained I indulge the hope that the character of the index may, in some reasonable degree, meet the expectation of Congress, the executive officers of the Government, the judiciary, and the profession generally.

The analytical index to the Constitution was prepared by W. J. McDonald, esq., late Chief Clerk of the United States Senate.

The historical notes to the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation, and the Constitution are taken from a work entitled "The Organic Laws of the United States of America," prepared by Maj. Ben: Perley Poore, and printed by authority of Congress.

[2] Under this resolution a supplement was published in 1881, entitled volume 1. It was then supposed that other volumes would be authorized, from time to time, by subsequent legislation. This proved not to be the case, as the act of April 9, 1890 (paragraph 420, post), provided for the continuation of the publication, to be issued in one volume and to embrace the general laws passed subsequent to the issue of the Revised Statutes and including those of the Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, Forty-ninth, Fiftieth, and Fifty-first Congresses. See note 2 to paragraph 423, post.

[1] Section 37 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 337), contained the following requirement: "The Secretary be and he is hereby directed to have prepared and to report to Congress, at its next session, a code of regulations for the government of the Army, and of the militia in actual service, which shall embrace all necessary orders and forms of a general character for the performance of all duties incumbent on officers and men in the military service, including rules for the government of courts-martial, the existing regulations to remain in force until Congress shall have acted on said report." No code of regulations was submitted to Congress in conformity to the terms of this statute, and it was subsequently held by the Attorney-General of the United States, in an opinion rendered in the case of Contract-Surgeon Bayne (XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 461), that the above section, if not repealed by the general repealing clause of the Revised Statutes (section 5596), was superseded by the act of March 1, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 337), (a) which in effect conferred authority to modify existing Army Regulations as well as to create new ones. It was also held by the same officer that the code of regulations prepared in conformity to the authority conferred by section 2 of the act of June 23, 1879, (b) which was approved and published to the Army on February 17, 1881 (Army Regulations of 1881), superseded the code of Army Regulations of 1863 (XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 461). See, also, U. S. v. Eaton, 144 U. S., 617, 688; Caha v. U. S., 152 U. S., 212, 219; Morrison v. U. S., 13 Ct. Cls., 1–6; Smith v. U. S., 23 ibid., 452; Low v. Harrison, 72 Maine, 104.

[2] The codification of the "Regulations of the Army and General Orders," prepared in conformity to section 2 of the Act of June 23, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 34), which was approved and promulgated to the Army on February 17, 1881 (Army Regulations of 1881), superseded the body of regulations similarly promulgated in 1863. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 461.

The Army Regulations derive their force from the power of the President as Commander in Chief, and are binding upon all within the sphere of his legal and constitutional authority. Kurtz v. Moffatt, 115 U. S., 487, 503; U. S. v. Eliason, 16 Pet., 291; U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How., 556. The power of the Executive to establish rules and regulations for the government of the Army is undoubted. The power to establish implies, necessarily, the power to modify or repeal, or to create anew. him must be received as the act of the Executive and, as such, be binding upon all within the sphere of his legal or constitutional authority. Such regulations can not be questioned or defied because they may be thought unwise or mistaken. U. S. v. Eliason, 16 Pet., 291, 302.

The term regulations of an Executive Department describes rules and regulations relating to subjects on which a department acts, which are made by the head under an act of Congress conferring that power, and thereby giving to such regulations the force of law. A mere order of the President or of a Secretary is not a regulation. Harvey v. U. S., 3 Ct. Cls., 38, 42; Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 494, and note 1; IV Compt. Dec., 225. A "regulation" affects a class of officers; an "instruction" is a direction to govern the conduct of the particular officer to whom it is addressed. Landram v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls. 74. The Army Regulations when sanctioned by the President have the force of law, because it is done by him by the authority of law. U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How., 556; Gratiot v. U. S., 4 How., 80; Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S., 13; Smith v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 452. When Congress permits regulations to be formulated and published and carried into effect from year to year, the legislative ratification must be implied. Maddox v. U. S., 20 Ct. Cls., 193, 198.

The authority of the head of an Executive Department to issue orders, regulations, and instructions, with the approval of the President, is subject to the condition, necessarily implied, that they must be consistent with the statutes which have been enacted by Congress. U. S. v. Symonds, 120 U. S., 46, 49; U. S. v. Bishop, idem., 51; Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 494, note 2; par. 6, p. 168. Regulations can have no retroactive effect. (U. S. v. Davis, 132 U. S., 334.) Provision of statute exists by which the statute regulations of the Army may, within certain limits, be altered by the Secretary of War, but there is no such provision in regard to the statute regulations of the Navy. VI Opin. Att. Gen., 10; 8 ibid., 337. The same discrepancy exists in the military law of Great Britain. Ibid.

Regulations prescribed and framed by the Secretary of War and which are intended for the direction and government of the officers of the Army and agents of the Department do not bind the Commander in Chief nor the head of the War Department. Burns v. U. S., 12 Wall., 246; Smith v. U. S., 24 Ct. Cls., 209, 215. But see Arthur v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 422, and U. S. v. Barrows, 1 Abb., 351.

Regulations which heads of Departments are expressly authorized to make, in which the public is interested, become a part of that body of public records of which the courts take judicial notice. Caha v. U. S., 152 U. S., 211.

The purpose of a regulation is to carry into effect the law; but where rights, duties, and obligations are defined by statute they can not be taken away or abridged by regulations. Laurey v. U. S., 32 Ct. Cls., 259; U. S., v. Garlinger, 169 U. S., 316.

While regulations duly promulgated have the force of law in a limited sense, they can not enlarge or restrict the liability of the officer on his bond. Meads v. U. S., 81 Fed. Rep., 684.

Amendment and waiver of regulations.—Regulations made by the head of a Department may be amended or waived in their application to particular cases. III Compt. Dec., 305; IV, ibid., 40; I, ibid., 326. There must be a specific waiver, however, and in the absence of such specific waiver the regulation as it stands will be applied by the accounting officers in the settlement of accounts. III, ibid., 304; IV, ibid., 40.

[1] The Secretary of War is expressly authorized by other enactments of Congress to prescribe regulations for the transportation, safe-keeping, and distribution of articles of supply purchased by the Quartermaster's and Subsistence Departments (sec. 219, R. S.); for the preparation, submission, and opening of bids, act of April 10, 1878 (20 Stat. Regulations may be divided into different classes with respect to the question of the power of the person making the regulation to authorize an exception to it. There are, or may be, those which have received the sanction of Congress, and it is evident that the Secretary of War would have no authority to make an exception to one of these. There are also those that are made pursuant to and in aid of a statute. These may be modified, but until this is done are binding as well on the authority that made them as on others. U. S. v. Barrows, 1 Abbott, 351.

There is also a large body of other regulations emanating from and depending solely on the authority of the President as Commander in Chief. With reference to such regulations it has, I believe, been sometimes claimed that the same rule should be applied to them that is applied to the regulations made pursuant to statute. But this has not been done in practice, and I do not think that it should be done, for the reason that it would seem to be an unnecessary, embarrassing, and perhaps unconstitutional limitation of the authority of the President as Commander in Chief. Opin. J. A. Gen., March 5, 1896.

HISTORICAL NOTE.

The first volume of Army Regulations, using that term in the sense in which it is now understood, was issued to the Army on May 1, 1813, under the authority conferred by the act of March 3 of that year.

From March 29, 1779, until May 1, 1813, the "Regulations for the Order and Discipline of the Troops of the United States" were in force. They were prepared by Major-General Baron Steuben, the Inspector-General of the Army during the latter part of the war of the Revolution, and consisted in great part of matter which would now be properly termed drill regulations. The work was first printed at Worcester, Mass., in 1778, and was formally approved and adopted by Congress on March 29, 1779. The last edition of the Steuben regulations appeared in 1809, and it continued in use as a drill book after it had ceased to have authority as a volume of army regulations. In 1808 a small volume was published, apparently with the sanction of the War Department, containing the Articles of War which had been enacted in 1806, to which were added such military laws as were then in force.

Section 5 of the act of March 3, 1813 (2 Stat. L., 819), required the Secretary of War to prepare general regulations which, "when approved by the President of the United States, shall be respected and obeyed until altered or revoked by the same authority." The volume of regulations issued in pursuance of this authority was entitled "Military laws and rules and regulations for the armies of the United States," and was approved by the President on May 1, 1813. It contained the Articles of War of 1806, together with the statutes relating to the military establishment and a small number of regulations, properly so called. Editions of this work were published in 1814 and 1815, the latter, however, without the authority of the War Department.

The act of April 24, 1816 (3 Stat. L., 298), provided that the "regulations in force before the reduction of the Army be recognized as far as the same shall be found applicable to the service, subject, however, to such alterations as the Secretary of War may adopt, with the approbation of the President." In accordance with this legislation a volume of regulations was issued in September, 1816, and in January, 1820, a new edition containing the orders of the War Department issued since September, 1816.

Section 14 of the act of March 2, 1821 (3 Stat. L., 616), contained a provision that "the system of regulations prepared by Major-General Scott shall be, and the same are hereby, approved and adopted for the government of the Army of the United States and of the militia when in the service of the United States." These regulations were approved by President Monroe and published to the Army in July, 1821. On May 7, 1822, section 14 of the act of March 2, 1821, was formally repealed, thus withdrawing the legislative sanction which had been conferred by the statute above cited. As to this enactment Attorney-General Wirt advised that, "notwithstanding such repeal, the regulations having received the sanction of the President, continued in force by the authority of the President in all cases where they did not conflict with positive legislation." 1 Opin. Att. Gen., 549. The Regulations of 1821 were revised under the direction of General Scott and a new edition was issued on March 1, 1825, which continued in force until 1835.

A volume of General Regulations, compiled under the direction of Major-General Macomb, was printed and prepared for issue on September 1, 1835, but was not formally approved and promulgated until December 31, 1836. A second edition of this work, with some modifications, was issued in 1841, and a third edition, containing alterations and amendments, which have been promulgated in orders or taken from former volumes of regulations, was issued to the Army on May 1, 1847.

On January 1, 1857, a volume of Army Regulations, containing a number of important modifications, together with a general rearrangement of paragraphs and subject-matter, was prepared under the direction of Secretary Davis, and published with the approval of the President on January 1, 1857. This volume continued in force until August 10, 1861, when it was replaced by a revised edition; a second edition of this work was issued on June 25, 1863, containing the "changes and laws affecting Army Regulations and Articles of War."

The thirty-seventh section of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 337), directed the Secretary of War "to have prepared and to report to Congress at its next session a code of regulations for the government of the Army and of the militia in actual service, which shall embrace all necessary orders and forms of a general character for the performance of all duties incumbent on officers and men in the military service, including rules for the government of courts-martial; the existing regulations to remain in force until Congress shall have acted on said report." No code of regulations having been submitted, Congress provided, in section 20 of the act of July 15, 1870 (16 Stat. L., 319), that "the Secretary of War shall prepare a system of general regulations for the administration of the affairs of the Army, which, when approved by Congress, shall be in force and obeyed until altered or revoked by the same authority, and said regulations shall be reported to Congress at its next session: Provided, That the said regulations shall not be inconsistent with the laws of the United States."

In conformity to this legislation a code of regulations, which had been prepared by a board of officers of which Inspector-General Marcy was the president, was submitted to the House of Representatives on February 17, 1873, and was by that body referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed. No steps looking to their adoption were taken during the remainder of the session, and the Fifity-second Congress adjourned without action. The question was taken up by the Military Committee of the House of Representatives in the Forty-third Congress, and the proposition of adopting a code of Army Regulations was carefully considered. The conclusion reached by the committee was that the power to make and amend or alter regulations had best be left to Executive discretion. To that end a recommendation was submitted, which was adopted by Congress and approved by the President on March 1, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 337). This enactment repealed section 20 of the act of July 15, 1870, and authorized the President "to make and publish regulations for the government of the Army in accordance with existing laws."

Lineal rank, etc.

Sec. 2, June 18, 1878, v. 20, p. 149.

494. In every Official Army Register hereafter issued the lineal rank of all officers of the line of the Army shall be given separately for the different arms of the service; and if the officer be promoted from the ranks, or shall have served in the Volunteer Army, either as an enlisted man or officer, his service as a private and noncommissioned officer shall be given, and in addition thereto the record of his service as volunteer. Sec. 2, act of June 18, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 149).

Section 2 of the act of June 23, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 34), authorized and directed the Secretary of War "to cause all the regulations now in force to be codified and published to the Army," and provided that the expense attending the publication of the work should be defrayed from the appropriation for the contingent expenses of the Army for the current fiscal year. Under the authority thus conferred the Regulations of 1881 were prepared and issued to the Army, the order of promulgation bearing date February 17, 1881. A revision and condensation of this volume was issued by the Secretary of War on February 9, 1889. The Regulations now in force became effective on October 31, 1895, having received Executive approval on that date.

[1] The invariable policy of the Government has been to consider the military forces as falling into two classes: Those who were soldiers or sailors by profession, irrespective of the national exigency, who took war when it came, and, if they survived it, continued to make military occupation the business of their lives; second, those who left their ordinary avocations at the outbreak of or during the continuance of hostilities and enlisted with the expectation of serving only so long as the exigency continued. NATIVE TROOPS—TROOPS IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Troops in the Philippine Islands. Organization.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 36, v. 31, p. 757.

501. That when in his opinion the conditions in the Philippine Islands justify such action the President is authorized to enlist natives of those islands for service in the Army, to be organized as scouts, with such officers as he shall deem necessary for their proper control, or as troops or companies, as authorized by this act, for the Regular Army. The President is further authorized, in his discretion, to form companies, organized as are companies of the Regular Army, in squadrons or battalions, with officers and noncommissioned officers corresponding to similar organizations in the cavalry and infantry arms. The total number of enlisted men in said native organizations shall not exceed twelve thousand, and the total enlisted force of the line of the Army, together with such native force, shall not exceed at any one time one hundred thousand. Sec. 36, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 757).

[1] Including a force of post quartermaster-sergeants and detachment of army service men at the Military Academy.
[2] Including a force of post commissary-sergeants.
[3] Including the Hospital Corps and the nurse corps (female).
[4] Including a band and three battalions of engineer soldiers.
[5] Including a corps of ordnance sergeants and a force of enlisted men of ordnance.
[6] Including an enlisted force of sergeants, corporals, and privates.

The same. Officers. Ibid.

502. The majors to command the squadrons and battalions shall be selected by the President from captains of the line of the Regular Army, and while so serving they shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of the grade of major. The captains of the troops or companies shall be selected by the President from the first lieutenants of the line of the Regular Army, and while so serving they shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of captain of the arm to which assigned. The squadron and battalion staff officers, and first and second lieutenants of companies, may be selected from the noncommissioned officers or enlisted men of the Regular Army of not less than two years' service, or from officers or noncommissioned officers or enlisted men serving, or who have served, in the volunteers subsequent to April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and officers of those grades shall be given provisional appointments for periods of four years each, and no such appointments shall be continued for a second or subsequent term unless the officer's conduct shall have been satisfactory in every respect. Ibid.

The same. Pay and allowances. Ibid.

503. When, in the opinion of the President, natives of the Philippine Islands shall, by their services and character, show fitness for command, the President is authorized to make provisional appointments to the grades of second and first lieutenants from such natives, who, when so appointed, shall have the pay and allowances to be fixed by the Secretary of War, not exceeding those of corresponding grades of the Regular Army. Ibid.

The same. Enlisted men. Ibid.

504. The pay and allowances of provisional officers of native organizations shall be those authorized for officers of like grades in the Regular Army. The pay, rations, and clothing allowances to be authorized for the enlisted men shall be fixed by the Secretary of War, and shall not exceed those authorized for the Regular Army. Ibid.

THE PORTO RICAN REGIMENT.

Porto Rican regiment. Organization. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 37 v. 31, p. 758.

505. The President is authorized to organize and maintain one provisional regiment of not exceeding three battalions of infantry, for service in Porto Rico, the enlisted strength thereof to be composed of natives of that island as far as practicable. The regiment shall be organized as to numbers as authorized for infantry regiments of the Regular Army. The pay, rations, and clothing allowances to be authorized for the enlisted men shall be fixed by the Secretary of War, and shall not exceed those authorized for the Regular Army. The field officers shall be selected from officers of the next lower grades in the Regular Army and shall, while so serving in the higher grade, have the rank, pay, and allowances thereof. The company and regimental and battalion staff officers shall be appointed by the President. The President may, in his discretion, continue with their own consent the volunteer officers and enlisted men of the Porto Rico regiment, whose terms of service expire by law July first, nineteen hundred and one. Enlistments for the Porto Rico regiment shall be made for periods of three years, unless sooner discharged. The regiment shall be continued in service until further directed by Congress. Sec. 37, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 758).

INDIAN SCOUTS.

July 28, 1866, s. 2, v. 16, p. 317; Aug. 12, 1876, v. 19, p. 131.
Sec. 1112, R.S.

506. The President is authorized to enlist a force of Indians, not exceeding one thousand, who shall act as scouts in the Territories and Indian country. They shall be discharged when the necessity for their service shall cease, or at the discretion of the department commander. A proportionate number of noncommissioned officers may be appointed. And the scouts, when they furnish their own horses and horse equipments, shall be entitled to receive forty cents per day for their use and risk so long as thus employed.[1] Act of August 12, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 131).

ENLISTED STRENGTH OF THE ARMY.

Maximum strength.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 36 v. 31, p. 757.

507. The total enlisted force of the line of the Army, together with such native force, shall not exceed, at any one time, one hundred thousand.[2] Sec. 36, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 757).

The same.
Sec. 30, ibid.

508. The President is authorized to maintain the enlisted force of the several organizations of the Army at their maximum strength, as fixed by this act, during the present exigencies of the service, or until such time as Congress may hereafter otherwise direct.[1] Sec. 30, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 756).

[1] The act of July 24, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 97), which limited the number of Indian scouts to be employed to 300 was repealed by the act of August 12, 1876 (ibid., 131).

[2] The acts of June 1, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 73), March 3, 1875 (ibid., 452), July 24, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 77), November 21, 1877 (20 Stat. L., 2), and June 18, 1878 (ibid., 146), contained a provision limiting the number of enlisted men in the Army to 25,000, including hospital stewards and Indian scouts. The act of June 29, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 30), contained the requirement "that no money appropriated by this act shall be paid for recruiting the Army beyond the number of 25,000 enlisted men, including Indian scouts and hospital stewards; and thereafter there shall be no more than 25,000 enlisted men in the Army at any one time, unless otherwise authorized by law." This provision was repeated in the acts of May 4, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 110), February 24, 1881 (ibid., 346), June 30, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 117), March 3, 1883 (ibid., 456), July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 107), and March 3, 1885 (ibid., 357). The act of March 1, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 435), which provided that the enlisted force of the Hospital Corps should be in excess of the strength authorized by law, was expressly repealed by the act of

THE WAR ESTABLISHMENT.

THE REGULAR ARMY—THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

THE REGULAR ARMY.

Par.
509. Increase in strength of troops, companies, and batteries.
510. Batteries in time of war.
511. Increase in second lieutenants.
Par.
512. Pay of enlisted men in time of war.
512. Pay of officers for increased commands.
513. Reduction of war establishment.

Increase in companies, etc. April 26, 1898, s. 2, v. 30, p. 364.

509. Upon a declaration of war[2] by Congress, or declaration of Congress that war exists, the enlisted strength of a company, troop, and battery, respectively, may, in the discretion of the President, be increased to comprise not exceeding:[3]

For each company of infantry: One first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, four sergeants, twelve corporals, two musicians, one artificer, one wagoner, and eighty-four privates; total enlisted, one hundred and six.

For each troop of cavalry: One first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, six sergeants, eight corporals, two farriers and blacksmiths, two trumpeters, one saddler, one wagoner, seventy-eight privates; total enlisted, one hundred.

March 8, 1898 (30 Stat L., 261), which fixed the enlisted strength of the Army at 26,610.

[1] Sections 6 and 7 of the act of July 29, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 279), increasing the military establishment, declared such increase to be for the period of the existing rebellion, and, unless otherwise ordered by Congress, required the military establishment to be reduced to a number not exceeding 25,000 men, "within one year after the constitutional authority of the Government of the United States shall be reestablished, and organized resistance to such authority shall no longer exist." Section 7 of the act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 365), and section 15 of the act March 2, 1899 (ibid., 981), contained similar requirements.

[2] By the act of April 25, 1898, war was formally declared to exist with the Kingdom of Spain. The following is the text of the declaration: "First. That war be, and the same is hereby, declared to exist, and that war has existed since the twenty-first day of April, anno Domini eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, including said day, between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Spain.

"Second. That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States, and to call into the actual service of the United States the militia of the several States, to such extent as may be necessary to carry this act into effect." Act of April 25, 1898.

[3] Under the authority conferred by this statute a third battalion was established by the President in each of the infantry regiments of the Regular Army on April 26, 1898. General Orders 27 and 32, A. G. O., 1898. The companies of cavalry, artillery, and infantry were ordered to be recruited to the war strength authorized by the act of April 26, 1898, by G. O. 27, A. G. O. of 1898. The three-battalion organization having been adopted for the infantry of the permanent establishment by section 10 of the act of February 2, 1901 (30 Stat. L., 750), the authority conferred by section 2, act of April 26, 1898, has ceased to be operative.

For each battery of heavy artillery: One first sergeant, twenty-two sergeants, ten corporals, two musicians, two artificers, one wagoner, one hundred and sixty-two privates; total enlisted, two hundred.

For each battery of field artillery: One first sergeant, one quartermaster-sergeant, one veterinary sergeant, six sergeants, fifteen corporals, two farriers, two artificers, one saddler, two musicians, one wagoner, one hundred and forty-one privates; total enlisted, one hundred and seventy-three.

For each company of engineers: One first sergeant, ten sergeants, ten corporals, ten musicians, sixty-four first-class privates, sixty-three second-class privates; total enlisted, one hundred and fifty. In time of war there shall be added to the Signal Corps of the Army ten corporals, one hundred first-class privates, and forty second-class privates, who shall have the pay and allowances of engineer troops of the same grade. Sec. 2, act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364).

Batteries in time of war. Sec. 5, ibid.

510. In time of war the President shall cause the batteries of artillery authorized by law to be organized as heavy or field artillery, as in his judgment the exigencies of the service may require. Sec. 5, ibid.

Increase in second lieutenants. Sec. 4, ibid.

511. When recruited to their war strength the President may add one second lieutenant to each battery of artillery; such offices to be filled by appointments, as prescribed by existing law. Sec. 4, ibid.

PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

Pay of enlisted men in time of war. Sec. 6, ibid.

512. In time of war the pay proper of enlisted men shall be increased twenty per centum over and above the rates of pay as fixed by law: Provided, That in war time no additional increased compensation shall be allowed to soldiers performing what is known as extra or special duty: Provided further, That any soldier who deserts shall, besides incurring the penalties now attaching to the crime of desertion, forfeit all right to pension which he might otherwise have acquired. Sec. 6, ibid.

Pay of officers for increased command. Sec. 7, ibid.

513. In time of war every officer serving with troops operating against an enemy who shall exercise, under assignment in orders issued by competent authority, a command above that pertaining to his grade, shall be entitled to receive the pay and allowances of the grade appropriate to the command so exercised: Provided, That a rate of pay exceeding that of a brigadier-general shall not be paid in any case by reason of such assignment. Sec. 7, ibid.

REDUCTION OF WAR ESTABLISHMENT.

514. At the end of any war in which the United States may become involved the Army shall be reduced to a peace basis by the transfer in the same arm of the service or absorption by promotion or honorable discharge under such regulations as the Secretary of War may establish of supernumerary commissioned officers and the honorable discharge or transfer of supernumerary enlisted men; and nothing contained in this act shall be construed as authorizing a permanent increase in the commissioned or enlisted force of the Regular Army beyond that now provided by the law in force prior to the passage of this act, except as to the increase of twenty-five majors provided for in section one hereof. Sec. 7, ibid.

INCREASE OF 1899.[1]

Temporary increase March 2, 1899, s. 12, v. 30, p. 979.

515. To meet the present exigencies of the military service the President is hereby authorized to maintain the Regular Army at a strength of not exceeding sixty-five thousand enlisted men, to be distributed amongst the several branches of the service, including the Signal Corps, according to the needs of each.[2] Sec. 12, act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 979).

517. When it becomes necessary to raise a volunteer army, the President shall issue his proclamation stating the number of men desired, within such limits as may be fixed by law, and the Secretary of War shall prescribe such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the terms of this Act, as may in his judgment be necessary for the purpose of examining, organizing, and receiving into service the men called for: Provided, That all men received into service in the Volunteer Army shall, as far as practicable, be taken from the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia and the Indian Territory in proportion to their population. And any company, troop, battalion, or regiment from the Indian Territory shall be formed and organized under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War.[1] Sec. 5, act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 361).

[1] Under the authority conferred by the acts of April 20 and April 22, 1898, and in pursuance of the declaration of war with the Kingdom of Spain contained in the act of April 25, 1898, a call was addressed to the governors of the several States for a force of 125,000 volunteers. G. O. 30, A. G. O. 1898. For regulations respecting the enrollment, armament, and equipment of the volunteer forces thus called into the service of the United States, see General Orders 26, 31, 33, and 41, A. G. O. of 1898.

Section 6 of the act of April 22, 1898, conferred authority upon the President "to organize companies, troops, battalions, or regiments, possessing special qualifications, from the nation at large, not to exceed three thousand men, under such rules and regulations, including the appointment of the officers thereof, as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War." The act of May 11, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 405), authorized the organization of "a volunteer brigade of engineers from the nation at large, to consist of not more than three regiments and not more than three thousand five hundred men, possessing the special qualifications necessary for engineer troops, under such rules and regulations, including the appointment of the officers thereof, as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War." By the same enactment the organization of "an additional volunteer force of not exceeding ten thousand enlisted men possessing immunity from diseases incident to tropical climates" was also authorized. The officers of these forces were to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, and they were not apportioned among the States and Territories, as required in section 5 of the act of April 22, 1898. The act of May 18, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 418), authorized the formation of a volunteer signal corps. This statute contained the requirement that "two-thirds of all officers below the rank of major and a like proportion of the enlisted men shall be skilled electricians or telegraph operators."

519. Each regiment of the Volunteer Army shall have one surgeon, two assistant surgeons, and one chaplain, and all the regimental and company officers shall be appointed by the governors of the States in which their respective organizations are raised. Ibid.

Militia organizations, officers. Ibid.

520. When the members of any company, troop, battery, battalion, or regiment of the organized militia of any State shall enlist in the Volunteer Army in a body, as such company, troop, battery, battalion, or regiment, the regimental, company, troop, battery, and battalion officers in service with the militia organization thus enlisting may be appointed by the governors of the States and Territories, and shall when so appointed be officers of corresponding grades in the same organization when it shall have been received into the service of the United States as a part of the Volunteer Army. Ibid.

Appointment. Retention of Regular Army rank.

521. The governor of any State or Territory may, with the consent of the President, appoint officers of the Regular Army in the grades of field officers in organizations of the Volunteer Army, and the President may appoint officers of the Regular Army in the grade of field officers in organizations of the Volunteer Army raised in the District of Columbia and the Indian Territory, and in the regiments possessing special qualifications, provided for in section six of an act of Congress approved April twenty-second, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and in section two of the act of Congress approved May eleventh, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight; and officers thus appointed shall be entitled to retain their rank in the Regular Army: Provided, That not more than one officer of the Regular Army shall hold a commission in any one regiment of the Volunteer Army at the same time: And provided further, That officers so appointed shall be entitled to receive only the pay and allowances of their rank in the volunteer organization.[1] Sec. 2, act of May 28, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 421).

into the capacity, qualifications, conduct, and efficiency of any commissioned officer of said army within his command: Rank of members of board. Provided, That each member of the board shall be superior in rank to the officer whose qualifications are to be inquired Adverse report into: And provided further, That if the report of such a board is adverse to the continuance of any officer, and the report be approved by the President, such officer shall be discharged from service in the Volunteer Army, at the discretion of the President, with one month's pay and allowances. Sec. 14, act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364).

Militia organizations. April 26, 1898, s. 3, v. 30, p. 364.

523. In the event of a call by the President for either volunteers or the militia of the country the President is authorized to accept the quotas of troops of the various States and Territories, including the District of Columbia and Indian Territory, as organized under the laws of the States and Territories, including the District of Columbia, in companies, troops, and batteries, each to contain so far as practicable the number of enlisted men authorized in this act for each arm of the service, and battalions of not less than three such companies and regiments of not less than ten nor more than twelve such companies. But this proviso shall apply to companies, troops, batteries, battalions, and regimental organizations and none other: Provided further, That in volunteer organizations received into the service under this act and existing laws, one hospital steward shall be authorized for each battalion. Sec. 3, act of April 26, 1898.

Term of enlistment. Sec. 4, ibid.

524. All enlistments for the Volunteer Army shall be for a term of two years, unless sooner terminated. Sec. 4, ibid.

Recruitment. Sec. 7, ibid.

525. All organizations of the Volunteer Army shall be so recruited from time to time as to maintain them as near to their maximum strength as the President may deem necessary, and no new organization shall be accepted into service from any State unless the organizations already in service from such State are as near to their maximum strength of officers and enlisted men as the President may deem necessary. Sec. 7, ibid.

RETURNS AND MUSTER ROLLS.

Returns and rolls. Sec. 8, ibid.

526. All returns and muster rolls of organizations of the Volunteer Army and of militia organizations while in the service of the United States shall be rendered to the Adjutant-General of the Army, and upon the disbandment of such organizations the records pertaining to them shall be transferred to and filed in the Record and Pension Office of the War Department. And regimental and all other medical officers serving with volunteer troops in the field or elsewhere shall keep a daily record of all soldiers reported sick or wounded, as shown by the morning calls or reports, and shall deposit such reports with other reports provided for in this section with the Record and Pension Office, as provided herein for other reports, returns, and muster rolls. Sec. 8, ibid.

PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

527. All officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army, and of the militia of the States when in the service of the United States, shall be in all respects on the same footing as to pay, allowances, and pensions as that of officers and enlisted men of corresponding grades in the Regular Army. Sec. 12, ibid.

Pay and allowances.

528. The pay and allowance of such of the volunteers as are received into the service of the United States under the Act of Congress approved April twenty-second, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and the acts supplemental thereto, shall be deemed to commence from the day on which they joined for duty and are enrolled at the battalion, regimental, or State rendezvous. Act of May 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 424).

[1] The invariable policy of the Government has been to consider the military forces as falling into two classes—those who were soldiers or sailors by profession, and those who entered the service for the exigency only. To this latter class—to those who have been discharged when the war ended—Congress have always and repeatedly given this same gratuity of two months additional pay to help the men through the interval between their discharge and the resumption of their avocations in civil life. [1] The term "service" as used in the act of January 12, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 784), which provides extra pay to officers and enlisted men of the United States Volunteers when "mustered out of service," means the military service of the United States, and does not apply to officers or enlisted men of the Regular Army who, on muster out as officers of volunteer organizations, return to duty in the Regular Army. V Comp. Dec., 529.

A soldier killed while running the guard did not serve "honestly and faithfully," within the meaning of the acts of January 12 and March 3, 1898, and his heirs are not entitled to the extra pay therein provided. VI, ibid., 794.

Service in the Philippine Islands and service in the Hawaiian Islands is service "beyond the limits of the United States" within the meaning of the act of January 12, 1899. VI Compt. Dec., 374, 379.

The extra pay allowed by the act of January 12, 1899, and the acts amendatory thereof, to officers and enlisted men of volunteers on their muster out of the military service, is not authorized in the case of an officer discharged on the adverse report of a board of officers convened under section 14 of the act of April 22, 1898 (ibid., 700); or in the case of a soldier discharged at his own request (ibid., 346); or in the case of an officer on furlough or while awaiting muster out (ibid., 42).

TRAVEL PAY ON DISCHARGE BY ORDER.

Travel pay on discharge by order.
June 6, 1900, v. 31, p. 708.

541. When the Secretary of War, in the exercise of his discretion, has directed the discharge of any enlisted men of the regular or volunteer forces of the Army, and the orders or instructions directing such discharge stated that such enlisted men were entitled to travel pay, such order or instruction shall be sufficient authority for the payment to the soldiers of the traveling allowances provided for by section twelve hundred and ninety of the Revised Statutes. And officers of the Pay Department of the Army shall have credit in the settlement of their accounts for all payments made in obedience to said orders or instructions of the Secretary of War: Provided, That soldiers discharged under such orders or instructions, which stated that such soldiers were entitled to travel pay, and who were absent by authority on the date of the muster out of their regiments or of discharge, are entitled to and will be paid traveling allowances from place of muster out of their regiments or the places designated in the final statements as the place of discharge to the place of enlistment or enrollment: Provided further, That the provisions of this act shall apply only to cases that have arisen or shall arise under orders or instructions for discharge with travel pay issued between April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and the date of the passage of this act: Provided further, That it shall not be held as applying to any case in which the order directing the discharge did not set forth that the soldier was entitled to travel pay. Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 762).

Historical note.—The military establishment at the organization of the Government under the Constitution contained no officer of higher rank than lieutenant-colonel. Authority was conferred by the act of March 3, 1791 (1 Stat. L., 222), to appoint a major-general and a brigadier-general, should the President deem that course necessary, and, by the act of March 28, 1792 (ibid., 246), the number of brigadier-generals was to be increased to four, if, in the opinion of the President, such appointments would "be conducive to the good of the public service." This authority was withdrawn, however, by section 3 of the act of May 30, 1796 (ibid., 483). The number of brigadier-generals was reduced to one, and the office of major-general was abolished by the act of March 3, 1797 (ibid., 507). The act of May 28, 1798 (ibid., 558), passed in contemplation of war with France, conferred authority upon the President to appoint a lieutenant-general and a suitable number of major-generals; by section 3 of the act of July 16, 1798 (ibid., 604), the number of major-generals so appointed was restricted to two, and the number of brigadier-generals to four. The grade of lieutenant-general was abolished and replaced by that of General of the Armies of the United States, by section 9 of the act of March 3, 1799 (ibid., 752). The difficulties with France having been put in the way of settlement, recruiting was suspended until the further order of Congress by the act of February 20, 1800 (2 ibid., 7); military appointments were authorized to be suspended by the act of May 14, 1800 (ibid., 85), and at the reduction of 1802, the number of general officers was reduced to one brigadier-general. Section 3, act of March 16, 1802, 2 ibid., 132.

During the controversy with Great Britain which culminated in the war of 1812, the appointment of two additional brigadier-generals was authorized by section 3 of the act of April 12, 1808 (2 ibid., 481); by the act of December 24, 1811 (ibid., 669), the existing military establishment was ordered to be immediately completed, and by section 4 of the act of January 11, 1812 (ibid., 671), two major-generals and four brigadier-generals were authorized. By the act of February 24, 1813 (ibid., 801), six major-generals and six brigadier-generals were authorized in addition to those already in service. The act of March 3, 1815 (3 ibid., 224), fixing the military peace establishment, reduced the number of major-generals to two and the number of brigadier-generals to four; at the general reduction of 1821 these numbers were fixed at one and two, respectively (section 5, act of March 2, 1821, ibid., 615), at which number it remained until the outbreak of hostilities with Mexico in 1846. The act of May 13, 1846 (9 Stat. L., 9), providing for the prosecution of the existing war with Mexico, authorized the acceptance of 50,000 volunteers, and conferred power upon the President to organize the forces thus provided into divisions and brigades, and to apportion the general and staff officers among the respective States and Territories as he might deem proper. One major-general and two brigadier-generals, in addition to those already authorized by law, were added to the establishment by the act of June 13, 1846 (ibid., 17), with the proviso that the number of general officers was to be reduced to that existing at the outbreak of hostilities upon the termination of the war "by a definitive treaty of peace." With a view to determine the number of general officers to be appointed under the act of May 13, 1846, it was provided by the act of June 26, 1846 (ibid., 20), that brigades of volunteer troops should consist of not less than three regiments and divisions of not less than two brigades; and any reduction in the strength of the volunteer forces was to involve a corresponding reduction in the number of general officers, all of whom were to be mustered out at the close of the war. By the act of March 3, 1847 (ibid., 184) two major-generals and three brigadier-generals were authorized for the period of the war. The reduction at the close of the war was accomplished by a proviso in the act of July 19, 1848 (ibid., 247), which required that vacancies occurring in the grade of general officer, should not be filled until the numbers of major and brigadier general had been reduced to one and two, respectively.

At the outbreak of the war of the rebellion the President, by proclamations, dated April 15, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 1258), and May 3, 1861 (ibid., 1260), called forth a force of 75,000 militia and 42,034 volunteers; and Congress, by the act of July 22, 1861 (ibid., 268), authorized the enlistment of 500,000 volunteers, and made provision for their organization into brigades and divisions, and for the appointment of such numbers of general officers as were necessary to their command. By section 4 of the same act the President was authorized to select six major-generals and eighteen brigadier-generals from the line or staff of the Army, and the officers so appointed were allowed to retain their army rank. The number of general officers of volunteers was fixed by the act of July 5, 1862 (ibid., 506), which restricted the number of major-generals to forty and the number of brigadier-generals to two hundred. By section 9 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 333), the number of major-generals in the regular establishment was fixed at five and that of brigadier-generals at ten; by section 3 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), the number of brigadier-generals was reduced to eight; and by section 8 of the act of July 15, 1870 (16 ibid., 318), the number was still further reduced to six and that of major-generals to three.

[1] The personal staff of the Lieutenant-General was established by section 5 of the act of May 28, 1798 (1 Stat. L., 558), and consisted of four aids and two military secretaries, each of whom was to have the rank, pay, and emoluments of a lieutenant-colonel; the same establishment was allowed to General Scott when the grade of Lieutenant-General was revived and conferred, by brevet, upon that officer under the authority contained in joint resolution No. 9, of February 15, 1855 (10 ibid., 723). By section 16 of the act of March 3, 1857 (11 ibid., 205), the number of officers on the personal staff of the Lieutenant-General in time of peace was restricted to two aids and one military secretary, with the rank and pay of lieutenant-colonels of cavalry. When the grade of Lieutenant-General was revived by the act of February 29, 1864 (13 ibid., 11), the personal staff as established by the act of May 28, 1798, was authorized; by section 2 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 223), the staff of that officer was fixed at two aids and a military secretary. These officers were to be selected by detail from the Army and were to have, while so detailed, the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant-colonels of cavalry.

[2] Section 5 of the act of March 2, 1821 (3 Stat. L., 615), contained the requirement that aids to major and brigadier generals should be appointed, by selection, from the subalterns of the Army. By section 8 of the act of June 18, 1846 (9 ibid., 17), captains were made eligible for selection as aids to major-generals. A major-general is allowed by law three aids, to be taken from captains or lieutenants of the Army. A brigadier-general is allowed two, to be taken from the lieutenants of the Army. An officer assigned to duty in accordance with his brevet rank as major-general or brigadier-general may, with the special sanction of the War Department, be allowed the aids of the grade. General officers may select their aids from officers serving in their commands, subject to the restrictions herein prescribed, but appointments as aids of officers serving without such limits must receive the approval of the Secretary of War. An officer will be appointed aid to a general officer only after he shall have actually served with troops for at least three of the five years immediately preceding such appointment. He will hold such appointment for no longer a period than four years, except that, upon the request of a general officer whose retirement by reason of age will occur within one year, the tour of four years may be extended by the Secretary of War to the date of such retirement. Par. 33, A. R., 1895.

For statutory provisions and executive regulations respecting the staffs of general officers when assigned to commands see the chapter entitled RANK AND COMMAND—TACTICAL AND TERRITORIAL ORGANIZATIONS.

[1] The grade of "General of the Armies of the United States" was created by section 9 of the act of March 3, 1799 (1 Stat. L., 752). The office, though not expressly referred to in any of the acts for the reduction or disbandment of the forces raised in contemplation of war with France, ceased to exist in 1802, not having been mentioned in the act of March 16, 1802 (2 ibid., 132), which determined the military peace establishment. The grade was revived under the title of "General of the Army of the United States," by the act of July 25, 1866 (14 ibid., 223), and was conferred upon Lieutenant-General Grant; and was recognized and continued by section 9 of the act of July 28, 1866 (ibid., 333). Section 6 of the act of July 15, 1870 (16 ibid., 318), contained the requirement, however, that "the offices of General and Lieutenant-General shall continue until a vacancy shall exist in the same, and no longer, and when such vacancy shall occur in either of said offices immediately thereupon all laws and parts of laws creating said office shall become inoperative, and shall, by virtue of this act, from thenceforward be held to be repealed." The office ceased to exist, as a grade of military rank, at the death of Gen. W. T. Sherman on February 14, 1891. The act of March 3, 1885 (23 ibid., 434), authorized the appointment of a "General of the Army on the Retired List," which was conferred upon Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, and expired on the death of that officer on July 23, 1885. By the act of June 1, 1888 (25 ibid., 165), the grade of Lieutenant-General was discontinued and merged in that of General of the Army, which was conferred upon Lieut. Gen. P. H. Sheridan, and ceased to exist at the death of that officer on August 5, 1888.

CHIEF OF STAFF.—By the act of March 3, 1865 (13 Stat. L., 500), the office of chief of staff, with the rank of brigadier-general, was provided for the Lieutenant-General commanding the Army. By section 2 of the act of July 25, 1866 (14 ibid., 223), that officer was transferred to the staff of the General. The office was abolished by the act of April 3, 1869 (16 ibid., 6).

[2] The grade of Lieutenant-General was first established by the act of May 28, 1798 (1 Stat. L., 558); it was abolished, however, by section 9 of the act of March 3, 1799 (ibid., 752), and the command of the forces authorized to be raised, in contemplation of war with France, was vested in the "General of the Armies of the United States" authorized by that statute. The grade was revived by joint resolution No. 9 of February 15, 1855 (10 ibid., 723), and the rank was conferred by brevet on Maj. Gen. Winfield Scott; the office thus created ceased to exist at the death of that officer on May 29, 1866. The grade was again revived by the act of February 29, 1864 (13 ibid., 11), and conferred upon Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, and the office was recognized and continued by section 9 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 333), but was to cease to exist upon the occurrence of a vacancy, under the restriction imposed by section 6 of the act of July 15, 1870 (16 ibid., 318). The office was vacated and merged in that of General of the Army upon the promotion of Lieutenant-General Sheridan to that grade, under the authority conferred by the act of June 1, 1888 (25 ibid., 165). It was revived a third time by joint resolution No. 9 of February 5, 1895 (28 ibid., 968), and was conferred, subject to the restriction therein contained, upon Maj. Gen. John M. Schofield, and the office continues to exist as a grade of military rank on the retired list. The rank, pay, and allowances of Lieutenant-General were conferred upon "the senior major-general of the line commanding the Army" by section 2 of the act of June 6, 1900 (31 ibid., 655); the office was revived as a grade of military rank by section 1, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 748).

559. The President of the United States is hereby authorized to select from the brigadier-generals of volunteers two volunteer officers, without regard to age, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint them brigadier-generals, United States Army, for the purpose of placing them on the retired list. Sec. 33, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 756).

Appointment of general officers.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 33, v. 31, p. 756.

560. And the President is also hereby authorized to select from the retired list of the Army an officer not above the rank of brigadier-general who may have distinguished himself during the war with Spain, in command of a separate army, and to appoint, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the officer so selected to be major-general, United States Army, with the pay and allowances established by law for officers of that grade on the retired list. Ibid.

[1] The terms "rank" and "command" have received executive interpretation in paragraphs 7 and 13 of the Army Regulations of 1901.

Military rank is that character or quality bestowed on military persons which marks their station and confers eligibility to exercise command or authority in the military service within the limits prescribed by law. It is divided into degrees or grades, which mark the relative positions and powers of the different classes of persons possessing it. Par. 7, A. R., 1901.

Rank is generally held by virtue of office in a regiment, corps, or department, but may be conferred independently of office, as in the case of retired officers and of those holding it by brevet. Par. 8, A. R., 1901.

A determination by the legislative and executive branches of the Government, as to the relation or superior authority among military officers, is conclusive upon the judiciary. De Celis v. U. S., 13 Ct. Cls., 117.

The following are the grades of rank of officers and noncommissioned officers:

1. Lieutenant-general.
2. Major-general.
3. Brigadier-general.
4. Colonel.
5. Lieutenant-colonel.
6. Major.
7. Captain.
8. First lieutenant.
9. Second lieutenant.
10. Veterinarian, cavalry and artillery.
11. Cadet.
12. Sergeant-major, regimental, and sergeant-major, senior grade, artillery corps.
13. Quartermaster-sergeant, regimental.
14. Commissary-sergeant regimental.
15. Ordnance sergeant, post commissary-sergeant, post quartermaster-sergeant, electrician sergeant, hospital steward, first-class sergeant Signal Corps, chief musician, chief trumpeter, and principal musician.
16. Squadron and battalion sergeant-major and sergeant-major, junior grade, artilllery corps.
17. First sergeant and drum-major.
18. Sergeant and acting hospital steward.
19. Corporal.

In each grade, date of commission, appointment, or warrant determines the order of precedence. (Par. 9, Army Regulations of 1901.)

[2] Command is exercised by virtue of office and the special assignment of officers holding military rank who are eligible by law to exercise command. Without orders from competent authority an officer can not put himself on duty by virtue of his commission alone, except as contemplated in the twenty-fourth and one hundred and twenty-second articles of war. Par. 13, A. R., 1901.

562. In all matters relating to the rank, duties, and rights of officers, the same rules and regulations shall apply to officers of the Regular Army and to volunteers commissioned in, or mustered into said service, under the laws of the United States, for a limited period. One hundred and twenty-third article of war.

The following are the commands appropriate to each grade:

1. For a captain, a company.
2. For a major or lieutenant-colonel, a battalion or squadron.
3. For a colonel, a regiment.
4. For a brigadier-general, two regiments.
5. For a major-general, four regiments. Par. 14, A. R., 1901.

The functions assigned to any officer in these regulations by title of office devolve upon the officer acting in his place, except when otherwise specified. An officer in temporary command shall not, except in urgent cases, alter or annul the standing orders of the permanent commander without authority from the next higher commander. Par. 15, A. R., 1901.

An officer who succeeds to any command or duty stands in regard to his duties in the same situation as his predecessor. The officer relieved will turn over to his successor all orders in force at the time and all the public property and funds pertaining to his command or duty, and will receive therefor duplicate receipts showing the condition of each article. Par. 16, A. R., 1901.

When an officer is charged with directing an expedition or making a reconnoissance, without having command of the escort, the commander of the escort will consult him touching all arrangements necessary to secure the success of the operation. Par. 19, A. R., 1901. For statutory provisions respecting the exercise of command by staff officers see the chapter called THE STAFF DEPARTMENTS. See, also, paragraphs 17 and 18, A. R., 1901.

565. In fixing relative rank[3] between officers of the same grade and date of appointment and commission, the time which each may have actually served as a commissioned officer of the United States, whether continuously or at different periods, shall be taken into account. And in computing such time, no distinction shall be made between service as a commissioned officer in the Regular Army and service since the 19th day of April, 1861, in the volunteer forces, whether under appointment or commission from the President or from the governor of a State.

Assignment to duty according to brevet rank. Sec. 1211, R.S.

566. Officers may be assigned to duty or command according to their brevet rank by special assignment of the President; and brevet rank shall not entitle an officer to precedence or command except when so assigned.

Assignment and transfer of engineers. Apr. 10, 1806, c. 20, art. 63, v. 2, p. 367. Sec. 1158, R.S.

567. Engineers shall not assume nor be ordered on any duty beyond the line of their immediate profession, except by the special order of the President.[4] They may, at the discretion of the President, be transferred from one corps to another, regard being paid to rank.

[1] The office of commodore, as a grade of rank on the active list of the Navy, was abolished by section 7 of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1005); that statute also contained the requirement that "each rear-admiral embraced in the nine lower numbers of the grade shall receive the same pay and allowance as are now allowed a brigadier-general in the Army."

[2] The office of lieutenant, junior grade, was created by the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 442), replacing that of master in the Navy, which was discontinued by that statute.

[3] Officers of the Regular Army, Marine Corps, and volunteers when commissioned or mustered into the service of the United States, being upon equal footing, take precedence in each grade by date of commission or appointment. Militia officers, when employed with the regular or volunteer forces of the United States, take rank next after all officers of like grade in those forces. Par. 10, A. R., 1901.

Between officers of the same grade and date of appointment or commission, other than through promotion by seniority, relative rank is determined by length of service, continuous or otherwise, as a commissioned officer of the United States, either in the Regular Army or, since April 19, 1861, in the volunteer forces. When periods of service are equal, precedence will, except when fixed by order of merit on examination, be determined, first, by rank in service when appointed; second, by former rank in the Army or Marine Corps; third, by lot, among such as have not been in the military service of the United States. Par. 11, A. R., 1901.

[4] An officer of engineers or ordnance, or of the Adjutant-General's, Inspector-General's, Judge-Advocate-General's, Quartermaster's, or Subsistence Department, or of the Signal Corps, though eligible to command, according to his rank, shall not assume command of troops unless put on duty under orders which specially so direct, by authority of the President. Par. 17, A. R., 1901.

568. Officers of the Medical Department of the Army shall not be entitled, in virtue of their rank, to command in the line or in other staff corps.[1]

Medical officers not to command in line or in other staff departments.

TACTICAL ORGANIZATIONS.

570. In the ordinary arrangement of the Army two regiments of infantry or of cavalry shall constitute a brigade, and shall be the command of a brigadier-general, and two brigades shall constitute a division, and shall be the command of a major-general; but it shall be in the discretion of the commanding general to vary this disposition whenever he may deem it proper to do so.[2]

Sec. 1114, R.S.

571. In time of war, or when war is imminent, the troops in the service of the United States, whether belonging to the Regular or Volunteer Army or to the militia, shall be organized, as far as practicable, into divisions of three brigades, each brigade to be composed of three or more regiments; and whenever three or more divisions are assembled in the same army the President is authorized to organize them into army corps, each corps to consist of not more than three divisions. *Sec. 9, act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. [1] An officer of the Pay or Medical Department can not exercise command, except in his own department; but by virtue of his commission he may command all enlisted men like other commissioned officers. (Par. 18, A. R., 1901.)

[2] Paragraph 189 of the Army Regulations of 1895 contains the provision that, in time of peace, army corps, divisions, and brigades will not be formed except for purposes of instruction. Section 9 of the act of July 17, 1862 (12 Stat. L., 594), authorized the President to establish and organize army corps according to his discretion. Section 10 of the same act provided for the staff of an army corps. Such legislation was not necessary, however, the organization of separate armies, army corps, grand divisions, wings, reserves, and the like, in time of war, being a matter within the discretion of the President as the Commander in Chief. For regulations respecting the organization of armies in the field in time of war, see the volume entitled TROOPS IN CAMPAIGN; see, also, Scott's Dig., pp. 244, 245. For the war organization of the military forces of the United States, see next paragraph.

dred dollars each per annum. * * * Twenty-five clerks at one thousand four hundred dollars each per annum. * * * Sixty-five clerks at one thousand two hundred dollars each per annum. * * * Eighty-six clerks at one thousand dollars each per annum. Sixty-eight messengers at seven hundred and twenty dollars each per annum. Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 899).

573. And said clerks and messengers shall be employed and assigned by the Secretary of War to the offices and positions in which they are to serve. Ibid.

MILITARY HEADQUARTERS.

Military headquarters. June 23, 1879, v. 21, p. 35.

574. When the economy of the service requires, the Secretary of War shall direct the establishment of military headquarters at points where suitable buildings are owned by the Government.[1] Act of June 23, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 35).

[1] TERRITORIAL COMMANDS.

In time of peace our army has been habitually distributed into geographical commands, styled, respectively, military divisions, departments, and districts—the districts, as organized prior to 1815, corresponding to the commands now designated as departments. These divisions and departments can be established only by the President; but, within their respective departments, commanding generals have from time to time grouped adjacent posts into temporary commands, which are now known as districts.

Military divisions, each embracing two or more departments, have obtained from May 17, 1815, to June 1, 1821; from May 19, 1837, to July 12, 1842; from April 20, 1844, to October 31, 1853; from July 25 to August 17, 1861; and from October 13, 1863, to July 2, 1891.

Department organizations have been continuous since 1815. (a) Scott's Dig., p. 244.

THE COMMANDING GENERAL OF THE ARMY.

The command exercised by the commanding general of the Army, not having been made the subject of statutory regulation, is determined by the order of assignment. It has been habitually composed of the aggregate of the several territorial commands that have been or may be created by the President.

The military establishment is under the orders of the commanding general of the Army in that which pertains to its discipline and military control. The fiscal affairs of the Army are conducted by the Secretary of War, through the several staff departments. Par. 205, A. R., 1901.

All orders and instructions from the President or Secretary of War relating to military operations or affecting the military control and discipline of the Army will be promulgated through the commanding general. Par. 206, A. R., 1901. See, also, paragraph 11, ante.

TERRITORIAL DEPARTMENTS.

Territorial departments are established and their commanders assigned by direction of the President. In time of peace, army corps, divisions, or brigades will not be formed except for purposes of instruction. Par. 189, A. R., 1895.

The commander of a department commands all the military forces of the Government within its limits, whether of the line or staff, which are not specially excepted from his control by the War Department. The infantry and cavalry school at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and the cavalry and light artillery school at Fort Riley, Kans., in matters pertaining to the courses of instruction; the Military Academy; the artillery school; the engineer establishment at Willets Point; the arsenals; the general depots of supply; the general-service recruiting stations; such permanent fortifications as may be in process of construction or repair, and officers employed on special duty under the Secretary of War, are exempted from the supervision of department commanders. But when an emergency demands it, all military men and material within the limits of their jurisdiction come under their control. Par. 208, A. R., 1901.

Purchasing commissaries, officers on duty at general depots of supply, and others indicated in the preceding paragraph, whether reporting by letter to department commanders or not, are subject to their orders for court-martial or other duty in an emergency only; and officers on duty with the commands at Fort Leavenworth, Fort Monroe, and Fort Riley will not be detached without the orders of the Secretary of War or the commanding general of the Army. Par. 209, A. R., 1901.

A department commander is charged with the administration of all the military affairs of his department, and the execution of all orders from higher authority. He will report to the commanding general of the Army all matters relating to the general welfare of his command, including such change of station of troops as he may deem desirable, but will obtain the approval of the commanding general of the Army before ordering the movement. If it be necessary to move troops to meet emergencies, such movements and all the circumstances will be reported at the earliest possible moment. Par. 210, A. R., 1901.

Each department commander will inspect the troops under his command at least once each year, and for this purpose he may be accompanied by one officer of his personal or the department staff. He will assure himself by personal examination and observation that all officers and men under his control are efficient in the performance of duty, that the troops are thoroughly drilled and instructed in their field duties and tactical exercises, that supplies are properly distributed, that proper care is exercised in the purchase and preservation of public property, and that strict economy is exercised in all public expenditures. In his annual report the results of these inspections will be summarized. From time to time he will report, for the information of the commanding general of the Army and the Secretary of War, the names of any and all officers belonging to his command who are believed to be incompetent or permanently unable, from any cause, to perform all the duties of their several grades, both in garrison and in active service; he will also report any errors, irregularities, or abuses requiring the action of higher authority. Par. 211, A. R., 1901.

Department commanders are expected to determine controversies arising within the limits of their jurisdiction and decide questions referred to them on appeal. Par. 212, A. R., 1901.

Although a department commander may continue to discharge the more important functions of his command while beyond its territorial limits, his absence therefrom requires the sanction of the Secretary of War, and if intending to leave his headquarters for an absence within his department, he will report to the Adjutant-General of the Army his intention, the duration of, and his address during, his proposed absence. Par. 195, A. R., 1895.

STAFF OF DEPARTMENT COMMANDERS.

The personal staff of a department commander will consist of the authorized aids. The department staff will be limited to the officers detailed by the Secretary of War from appropriate staff departments or corps, or of officers of the line detailed by the same authority to act in their stead, and their official designations will be as follows: Adjutant-general, chief quartermaster, chief commissary, chief surgeon, chief paymaster, judge-advocate, and artillery inspector, the last appointed as prescribed in paragraph 350; also, when necessary, an engineer officer, an ordnance officer, and a signal officer, each detailed from his corps; but when any of these officers are not assigned, or when any department staff officer is temporarily absent or disabled, the duties of his position will be performed by other members of the department or personal staff. The chief quartermaster and chief commissary will each have charge of the depot of his department, at the place where headquarters are located, and will, when practicable, make purchases. The chief surgeon will, when practicable, perform the duty of attending surgeon. The chief paymaster will make a proportion of the payments in the command. The duties prescribed in Small-Arms Firing Regulations for the inspector of small-arms practice will be performed by an aid or by the adjutant-general. Par. 214, A. R., 1901.

HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS;[1] APPOINTMENTS AND DETAILS.

Feb. 2, 1901, s. 26, v. 31, p. 755.

575. When vacancies shall occur in the position of chief of any staff corps or department the President may appoint to such vacancies, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, officers of the Army at large not below the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and who shall hold office for terms of four years. When a vacancy in the position of chief of any staff corps or department is filled by the appointment of any officer below the rank now provided by law for said office, said chief shall, while so serving, have the same rank, pay, and allowances now provided for the chief of such corps or department. Sec. 26, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 755).

The same, restriction.
Ibid.

576. So long as there remain in service officers of any staff corps or department holding permanent appointments, the chief of such staff corps or department shall be selected from the officers so remaining therein. Ibid.

The same, retirement.
Ibid.

577. Any officer now holding office in any corps or department who shall hereafter serve as chief of a staff corps or department and shall subsequently be retired, shall be retired with the rank, pay, and allowances authorized by law for the retirement of such corps or department chief. Ibid.

---

[1] For the requirement of section 1132 of the Revised Statutes, authorizing the President to designate officers of the several staff departments to perform the duties of chiefs of department during the absence of the heads thereof, see paragraph 121, ante.

APPOINTMENTS.

Appointments. March 2, 1901, v. 31, p, 900.

578. Appointments to fill original vacancies in the lowest grade in the Adjutant-General's Department, the Inspector-General's Department, and Judge Advocate-General's Department, and in the grade of captain in the Quartermaster's Department, Subsistence Department, and Pay Department may be made from officers of volunteers commissioned since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and the age limit prescribed as to chaplains shall not apply to persons who served as chaplains of volunteers after said date who were under forty-two years of age when originally appointed. Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 900).

DETAILS TO THE STAFF; PROMOTIONS.

Promotions. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 26, v. 31, p. 755.

579. That so long as there remain any officers holding permanent appointments in the Adjutant-General's Department, the Inspector-General's Department, the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, the Pay Department, the Ordnance Department, and the Signal Corps, including those appointed to original vacancies in the grades of captain and first lieutenant under the provisions of sections sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, and twenty-four of this act, they shall be promoted according to seniority in the several grades, as now provided by law, and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to apply to vacancies which can be filled by such promotions or to the periods for which the officers so promoted shall hold their appointments. Sec. 26, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 755).

Details. Ibid.

580. When any vacancy, except that of the chief of the department or corps, shall occur which can not be filled by promotion as provided in this section, it shall be filled by detail from the line of the Army, and no more permanent appointments shall be made in those departments or corps after the original vacancies created by this act shall have been filled. Such details shall be made from the grade in which the vacancies exist, under such system of examination as the President may from time to time prescribe. Ibid.

Term. Ibid.

581. All officers so detailed shall serve for a period of four years, at the expiration of which time they shall return to duty with the line, and officers below the rank of lieutenant-colonel shall not again be eligible for selection in any staff department until they shall have served two years with the line. Ibid.

Vacancies in line. Sec. 27, ibid.

582. Each position vacated by officers of the line transferred to any department of the staff for tours of service under this act shall be filled by promotion in the line until the total number detailed equals the number authorized for duty in such department. Thereafter vacancies caused by details from the line to the staff shall be filled by officers returning from tours of staff duty. If under the operation of this act the number of officers returned to any particular arm of the service at any time exceeds the number authorized by law in any grade, promotions to that grade shall cease until the number has been reduced to that authorized. Sec. 27, ibid.

EXAMINATIONS FOR PROMOTION.[1]

Par.
583. Examinations.
584. Failure to pass.
585. Examination of appointees from civil life.

Par.
586. The same, waiver of privilege.
587. Examination of engineer and ordnance officers.
588. Promotion of absent officer.

Examinations for promotion. Oct. 1, 1890, s. 3, v. 26, p. 562.

583. That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to prescribe a system of examination of all officers of the Army below the rank of major to determine their fitness for promotion, such an examination to be conducted at such times anterior to the accruing of the right to promotion as may be best for the interests of the service: Provided, That the President may waive the examination for promotion to any grade in the case of any officer who in pursuance of existing law has passed a satisfactory examination for such grade prior to the passage of this act. Sec. 3, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 562).

[1] See, also, section 1 of the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 252). So much of section 1194, Revised Statutes, as prohibited appointments and promotions in the Adjutant-General's, Inspector-General's, Pay, Quartermaster's, Subsistence, Ordnance, and Medical Departments was repealed; as to the Adjutant-General's Department, by the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 478); as to the Inspector-General's Department, by the act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 244); as to the grade of major in the Pay Department, by the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 524), and the act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 270); as to the Quartermaster's Department, by the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 338); as to the Ordnance, Subsistence, and Medical Departments, by section 8 of the act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 245). The act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 270), declared that this section "now applying only to the grades in the Pay Department of the Army above the rank of major is hereby repealed" (19 Stat. L., 270).

The act of June 23, 1874, contained the provision that as vacancies shall occur in any of the grades of the Ordnance and Medical Departments, no appointments shall be made to fill the same until the numbers in such grade shall be reduced to the numbers which are fixed for permanent appointments by the provisions of this act; and thereafter the number of permanent officers in said grades shall continue to conform to said reduced numbers, and all other grades in said Ordnance and Medical Departments than those authorized by the provisions of this act shall cease to exist as soon as the same shall become vacant by death, resignation, or otherwise; and no appointment or promotion shall hereafter be made to fill any vacancy which may occur therein.

The same statute also provided that no officer now in the service shall be reduced in rank or mustered out by reason of any provision of law herein made reducing the number of officers in any department or corps of the staff.

Retirement on failure to pass due to physical disability contracted in line of duty. Oct. 1, 1890, s. 3, v. 26, p. 562.

584. If any officer fails to pass a satisfactory examination and is reported unfit for promotion, the officer next below him in rank, having passed said examination, shall receive the promotion: And provided, That should the officer fail in his physical examination and be found incapacitated for service by reason of physical disability contracted in line of duty he shall be retired with the rank to which his seniority entitled him to be promoted; but if he should fail for any other reason he shall be suspended from promotion for one year, when he shall be reexamined, and in case of failure on such reexamination he shall be honorably discharged with one year's pay from the Army.

Failure for other reasons.

Failure on reexamination.

Examination of officers appointed from civil life, etc. Sec. 3, ibid.

585. The examination of officers appointed in the Army from civil life, or of officers who were officers of volunteers only, or where officers of the militia of the several States called into the service of the United States, or were enlisted men in the regular or volunteer service, either in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, during the war of the rebellion, shall be conducted by boards composed entirely of officers who were appointed from civil life or of officers who were officers of volunteers only during said war, and such examination shall relate to fitness for practical service and not to technical and scientific knowledge: and in case of failure of any such officer in the reexamination hereinbefore provided for, he shall be placed upon the retired list of the Army; and no act now in force shall be so construed as to limit or restrict the retirement of officers as herein provided for. Sec. 3, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 562).

Composition of boards.

Failure.

Officers appointed from civil life may waive board of similar character. July 27, 1892, v. 27, p. 276.

586. Officers entitled by this section to examination by a board composed entirely of officers who were appointed from civil life, or who were officers of volunteers only during the war, may, by written waiver filed with the War Department, relinquish such right, in which case the examination of such officers shall be conducted by boards composed as shall be directed by the Secretary of War. Act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 276).

Examination of certain officers of Engineers and Ordnance.
Sec. 2, July 27, 1892, v. 27, p. 276.

587. The examination of officers of the Corps of Engineers and Ordnance Department, who were officers or enlisted men in the regular or volunteer service, either in the Army, Navy, or the Marine Corps, during the war of the rebellion, shall be conducted by boards composed in the same manner as for the examination of other officers of their respective corps or department; and the examinations shall embrace the same subjects prescribed for all other officers of similar grades in the Corps of Engineers and Ordnance Department, respectively. Sec. 2, act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 276).

Promotion of absent officer.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 32, v. 31, p. 756.

588. When the exigencies of the service of any officer who would be entitled to promotion upon examination require him to remain absent from any place where an examining board could be convened, the President is hereby authorized to promote such officer, subject to examination, and the examination shall take place as soon thereafter as practicable. If upon examination the officer be found disqualified for promotion, he shall, upon the approval of the proceedings by the Secretary of War, be treated in the same manner as if he had been examined prior to promotion. Sec. 32, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 756).

TRANSFERS TO THE STAFF.

Transfers between line and staff.
March 3, 1812, s. 4, v. 2, p. 819.
Apr. 24, 1816, s. 9, v. 3, p. 298.
June 18, 1846, s. 7, v. 9, p. 18.
Sec. 1205, R. S.

589. Officers may be transferred from the line to the staff of the Army without prejudice to their rank or promotion in the line; but no officer shall hold, at the same time, an appointment in the line and an appointment in the staff which confer equal rank in the Army. When any officer so transferred has, in virtue of seniority, obtained, or become entitled to, a grade in his regiment equal to the grade of his commission in the staff, he shall vacate either his commission in the line or his commission in the staff.[1]

Transfers of engineer officers.
Apr. 10, 1806, art. 16, v. 2, p. 367.
Sec. 1158, R. S.

590. Engineers shall not assume nor be ordered on any duty beyond the line of their immediate profession, except by the special order of the President. They may, at the discretion of the President, be transferred from one corps to another, regard being paid to rank.

---

[1] The requirements of this section, since the approval of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 748), apply only to transfers between officers of the line and officers holding permanent appointments in the several departments or branches of the staff.

PROMOTIONS AFTER FOURTEEN YEARS' SERVICE.

591. When any lieutenant of the Corps of Engineers or Ordnance Corps or Signal Corps has served fourteen years' continuous service as lieutenant, he shall be promoted to the rank of captain, on passing the examination provided by the preceding section, but such promotion shall not authorize an appointment to fill any vacancy, when such appointment would increase the whole number of officers in the corps beyond the number fixed by law; nor shall any officer be promoted before officers of the same grade who rank him in his corps. Sec. 7, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653).

DISBURSING OFFICERS.

BONDS.

Par.
592. Bonds, by whom given.
593. Increase of bonds.
594–601. Security companies as sureties.
602, 603. Examination and renewal of bonds.

Par.
604. Liability of sureties.
605. Release of sureties.

592. All officers of the Quartermaster's, Subsistence, and Pay Departments, the chief medical purveyor and assistant medical purveyors, and all store-keepers shall, before entering upon the duties of their respective offices, give good and sufficient bonds to the United States, in such sums as the Secretary of War may direct, faithfully to account for all public moneys and property which they may receive. The President may, at any time, increase the sums so prescribed.[1] But the Quartermaster-General shall not be liable for any money or property that may come into the hands of the subordinate officers of his department.[2]

[1] For statutory requirements respecting bonds and sureties, in addition to those cited in this chapter, see the chapters entitled THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT, THE COURT OF CLAIMS, THE QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT, THE SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT, THE PAY DEPARTMENT, THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT, and CONTRACTS AND PURCHASES. Officers of the Army and Navy are excepted from the provisions of section 3614, Revised Statutes, which require all special agents employed by the heads of the several Executive Departments in the disbursement of the public moneys to give bonds in such form and with such security as such heads of Departments may approve. This section does not apply to all commissioned officers of the Army who may be required to act as disbursing officers, but to such only as are regularly appointed disbursing officers and who are required, as such, to give bonds. when it is accepted by the Government, and is to be regarded as of that date. Moses v. U. S., 166 U. S., 571. A surety on the bond of one in official relation with the Government is himself in contract relation with it, and, as he is liable to be sued by it, he has the right to sue it whenever a balance is due from it to which, on the principle of subrogation, he will ultimately be entitled. Shwarz v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cls., 303; Behan v. U. S., 18 ibid., 687, 110 U. S., 338; Hitchcock v. U. S., 27 Ct. Cls., 185, 164 U. S., 227; Pope v. U. S., 14 ibid., 446. No jurisdiction is conferred upon the Comptroller of the Treasury to render a decision, at the request of the head of a Department, upon the question whether the filing of a new bond relieves the sureties on a prior bond of the same official from liability after the date of the new bond, such a question not involving a payment to be made under the head of the Department. Section 8, act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 20).

The giving of bond is not necessary to entitle persons appointed to office in the Army requiring the disbursement of money, to begin to receive pay; they are entitled, like other officers, to be paid upon the acceptance of their appointments, according to par. 1448, Army Regulations, whether they have at that time furnished their bonds or not. XVI Op. Att. Gen., 38. The expense incurred by an officer in furnishing the bond required by law of all disbursing officers of the Government, is not a proper charge against the Government, even though the officer serves without compensation. II Compt. Dec., 262; U. S. v. Van Duzee 140 U. S., 171.

Section 1191, Revised Statutes, requires bonds only of certain disbursing officers specifically named. In the absence of any express provision of law, prescribing that bonds shall be furnished by other disbursing officers, the President, in his discretion, and for the better security of the public funds, may, through the head of the proper department, require such bonds to be furnished. (a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 544.

A bond can not be extended beyond the period of the original obligation so as to continue to bind the sureties, without their consent. Nor can an expired bond be revived so as to bind the sureties without their consent. The Secretary of War (or President) has no power to release the sureties in an official bond from their liability to the United States. (b) A neglect by the Government to institute suit on a bond does not discharge the sureties; laches not being in such cases imputable to the United States. (c) Ibid., par. 549.

One of two (or several) sureties can not withdraw independently from his obligation; and if allowed to do so by the obligee, the other surety (or sureties) will be released as to him. But the Secretary of War is not empowered to release the sureties on a disbursing officer's bond. Ibid., par. 554.

The law of the place at which a contract is made governs as to its interpretation, except where the contract is to be performed elsewhere, in which case the law that governs in this respect is the law of the place of performance. An official bond, made to the United States, wherever actually signed, is—as has been held by the Supreme Court (a)—a contract made and to be performed at Washington; and by the laws of the District of Columbia the contract of a married woman as surety is not binding. Moreover, it is not the practice of the War Department to accept a feme covert as a surety, and before a female surety will be accepted she is required to make oath that she is single in addition to justifying as required of other sureties. Ibid., par. 550.

If after the execution of a bond a material change be made in the name or description of the principal, by erasure, interlineation, or otherwise, without the assent of the sureties or a surety, even though such change be made to correct a mistake, the surety or sureties not consenting will be released. In a case of such an alteration, recommended that a new bond be required. Ibid., par. 555. See, also, ibid., paragraphs 554–560.

While departmental regulations duly promulgated have the force of law, in a limited sense, they can not enlarge or restrict the liability of an officer on his bond. Meads v. U. S., 81 Fed. Rep., 684.

[a] Bonds may be required by the Government from officers appointed to places of trust, though there is no statutory authority to take such bonds, and they will be valid as common-law obligations. In a bond with sureties, given by an officer of the Government, it is sufficient to make the bond valid as a common-law obligation that it is voluntarily given and that the office and the duties assigned to the officer and covered by the bond are duly authorized by law. SECURITY COMPANIES AS SURETIES.

Security companies as sureties.
Aug. 13, 1894, v. 28, p. 279.

594. Whenever any recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking conditioned for the faithful performance of any duty, or for doing or refraining from doing anything in such recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking specified, is by the laws of the United States required or permitted to be given with one surety or with two or more sureties, the execution of the same or the guaranteeing of the performance of the condition thereof shall be sufficient when executed or guaranteed solely by a corporation incorporated under the laws of the United States or of any State having power to guarantee the fidelity of persons holding positions of public or private trust, and to execute and guarantee bonds and undertakings in judicial proceedings: Provided, That such recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking be approved by the head of department, court, judge, officer, board, or body executive, legislative, or judicial required to approve or accept the same. But no officer or person having the approval of any bond shall exact that it shall be furnished by a guarantee company or by any particular guarantee company.[2] Act of August 13, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 279).

[1] The Government has the power, through the head of a department, to take a bond from a disbursing officer, though there is no law or general regulation requiring it; and a bond is none the less a voluntary bond because demanded by the superior officer, if not illegally extorted. Moses v. U. S., 166 U. S., 571.

[2] Execution, sealing, etc.—The bond should of course be executed by all the parties—obligor and sureties. It has been held by the U. S. Supreme Court that an official bond, though without seals, may be good as a contract at common law. To avoid, however, any questions that might arise from the absence of a seal, advised (February, 1868) that formal seals "of wax or other adhesive substance," be in all cases required to be affixed by the subscribing parties. Dig. Opin., J. A. G., par. 534.

A bond given by a disbursing officer of the Army (or any bond required by the War Department) wherein the Secretary of War is made the obligee, is in incorrect form. The obligee should be—The United States of America. Ibid., par. 542.

A bond should of course be dated, but the omission of the date will not affect the validity of the instrument, as the true date of execution can be proved aliunde, in the event of a suit on the bond. Ibid., par. 543.

The seal of both obligor and sureties must be a formal one, of wafer, wax, or other adhesive substance. A mere scroll made with the pen is not accepted as a substitute for a seal in the War Department. A corporation obligor should affix its corporate seal if it has one. But the fact that a corporation has not adopted a corporate seal will not affect the validity of its execution of a bond in which it is principal or surety, provided some form of seal be added to its signature. 595. No such company shall do business under the provisions of this act beyond the limits of the State or Territory under whose laws it was incorporated and in which its principal office is located nor beyond the limits of the District of Columbia, when such company was incorporated under its laws or the laws of the United States and its principal office is located in said District, until it shall, by poration may make and use any seal, in its discretion, in the same manner as a private individual. Ibid., par. 544.

Justification of sureties.—Of two or more sureties to an official bond, each, according to the regulation, should justify separately; a justification in joint form is irregular and improper. An affidavit of justification should properly be expressed in the first person; not in the third. Ibid., par. 540.

The affidavit of justification of a surety should be dated, so that it may appear when he was worth the amount specified. The names of the sureties in the justifications should be identical with those inserted in the body of the bond. Their names should not be omitted to be recited in the bond with the name of the principal. Ibid., par. 551.

The affidavit of justification should be taken before some officer, like a notary public, having authority to administer oaths for general purposes and whose official character is authenticated by his seal. (a) But as the justification is no part of the bond, and the administration of the oath by an official not competent to administer it does not affect the validity of the bond, the irregularity of the justification, where there is nothing to show that the oath was not taken in good faith by the surety, may be waived by the Secretary of War, and in practice it is now (May, 1893) waived, and the bond accepted if otherwise valid. And in case where the seal of the notary was omitted, recommended that the instrument be returned to have the seal impressed upon the certificate, for the purpose of such authentication, which would be wanting without it. Ibid., par. 553.

Sureties.—The obligation of each surety must be for the whole amount of the penalty; the regulation requiring that the sureties "shall be jointly and severally bound for the whole amount of the bond." So, where the penalty in a quartermaster's joint and several official bond was $10,000, and the sureties, in executing the same, assumed to be bound only in the sum of $5,000 each, the words "for five thousand dollars" being written under each signature—held that the instrument was con tradictory, did not conform to the regulations, and should not be accepted. And similarly held in a case of a bond with a penalty of $40,000, where the sureties wrote opposite their signatures, respectively, "for $35,000," "for $5,000." Sureties can not qualify their obligation by thus limiting their personal liabilities. Ibid., par. 535.

There is no statute or regulation prohibiting an officer of the Army from acting as a surety on the official bond of another officer. Such a relation, however, is not one to be favored. Ibid., par. 536.

Par. 572 of the Regulations contemplates plural sureties with bonds of disbursing officers. A justification of a surety, however, is no part of the bond, and as the object of the justification is to satisfy the Secretary of War that the surety is good for double the penalty, the Secretary, where amply satisfied that one certain person offered or executing as surety is pecuniarily sufficient for such amount, would be authorized to accept him (on his properly justifying) as sole surety, and to waive any further surety or sureties with the instrument. A subordinate of course can have no such authority. In view, however, of the terms of the regulation and of the practice under it, this authority would of course most rarely be exercised in cases of disbursing officers' bonds. Ibid., par. 537.

A captain of the commissary department having given bond in a penalty of $12,000, one of his sureties deceased. Par. 563, Army Regulations, 1895, prescribes that "the sureties to bonds given by disbursing officers shall be bound jointly and severally." The officer offered a new bond with one surety in a penalty of $6,000. Held that such security would not be legally sufficient, but that a new joint and several bond in the penalty of $12,000 would be required. Ibid., par. 552.

For opinions respecting security companies as sureties see Dig. Opin., J. A. G., pars. 596–602.

a written power of attorney, appoint some person residing within the jurisdiction of the court for the judicial district wherein such suretyship is to be undertaken, who shall be a citizen of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia, wherein such court is held, as its agent, upon whom may be served all lawful process against such company, and who shall be authorized to enter an appearance in its behalf. A copy of such power of attorney, duly certified and authenticated, shall be filed with the clerk of the district court of the United States for such district at each place where a term of such court is or may be held, which copy, or a certified copy thereof, shall be legal evidence in all controversies arising under this act. If any such agent shall be removed, resign, or die, become insane, or otherwise incapable of acting, it shall be the duty of such company to appoint another agent in his place, as hereinbefore prescribed, and until such appointment shall have been made, or during the absence of any agent of such company from such district, service of process may be upon the clerk of the court wherein such suit is brought, with like effect as upon an agent appointed by the company. The officer executing such process upon such clerk shall immediately transmit a copy thereof by mail to the company, and state such fact in his return. A judgment, decree, or order of a court entered or made after service of process as aforesaid shall be as valid and binding on such company as if served with process in said district. Sec. 2, ibid.

596. Every company before transacting any business under this act shall deposit with the Attorney-General of the United States a copy of its charter or articles of incorporation, and a statement signed and sworn to by its president and secretary showing its assets and liabilities. If the said Attorney-General shall be satisfied that such company has authority under its charter to do the business provided for in this act, and that it has a paid-up capital of not less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, in cash or its equivalent, and is able to keep and perform its contracts, he shall grant authority in writing to such company to do business under this act. Sec. 3, ibid.

597. Every such company shall, in the months of January, April, July, and October of each year, file with the said Attorney-General a statement, signed and sworn to by its president and secretary, showing its assets and liabilities, as is required by section three of this act. And the said Attorney-General shall have the power, and it shall be his duty, to revoke the authority of any such company to transact any new business under this act whenever in his judgment such company is not solvent or is conducting its business in violation of this act. He may institute inquiry at any time into the solvency of said company and may require that additional security be given at any time by any principal when he deems such company no longer sufficient security. Sec. 4, ibid.

Jurisdiction of United States courts.

598. Any surety company doing business under the provisions of this act may be sued in respect thereof in any court of the United States which has now or hereafter may have jurisdiction of actions or suits upon such recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking in the district in which such recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking was made or guaranteed, or in the district in which the principal office of such company is located. And for the purposes of this act such recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking shall be treated as made or guaranteed in the district in which the office is located, to which it is returnable, or in which it is filed, or in the district in which the principal in such recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking resided when it was made or guaranteed. Sec. 5, ibid.

Forfeiture of rights on failure to pay judgment.
Sec. 6, ibid.

599. If any such company shall neglect or refuse to pay any final judgment or decree rendered against it upon any such recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking made or guaranteed by it under the provisions of this act, from which no appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas has been taken for thirty days after the rendition of such judgment or decree, it shall forfeit all right to do business under this act. Sec. 6, ibid.

Companies estopped from denying power.

600. Any company which shall execute or guarantee any recognizance, stipulation, bond, or undertaking under the provisions of this act shall be estopped, in any proceeding to enforce the liability which it shall have assumed to incur, to deny its corporate power to execute or guarantee such instrument or assume such liability. Sec. 7, ibid.

Penalty for failure to comply with provisions.

601. Any company doing business under the provisions of this act which shall fail to comply with any of its provisions shall forfeit to the United States for every such failure not less than five hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, to be recovered by suit in the name of the United States in the same courts in which suit may be brought against such company under the provisions of this act, and such failure shall not affect the validity of any contract entered into by such company. Sec. 8, ibid.

EXAMINATION AND RENEWAL OF BONDS.

602. Hereafter every officer required by law to take and approve official bonds shall cause the same to be examined at least once every two years for the purpose of ascertaining the sufficiency of the sureties thereon; and every officer having power to fix the amount of an official bond shall examine it to ascertain the sufficiency of the amount thereof and approve or fix said amount at least once in two years and as much oftener as he may deem it necessary.[1] Sec. 5, act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 807).

Examination and renewal of bonds. Sec. 5, Mar. 2, 1895, v. 28, p. 807.

Hereafter every officer whose duty it is to take and approve official bonds shall cause all such bonds to be renewed every four years after their dates, but he may require such bonds to be renewed or strengthened oftener if he deem such action necessary. In the discretion of such officer the requirement of a new bond may be waived for the period of service of a bonded officer after the expiration of a four-year term of service pending the appointment and qualification of his successor.[2] Ibid.

Renewals. Ibid.

603. The nonperformance of any requirement of this section on the part of any official of the Government shall not be held to affect in any respect the liability of principal or sureties on any bond made or to be made to the United States: Provided further, That the liability of the principal and sureties on all official bonds shall continue and cover the period of service ensuing until the appointment and qualification of the successor of the principal: And provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed to repeal or modify section thirty-eight hundred and thirty-six of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Ibid.

Liability of sureties. Ibid.

LIABILITY OF SURETIES; RELEASE.

604. Said notification shall be deemed sufficient if mailed at the post-office in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, addressed to said sureties respectively, and directed to the respective post-offices where said obligors may reside, if known; but a failure to give or mail such notice shall not discharge the surety or sureties upon such bond.[1] *Act of August 8, 1888 (25 Stat. Sec. 3620, R. S.

606. It shall be the duty of every disbursing officer having any public money intrusted to him for disbursement to deposit the same with the Treasurer or some one of the assistant treasurers of the United States, and to draw for the same only as it may be required for payments to be made by him in pursuance of law [and draw for the same only in favor of the persons to whom payment is made]; and all transfers from the Treasurer of the United States to a disbursing officer shall be by draft or warrant on the Treasury or an assistant treasurer of the United States. In places, however, where there is no treasurer or assistant treasurer, the Secretary of the Treasury may, when he deems it essential to the public interest, specially authorize in writing the deposit of such public money in any other public depository, or, in writing, authorize the same to be kept in any other manner, and under such rules and regulations as he may deem most safe and effectual to facilitate the payments to public creditors.[1] (*See sec. 5488, R. The regulations of the Treasury Department are imperative, and expressly prohibit the transfer of funds of any character for which an officer is accountable from one bond to another, and when this regulation is violated it becomes necessary for the officer to deposit the sum transferred as a credit to his first bond, or else procure the admission of the sureties on the second bond that the officer actually had the sum in hand when it was executed, and that they are liable on said bond for the same. 3 Dig. And the Treasurer, the assistant treasurer, or the public depositary shall issue duplicate receipts for the moneys so paid, transmitting forthwith the original to the Secretary of the Treasury, and delivering the duplicate to the depositor: Provided, That postal revenue and debts due to the Post-Office Department shall be paid into the Treasury in the manner now required by law.[2]

[2] In accordance with the provisions of the above sections any public money advanced to disbursing officers of the United States must be deposited immediately to their respective credits, with either the United States Treasurer, some assistant treasurer, or by special direction of the Secretary of the Treasury with a national bank depositary nearest or most convenient, except—

(1) Any disbursing officer of the War Department specially authorized by the Secretary of War, when stationed on the extreme frontier or at places far remote from such depositaries, may keep, at his own risk, such moneys as may be intrusted to him for disbursement.

(2) Any officer receiving money remitted to him upon specific estimates may disburse it accordingly, without waiting to place it in a depositary, provided the payments are due and he prefers this method to that of drawing checks. Treas. Circ. of 1898. G. O. 59, A. G. O., 1897.

Every disbursing officer, when opening his first account, before issuing any checks, will furnish the depositary on whom checks are drawn with his official signature duly verified by some officer whose signature is known to the depositary. Ibid.

Any check drawn by a disbursing officer upon moneys thus deposited must be in favor of the party, by name, to whom the payment is to be made, and payable to "order," or "bearer," with these exceptions:

(1) To make payments of individual pensions, checks for which must be made payable to "order," (2) to make payments of amounts not exceeding twenty dollars, (3) to make payments at a distance from a depositary, and (4) to make payments of fixed salaries due at a certain period; in either of which cases except the first, any disbursing officer may draw his check in favor of himself, or "order," or "bearer," for such amount as may be necessary for such payment, but in the last-named case the check must be drawn not more than two days before the salaries become due.

Any disbursing officer or agent drawing checks on moneys deposited to his official credit, must state on the face or back of each check the object or purpose to which the avails are to be applied, except upon checks issued in payment of individual pensions, the special form of such checks indicating sufficiently the character of disbursement. 608. The Treasurer of the United States, all assistant treasurers, and those performing the duties of assistant treasurer, all collectors of the customs, all surveyors of the customs, acting also as collectors, all receivers of public moneys at the several land-offices, all postmasters, and all public officers of whatsoever character, are required to keep safely, without loaning, using, depositing in banks, or exchanging for other funds than as specially allowed by law, all the public money collected by them, or otherwise at any time placed in their possession and custody, till the same is ordered, by the proper Department or officer of drawn is not stated thereon, as required, or if any reason exists for suspecting fraud, the office or bank on which such check is drawn will refuse its payment.

Such statement may be made in brief form, but must clearly indicate the object of the expenditure, as, for instance, "pay," "pay roll," or "payment of troops," adding the fort or station; "purchase of subsistence" or other supplies; "on account of construction," mentioning the fortification or other public work for which the payment is made; "payments under $20," etc.

Checks will not be returned to the drawer after their payment, but the depositary with whom the account is kept shall furnish the officer with a monthly statement of his deposit account. Ibid.

No allowance will be made to any disbursing officer for expenses charged for collecting money on checks.

Whenever any disbursing officer of the United States shall cease to act in that capacity he will at once inform the Secretary of the Treasury whether he has any public funds to his credit in any office or bank, and, if so, what checks, if any, he has drawn against the same, which are still outstanding and unpaid. Until satisfactory information of this character shall have been furnished, the whole amount of such moneys will be held to meet the payment of his checks properly payable therefrom.

In case of the death, resignation, or removal of any disbursing officer, checks previously drawn by him will be paid from the funds to his credit, unless such checks have been drawn more than four months before their presentation, or reasons exist for suspecting fraud. Any check previously drawn by him and not presented for payment within four months of its date will not be paid until its correctness shall have been attested by the Secretary or Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Ibid.

Deposits to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States on account of repayment of disbursing funds must be made with the office or bank in which such funds are to the credit of the disbursing officer. Ibid.

For every deposit made by a disbursing officer, to his official credit, a receipt in form as below shall be given, setting forth its serial number and the place and date of issue; the title of each officer shall be expressed, and the title of the disbursing account shall also show for what branch of the public service the account is kept, as it is essential for the proper transaction of departmental business that accounts of moneys advanced from different bureaus to a disbursing officer serving in two or more distinct capacities be kept separate and distinct from each other, and be so reported to the Department both by the officer and the depositary, the receipt to be retained by the officer in whose favor it is issued.

Sec. 3651, R. S.

609. No exchange of funds shall be made by any disbursing officer or agent of the Government, of any grade or denomination whatsoever, or connected with any branch of the public service, other than an exchange for gold, silver, United States notes, and national-bank notes; and every such disbursing officer, when the means for his disbursements are furnished to him in gold, silver, United States notes, or national-bank notes, shall make his payments in the money so furnished; or when they are furnished to him in drafts, shall cause those drafts to be presented at their place of payment, and properly paid according to law, and shall make his payments in the money so received for the drafts furnished, unless, in either case, he can exchange the means in his hands for gold and silver at par. And it shall be the duty of the head of the proper Department immediately to suspend from duty any disbursing officer or agent who violates the provisions of this section, and forthwith to report the name of the officer or agent to the President, with the fact of the violation, and all the circumstances accompanying the same, and within the knowledge of the Secretary, to the end that such officer or agent may be promptly removed from office or restored to his trust and the performance of his duties, as the President may deem just and proper.

Premium on sales of public moneys to be accounted for.

Aug. 6, 1846, c. 90, s. 21, v. 9, p. 65.

Sec. 3652, R. S.

610. No officer of the United States shall, either directly or indirectly, sell or dispose of to any person, for a premium, any Treasury note, draft, warrant, or other public security, not his private property, or sell or dispose of the avails or proceeds of such note, draft, warrant, or security, in his hands for disbursement, without making return of such premium, and accounting therefor by charging the same in his accounts to the credit of the United States; and any officer violating this section shall be forthwith dismissed from office.

PROCEEDS OF SALES.

611. The gross amount of all moneys received from whatever source for the use of the United States, except as otherwise provided in the next section, shall be paid by the officer or agent receiving the same into the Treasury, at as early a day as practicable, without any abatement or deduction on account of salary, fees, costs, charges, expenses, or claim of any description whatever.[1] But nothing herein shall affect any provision relating to the revenues of the Post-Office Department.

[1] Under section 3618 of the Revised Statutes, all proceeds of sales of old material, condemned stores, supplies, or other public property of any kind, with certain specified exceptions, are to be deposited and covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts on account of "proceeds of Government property," and are not to be withdrawn or applied, except in consequence of a subsequent appropriation made by law. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., 1249.

All proceeds of sales of public property covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts should be charged and credited on account of "proceeds of Government property," as contemplated by section 3618 of the Revised Statutes. Ibid., 1255.

The proceeds of sales of all public property, the disposition of which is not provided for by the preceding paragraph, after the expenses of sale have been deducted, will be deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States as "Miscella-

The transfer of public property from one bureau or Department of the Government to another is not a sale, and the money received therefor may be repaid to the appropriation from which it was originally expended. IV Compt. Dec., 688.

The transfer of public property from one bureau or Department to another is not regarded as a sale. If money is received therefor, it may be used to replace such stores and will be reported accordingly. Par. 698, A. R., 1901.

[1] Moneys received for stores, materials, or supplies (except subsistence stores) sold to officers, enlisted men, or exploring or surveying expeditions authorized by law will be deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, and respectively revert to the appropriation out of which originally expended. Proceeds of sales of useless ordnance material are expended under conditions prescribed by law. Proceeds of sales of subsistence supplies are immediately available for the purchase of fresh supplies. Par. 696, A. R., 1901. Under section 3692 of the Revised Statutes all moneys received from the sale of materials, stores, or supplies to officers and soldiers of the Army can be applied to the liquidation of liabilities against the appropriation out which they were originally expended, only during the fiscal year in which the sale was made. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Sec. 3648, R. S.

617. No advance of public money shall be made in any case whatever. And in all cases of contracts for the performance of any service, or the delivery of articles of any description, for the use of the United States, payment shall not exceed the value of the service rendered, or of the articles delivered previously to such payment.[1] It shall, however, be lawful, under the special direction of the President, to make such advances to the disbursing officers of the Government as may be necessary to the faithful and prompt discharge of their respective duties, and to the fulfillment of the public engagements. The President may also direct such advances as he may deem necessary and proper to persons in the military and naval service employed on distant stations, where the discharge of the pay and emoluments to which they are entitled can not be regularly effected.

[1] The act of June 8, 1896, authorizing the payment of expenses, "as approved by the accounting officers of the Treasury," incurred in the sale of old material, etc., from the gross proceeds thereof, and the payment into the Treasury of the net proceeds only, does not require that such expenses shall be so approved before payment, but simply that an itemized account thereof shall be rendered to the accounting officers for settlement as any other item of expenditure of Government funds. III Compt. Dec., 149. The course authorized by the act of June 8, 1896, in the payment of expenses of sales of old materials from the proceeds thereof, and the deposit in the Treasury of the net proceeds only, should be adopted in all cases, although there may be an appropriation available for the payment of expenses incurred in such sales. [1] In the case of disbursing officers the policy of the Government has been to acknowledge no payments as made on its behalf save those which are authorized by law. If an officer makes a mistake of law the payment is disallowed when his accounts come in for settlement and charged to him as if the money were still in his hands. McKim v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cls., 504, 532. Such officers are special agents with very limited authority. Their duties are ministerial; they are to pay the money according to the law and the facts in each case, and if they make mistakes in either they are personally liable themselves, and the Government may also, without doubt, maintain an action to recover back the money from the person wrongfully receiving it. No discretion or authority to decide controverted questions of law is intrusted to such officers. See dissenting opinion of Richardson, J., in McKee v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cls., 504, 551.

A disbursing officer is prohibited by section 3648, Revised Statutes, from paying more than a proper proportion of the entire contract price agreed upon for the transportation of public property when only a portion of the property has been delivered. III Compt. Dec., 221. See, also, ibid., 187.

An advance of public money made by a paymaster of the Army to an officer ordered to a distant station, when made by direction of the President as provided by section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, to provide for the pay of such officer for a future period, is not a payment for services for the correctness of which the paymaster is responsible, but an advance of public money to the officer in question for which he, and not the paymaster, is accountable to the United States. IV ibid., 250.

The payment of express charges in advance is prohibited by this section. Ibid, 544.

[2] When an appropriation found in an annual appropriation act is made for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of another law requiring immediate action, such appropriation is available prior to the beginning of the fiscal year for the service of which the other appropriations made in the act are intended. might be available can not be used. I Compt. Dec., 563. When one appropriation is available for a specific object a second appropriation can not be used for the same work, unless from the second appropriation it clearly appears that it was the intention of Congress that such second appropriation should be available in addition to the specific appropriation. Ibid., 417. When an appropriation to which an expense is properly chargeable is exhausted, another appropriation can not be used. (Ibid., 492.

PECUNIARY RESPONSIBILITY OF OFFICERS.

An officer will have credit for an expenditure of money made in obedience to the order of his commanding officer. Every order issued by any military authority which may cause an expenditure of money in a staff department will be given in writing. One copy thereof will be forwarded by the officer receiving it to the head of his Department, and the other will be filed by the disbursing officer with his voucher for the disbursement. If the expenditure be disallowed it will be charged to the officer who ordered it. Par. 735, A. R., 1901.

Where purchases of army supplies are made in pursuance of an order issued by competent military authority, said order, or a certified copy thereof, should be filed with the first voucher on which payment for supplies is made and reference be made thereto on all the others. 3 Compt. Dec., 1, 287.

Where there is a plain direction or prohibition spread upon the statute books, which is as well known to the inferior as to a superior officer, it is clearly binding upon both officers, and unless it can be affirmatively shown that the inferior called the attention of the superior to the infringement of law in the order, and that thereupon the superior renewed the order, the inferior officer must be held liable. III Dig. Dec. 2d Compt., 9, par. 3.

If a payment made on the certificate of an officer as to the facts is afterwards disallowed for error of fact in the certificate, it will pass to the credit of the disbursing officer and be charged to the officer who gave the certificate; but the disbursing officer can not protect himself in an erroneous payment made without due care by charging lack of care against the officer who gave the certificate. Par. 736, Army Regulations of 1901.

Paragraph 654 of the Army Regulations of 1895 provides that accounts paid on a certificate and afterwards disallowed for error of fact in the certificate shall pass to the credit of the disbursing officer and be charged to the officer who gave the certificate: Held, That it is the duty, however, of the disbursing officer to exercise the utmost care and vigilance in the disbursement of the public funds intrusted to him, and it is his imperative duty to see that the entire amount claimed is due and that payment thereof is fully warranted from the data given on the muster roll or final statement. If the information is not sufficient he must seek for more. He can not protect himself, in an erroneous payment made without due care, by charging a similar lack of care against the officer who gave the certificate. III Dig. 2d Compt. Dec., 10, par. 9.

RULES FOR THE PREPARATION OF VOUCHERS.

1. Vouchers must be stated in the name of the person, firm, company, or corporation rendering the service or furnishing the articles for which payment is made.

2. If the payee be a firm, the receipt to the voucher should be in the usual firm signature, signed by a member of the firm; if an incorporated or unincorporated company, the receipt should be in the company name, followed by the autograph signature of the officer (with his title) authorized to receive the money and receipt therefor.

3. Evidence of the authority of the officer receipting for an incorporated or unincorporated company must accompany the voucher, unless the payment is made by a check drawn on a United States depository to the order of the company, and that fact, with the date and number of the check and name of the depository, is stated in the voucher.

4. When a disbursing officer is satisfied that an attorney or agent is authorized to receipt for his principal, whether an individual, firm, company, or corporation, the receipt of the principal by the attorney or agent will be sufficient, without proof of authority accompanying the voucher, provided that payment is made by a check drawn on a United States depository and payable to the order of the principal, and the memorandum required in the preceding paragraph is made upon the voucher.

5. These regulations will not affect any additional regulations of the several Departments, but are intended as a statement of all that is required by the accounting officers as proof that payments are made to the proper persons. Regulations of the Comptroller of the Treasury of May 20, 1896; II Compt. Dec., 666; G. O. 37, A. G. O., 1896.

The word "voucher" can not be construed as synonymous with the word "receipt," it having a far broader signification in law. Any written evidence which establishes facts entitling a disbursing officer to credit is a voucher. "The word 'voucher' would seem to imply evidence, written or otherwise, of the truth of a fact." The People v. Green, 5 Daly, N. Y., 194; 3 Compt. Dec., 378.

MONEY VOUCHERS. (a)

The term "voucher," when used in connection with the disbursement of moneys, implies some written or printed instrument in the nature of a receipt, note, account, bill of particulars, or something of that character, which shows on what account or by what authority a particular payment has been made, and which may be kept or filed away, by the party receiving it, for his own convenience or protection, or that of the public. People v. Brinkerhoff 107, Ill., 495.

The presentation by a disbursing officer of a voucher properly receipted by the person entitled to payment is but prima facie evidence of actual payment by him, and will not entitle him to credit unless the amount has been actually paid to the proper person or his representative. I Compt. Dec., 228. The receipt of a witness to a pay roll is valid although written with a pencil, and not with ink, as required by the regulations and practice of the Department. Ibid., 419.

What shall be considered proper vouchers and the extent and character of the evidence necessary to support a claim must, of course, depend upon the circumstances of each case. I think, however, that the term "proper vouchers" must be construed to mean the vouchers ordinarily required in the transaction of business of this character. Presumptions should not be accepted in the place of proof where the latter can be procured. V Compt. Dec., 140. See, also, VI ibid., 14, 97.

Every voucher signed on behalf of any person, firm, or corporation by an agent or attorney should bear the name of the proper firm, person, or corporation, followed by the name of the agent or attorney. 3 Dig. 2d Compt. Dec., 379.

Under a resolution of the executive committee of the Western Union Telegraph Company passed November 24, 1886, any person in charge of any office of said company is authorized to receive and receipt for payments to said company, and receipts by such persons for such payments are to be held as binding upon said company. Ibid.

Section 3477 of the Revised Statutes does not prohibit a disbursing officer from accepting the receipt of an agent or attorney of an individual, firm, or corporation, and receiving credit for a voucher so receipted, provided it appears thereon that the check issued in payment was made payable to the order of the individual, firm, or corporation. 2 Compt. Dec., 295.

An order from the court appointing a receiver and showing his authority to act as such should be filed with or referred to in every voucher or claim presented by him for payment. 3 Dig. 2d Compt. Dec., 378.

Receipts for small amounts for occasional service paid to corporations, such as railroad, telegraph, turnpike, transfer, express, steamboat, hotel, newspaper, and ice companies, may be signed by the local agent in charge of the business of the company at the place where the service is rendered, or where it begins or terminates, and the certificate of the officer making payment that the person to whom payment was thus made was then the local agent of the company, in charge of its business at the place designated, will be sufficient evidence of the agent's authority to receive and receipt for the money paid. Ibid.

The term "small amounts," as used in the Second Comptroller's decision of March 14, 1887, applies only to occasional payments of amounts deemed too insignificant to justify the Government in demanding written evidence of an agent's authority to receive and receipt for moneys, in accordance with the general rule. Ibid.

All vouchers in support of payments of percentages retained under contracts must be accompanied, as contemplated by section 277 of the Revised Statutes, by satisfactory evidence, either primary or secondary, that the several amounts thereon paid have been retained, have since become payable, and have not previously been paid. Ibid., 379.

Hereafter vouchers in support of partial payments, or vouchers on which the retention of percentages are noted, must be made in triplicate instead of duplicate. One of said vouchers is to be retained by the disbursing officer and the other two to be transmitted with his accounts to the accounting officers. The two vouchers so transmitted are to be examined and compared when the officer's accounts are adjusted and settled, one of them to be subsequently withdrawn by the Auditor and filed as a subvoucher with and in support of the voucher on which the final payment is made. Ibid.

It will be deemed a sufficient compliance with the requirement as to vouchers in support of partial payments, including those on which percentages are retained, if the vouchers intended to be withdrawn by the Third Auditor, after the necessary action of the accounting officers thereon and filed as subvouchers with the proper vouchers in support of final payments, be made without receipts and without copies of any subvouchers which may be filed with the original vouchers, but complete in all other respects and certified to by the proper officers. Ibid.

Vouchers on which percentages are retained, and which might otherwise be suspended under the decisions relating to such vouchers, may be passed to the credit of the disbursing officer or agent rendering them when the vouchers on which the retained percentages are paid are embraced in the same settlement with those on which the percentages are retained. Ibid., 380.

When a payment has been made to correct an error appearing in a previous voucher, the voucher on which the error was made, or other sufficient evidence of the error, should be transmitted with the accounts in which the disbursing officer claims credit. Ibid.

It is within the power of the accounting officers, in the settling of accounts of disbursing officers, where it appears that an expenditure has been made from the wrong appropriation, if the expenditure be right in itself and correct otherwise, to charge the amount to the appropriation for which the expenditure is liable. If at the time of the settlement the appropriation to which the expenditure is chargeable is exhausted, the amount should be disallowed against the disbursing officer, and he should be required to apply to Congress for relief. 3 ibid., 36.

Where one Department receives from another Department supplies which are within the scope of appropriations belonging to each a reimbursement of the appropriation of the one from the appropriation of the other, of the cost of the supplies, is not a violation of section 3678, Revised Statutes; nor do the provisions of section 3618, Revised Statutes, apply to such case. [3] Paragraph 6, section 8, of the act of July 31, 1894, does not authorize the Comptroller to render a decision in advance of the settlement of accounts, except upon questions presented by disbursing officers or the heads of Executive Departments involving payments to be made by them. 1 Compt. Dec., 1; see also ibid., p. 87; 139, 411, 431, 500; III ibid., 529; IV ibid., 332. Nor is the Comptroller authorized to render such advance decision until the head of a Department, having control of an appropriation, determines to apply it to a particular purpose. 1 ibid., 89. The Comptroller has no jurisdiction to entertain such an application when made by the head

ASSIGNMENTS OF CLAIMS, POWERS OF ATTORNEY.

Assignments of claims void, unless, etc.
Feb. 26, 1853, c. 81, s. 1, v. 10, p 170; July 29, 1846 c. 66, v. 9, p. 41.
Sec. 3477, R. S.

628. All transfers and assignments made of any claim upon the United States, or of any part or share thereof, or interest therein, whether absolute or conditional, and whatever may be the consideration therefor, and all powers of attorney, orders, or other authorities for receiving payment of any such claim, or of any part or share thereof, shall be absolutely null and void, unless they are freely made and executed in the presence of at least two attesting witnesses, after the allowance of such a claim, the ascertainment of the amount due, and the issuing of a warrant for the payment thereof. Such transfers, assignments, and powers of attorney must recite the warrant for payment, and must be acknowledged by the person making them, before an officer having authority to take acknowledgments of deeds, and shall be certified by the officer; and it must appear by the certificate that the officer, at the time of the acknowledgment, read and fully explained the transfer, assignment, or warrant of attorney to the person acknowledging the same.[1] of a bureau in an Executive Department. 1 ibid., 199. Nor when the request comes from the head of one Executive Department in respect to an appropriation under the head of another Executive Department. 1 ibid., 317.

Requests for the decision of the Comptroller, under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, must be made by the disbursing officer himself and not by an attorney authorized to represent him in the settlement of his accounts. I ibid., 502.

When an expense has not yet been incurred, and a decision of the Comptroller is desired for the guidance of a Department, the request therefor should be presented by the head of the Department having control of the appropriation, and not by the disbursing officer. I ibid., 500.

The Comptroller of the Treasury is not authorized to render decisions to disbursing officers upon questions of law pertaining to payments which have been made by them. V Comp. Dec., 727.

The Comptroller of the Treasury is not authorized to render to the heads of Departments advisory opinions upon questions of law not involving payments to be made by or under them. Ibid., 653.

A statement by the Comptroller of the Treasury in an advance decision, upon a statement of facts submitted by a disbursing officer, which is broader than the facts stated rendered necessary, is a mere dictum and is not binding upon the Auditor or the Comptroller in the settlement of the account of the disbursing officer. V ibid., 562.

Under the act of July 31, 1894, the Auditors of the Treasury are not authorized to render decisions in advance of the settlement of accounts, such authority being, by section 8 of said act, granted only to the Comptroller of the Treasury. I ibid., 94.

[1] The accounting officers of the Treasury will not approve powers of attorney to demand and receive moneys due upon claims against the United States when such powers are not executed in accordance with the provisions of section 3477 of the Revised Statutes. 1 Compt. Dec., 142. Section 3477 of the Revised Statutes, making null and void all assignments and powers of attorney to collect any claim or demand against the Government (unless the power of attorney is given after the settlement of the claim and the issuance of the warrant in payment) applies to liquidated, certain, and undisputed demands as well as to those which are unliquidated, uncertain, or disputed. Ibid., 276. Under the decisions of the courts the accounting officers are required, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3477 of the Revised Statutes, to credit disbursing officers with payments actually made by them under powers of attorney, provided it is shown that, at the time of such payment, such COUNTERFEIT MONEY.

Sec. 5, June 30, 1876, v. 19, p. 64.

629. All United States officers charged with the receipt or disbursement of public moneys, and all officers of national banks, shall stamp or write in plain letters the word "counterfeit," "altered," or "worthless" upon all fraudulent notes issued in the form of and intended to circulate as money which shall be presented at their places of business; and if such officers shall wrongfully stamp any genuine note of the United States, or of the national banks, they shall, upon presentation, redeem such notes at the face value thereof. Sec. 5, act of June 30, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 64).

PRESENTATION OF DRAFTS.

Regulations for presentation of drafts.
Ibid., s. 31, p. 65.
Sec. 3645, R. S.

630. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue and publish regulations to enforce the speedy presentation of all Government drafts, for payment, at the place where payable, and to prescribe the time, according to the different distances of the depositaries from the seat of government, within which all drafts upon them, respectively, shall be presented for payment, and, in default of such presentation, to direct any other mode and place of payment which he may deem proper; but, in all these regulations and directions, it shall be his duty to guard, as far powers are undisputed and have not been revoked, either by the voluntary action of the principal or by his death. Ibid., 142, 431.

The assignment of a quartermaster's voucher, unless made "after the allowance of such a claim" and in conformity with all the other requirements of section 3477 of the Revised Statutes, is "absolutely null and void." The exigencies of the war and of the Government service immediately after the war, which at one time were relied upon to support the practice of paying the assignees of such vouchers, can not be made available in deciding cases now arising. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., 156.

Transfers and assignments of claims.—The restrictions of the Comptroller of the Treasury in regard to the allowance of credits to disbursing officers for payments made by them on powers of attorney or other forms of transfer or assignment being so great as to amount practically to a prohibition of such payments, disbursing officers will refuse to pay the assignee of any claim, except as to assignments authorized by paragraphs 1300 and 1388 of the Army Regulations of 1895.

When claims or vouchers which have been assigned are presented for payment, the holders will be informed that disbursing officers have no authority to make payments to them as assignees, and that payments can only be made to the original persons to whom the money is due. Decision Asst. Sec. War, Nov. 7, 95—27033, A. G. O., 95. Circ. 13, A. G. O., 1895.

Assignments of pay by officers and enlisted men.—The assignment of their pay accounts by any officers, after the same become due, is authorized by paragraph 1300, Army Regulations of 1895, and is legal. III Second Compt. Dec., 45; ibid., 47. Such transfers are accomplished in accordance with paragraphs 1300 and 1388, Army Regulations of 1895. For a full discussion of the subject of assignments see notes to paragraph 196 ante.

Attachments.—An attachment can not be enforced against public money in the hands of a disbursing officer of the Government, and he is authorized to pay the Government's creditor without regard to such attempted levy. I Compt. Dec., 171; Buchanan v. Alexander, 4 How., 20.

Feb. 16, 1885, v. 23, p. 306.
Sec. 3646, R. S.

631. Whenever any original check is lost, stolen, or destroyed, disbursing officers and agents of the United States are authorized, after the expiration of six months, and within three years from the date of such check, to issue a duplicate check; and the Treasurer, assistant treasurers, and designated depositaries of the United States are directed to pay such duplicate checks, upon notice and proof of the loss of the original checks, under such regulations in regard to their issue and payment, and upon the execution of such bonds, with sureties, to indemnify the United States, as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe. This section shall not apply to any check exceeding in amount the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars.[1] Act of February 16, 1895 (23 Stat. L., 306).

Duplicate check when issuing officer is dead.
Feb. 7, 1872, c. 12, s. 2, v. 17, p. 29.
Sec. 3647, R. S.

In case the disbursing officer or agent by whom such lost, destroyed, or stolen original check was issued is dead, or no longer in the service of the United States, it shall be the duty of the proper accounting officer, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, to state an account in favor of the owner of such original check for the amount thereof, and to charge such amount to the account of such officer or agent.[1]

[1] The following paragraph of the Army Regulations of 1901 prescribes a method of procedure in the case of a check which has been lost or destroyed:

"When an original check of a disbursing officer, not exceeding $2,500 in amount, has been lost or destroyed, a duplicate check may be issued by him, after six months and within three years of the date of the original, upon the owner filing with him the notice and proof of loss and the indemnity bond required by sections 3646 and 3647, Revised Statutes, and act of February 16, 1885. In case the disbursing officer who issued the original check is no longer in the service, the notice and proof of loss and the indemnity bond will be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury prior to the issue of a duplicate check. The proper accounting officer of the Treasury will state an account in favor of the owner of said check and charge the amount thereof to the account of such officer. Instructions for the execution and use of the affidavit and bond, and the issue of the duplicate check, accompany the blank form furnished by the Treasury Department." Par. 681.

Public accounts, within the meaning of section 5 of the act of July 31, 1894, which provides that the Comptroller of the Treasury shall "prescribe the form of keeping and rendering all public accounts," are accounts in which the United States is concerned either as debtor or creditor. VI Compt. Dec., 35.

Our scheme of government includes an accounting system, with proper officers thereof, and it seems reasonable to conclude that when the law provides for an accounting, and makes no special provision therefor, it was the legislative intent that the accounting should be done in the usual manner—that is, by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department. Ibid., 283, 284.

The act of July 31, 1894, specifically devolves upon the accounting officers of the Treasury the particular duties of examining the public accounts and certifying balances arising thereon; and their exercise of those duties, including the weighing of evidence, the construction of statutes, and the application of general principles of law in connection therewith, is exclusive. V Ibid., 410.

All accounts for the expenditure of public moneys should be itemized so far as practicable, and a discretion given to the officer having control of an appropriation does not dispense with this requirement. IV Ibid., 159.

The fiscal year for the adjustment of the accounts of Secretary of the Senate for compensation and traveling expenses of Senators, and of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives for compensation and mileage of Members and Delegates, shall extend to and include the third day of July. *Sec. 9, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. Sec. 3622, R.S.

636. Every officer or agent of the United States who receives public money which he is not authorized to retain as salary, pay, or emolument shall render his accounts monthly.[1] Such accounts, with the vouchers necessary to the correct and prompt settlement thereof, shall be sent by mail, or otherwise, to the bureau to which they pertain within ten days after the expiration of each successive month, and, after examination there, shall be passed to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury for settlement.[2]

In case of the nonreceipt at the Treasury or proper bureau of any accounts within a reasonable and proper time thereafter, the officer whose accounts are in default shall be required to furnish satisfactory evidence of having complied with the provisions of this section. Nothing herein contained shall, however, be construed to restrain the heads of any of the Departments from requiring such other returns or reports from the officer or agent, subject to the control of such heads of Departments, as the public interest may require.

[1] The forms for the rendition of accounts are prescribed by the Comptroller of the Treasury. See, also, section 4 of the act of August 30, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 413), which required such accounts to be rendered quarterly. The requirement of section 4, act of August 30, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 413), that accounts opened thereafter be rendered quarterly, was repealed by section 6 of the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 206).

[2] An account is something which may be adjusted and liquidated by an arithmetical computation. One set of Treasury officers examine and audit the accounts; another set is intrusted with the power of reviewing that examination and with the further power of determining whether the laws authorize the payment of the account when liquidated. But no law authorizes Treasury officials to allow and pass in accounts a number not the result of arithmetical computation upon a subject within the operation of the mutual part of a contract. Power v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 263, 275. A voucher given by an officer of the Government, in the regular and ordinary course of his business, for services rendered or articles purchased for the public service, within the scope of his authority and the line of his duty unimpeached, is prima facie evidence of indebtedness on the part of the United States, as therein stated. Parish v. U. S., 2 Ct. Cls., 341; Solomon v. U. S., 19 Wall., 17, and 9 Ct. Cls., 54. In this respect the executive officers who are authorized to make contracts, employ services, or purchase property for the public service, and whose duty it is to see to it that the money certified by them to be due has been actually and fairly earned, within their own knowledge, while acting in their official capacity, differ from the certified balances of the accounting officers.

Auditor may disapprove requisitions on delinquency, etc.

638. All monthly accounts shall be mailed or otherwise sent to the proper officer at Washington within ten days after the end of the month to which they relate, and quarterly and other accounts within twenty days after the period to which they relate, and shall be transmitted to and received by the Auditors within sixty days of their actual receipt at the proper office in Washington in the case of monthly, and sixty days in the case of quarterly and other accounts. Should there be any delinquency in this regard at the time of the receipt by the Auditor of a requisition for an advance of money, he shall disapprove the requisition, which he may also do for other reasons arising out of the condition of the officer's accounts for whom the advance is requested; but the Secretary of the Treasury may overrule the Auditor's decision as to the sufficiency of these latter reasons. Sec. 12, act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 209); act of March 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 910).

In the examination of claims in the Treasury Department these accounting officers act wholly upon the evidence presented to them by others, and have themselves no personal knowedge of the facts upon which the claims are founded. It is one of the fundamental principles upon which that Department is established—and a useful and nice one it is—that the executive officers who pass upon public accounts shall be different from those who are authorized to make contracts and incur liabilities in the expenditure of public money. McCann v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls. 445, 447. The accounts under a contract remain open so long as anything remains to be adjusted or paid. Parker v. U. S., 26 Ct. Cls. 344.

The first clause of section 3622 of the Revised Statutes, which requires the rendition of accounts monthly, is applicable to every officer who receives advances of public money to be disbursed, and also to every officer who collects and receives fees and revenues which it is his duty to account for. XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 557.

The requirement that officers render their accounts monthly is not subject to the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, excepting in extraordinary cases, where he shall be of opinion that the statutory period ought to be enlarged to meet the special circumstances of such cases. XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 557.

For other statutory regulations in respect to the disbursement of and accounting for the public moneys, see sections 3643, 3648, 3678, and 3679 of the Revised Statutes, paragraphs 617, 619, 620, and 621 ante; see, also, the acts of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 113), and May 28, 1896 (29 ibid., 148), paragraphs 622, and 623 ante. For a definition of the term "account" as used in connection with the receipt and disbursement of the public money, see note 3, supra.

Secretary of the Treasury to prescribe rules for rendition of accounts.

639. The Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe suitable rules and regulations, and may make orders in particular cases relaxing the requirement of mailing or otherwise sending accounts as aforesaid within ten or twenty days, or waiving delinquency, in such cases only in which there is, or is likely to be, a manifest physical difficulty in complying with the same, it being the purpose of this provision to require the prompt rendition of accounts without regard to the mere convenience of the officers, and to forbid the advance of money to those delinquent in rendering them. Ibid.

Delays in submitting accounts.

640. Should there be a delay by the administrative Departments beyond the aforesaid twenty or sixty days in transmitting accounts, an order of the President [or, in the event of the absence from the seat of government or sickness of the President, an order of the Secretary of the Treasury] in the particular case shall be necessary to authorize the advance of money requested: And provided further, That this section shall not apply to accounts of the postal revenue and expenditures therefrom, which shall be rendered as now required by law.[1] Ibid.

[1] Amended by the insertion of the clause in brackets by section 4 of the act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 807).

Under the authority vested in him by this statute, the Secretary of the Treasury relaxed the requirements in respect to the mailing of accounts by extending the time of mailing the accounts of disbursing officers as set forth therein.

Such period of relaxation was still further extended to December 31, 1900 (see General Orders, No. 211, A. G. O., of December 29, 1899, and the orders therein cited). Under this permission the date of mailing as fixed by A. R. 709, has been temporarily changed to the 20th day of each month for all accounts, whether rendered in this country or in the island possessions.

The exigency which required this temporary change having now ceased in the Subsistence Department at all depots, posts, and stations in the United States, except at the purchasing depots at New York, Chicago, and San Francisco, the relaxation of the law as to time of rendition of accounts is hereby withdrawn to take effect May 1, 1900, from all but the excepted depots, and accounts will thereafter be mailed on or before the 10th day of the month as required by A. R. 627. At the excepted depots the mailing of accounts may continue to be delayed until the 20th day of the month until further orders, or until December 31, 1900.

In the island possessions of Cuba, Porto Rico, and Hawaii the relaxation is hereby withdrawn as of date May 1, 1900, from all officers in those islands engaged in the receipt or disbursement of subsistence funds, and their accounts will thereafter be mailed on or before the 10th day of the month, as required by A. R. 709.

The mailing of the accounts of officers receiving and disbursing subsistence funds in the Philippines may continue to be delayed until the 20th day of the month until further orders, or until December 31, 1900.

Officers receiving and disbursing subsistence funds on United States transports will, after May 1, 1900, mail their accounts and returns at the port at which they may be when the ten days' limit will expire, or, if they should be at sea when the ten days' limit expires, they will mail their accounts and returns at the next United States or island port at which a stop is made.

Returns of subsistence stores and subsistence property will be rendered and mailed at all places concurrently with the rendering and mailing of accounts current and vouchers.

An officer delinquent in mailing his subsistence account current and vouchers or his returns within the time hereinabove limited will transmit with them at the time

REPORT OF DELINQUENTS.

Secretary of Treasury to report delinquent officers.
Sec. 4, May 28, 1896, v. 29, p. 179.

641. The Secretary of the Treasury shall, on the first Monday of January in each year, make report to Congress of such officers and administrative departments and offices of the Government as were, respectively, at any time during the last preceding fiscal year delinquent in rendering or transmitting accounts to the proper offices in Washington and the cause therefor, and in each case indicating whether the delinquency was waived, together with such officers, including postmasters and officers of the Post-Office Department, as were found upon final settlement of their accounts to have been indebted to the Government, with the amount of such indebtedness in each case, and who, at the date of making report, had failed to pay the same into the Treasury of the United States.[1] Sec. 4, act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 179).

The balances which may from time to time be certified by the Auditors to the division of bookkeeping and warrants, or to the Postmaster-General, upon the settlement of public accounts, shall be final and conclusive upon the executive branch of the Government, except that any person whose accounts have been settled, the head of an Executive Department to which the account pertains, or the Comptroller of the Treasury, may, within a year, obtain a revision of the said account by the Comptroller of the Treasury, whose decision upon such revision shall be final and conclusive upon the executive branch of the Government: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, when in his judgment the interests of the Government require it, suspend payment and direct the reexamination of any account.[2] Sec. 8, act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 207).

of mailing a full explanation of the causes of delay for the action of the proper authorities. G. O. 42, A. G. O., 1900.

The time for examination of monthly accounts by the bureaus and offices of the War Department after the date of actual receipt and before transmitting the same to the Auditor for the War Department was extended from twenty to sixty days for the period of one year from December 20, 1899, by the act of December 20, 1899 (31 Stat. L., 1.)

[1] This provision replaces the requirement of section 12 of the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 209), that "the Secretary of the Treasury shall, on the first Monday in January in each year, make report to Congress of such officers as are then delinquent in the rendering of their accounts, or in the payment of balances found due from them for the last preceding fiscal year."

[2] (1) The Auditor, in the first instance, has the original and exclusive jurisdiction to receive, examine, and settle all accounts.

(2) The Comptroller is without jurisdiction to entertain any claim not previously

SUITS FOR RECOVERY OF MONEY.

Suits to recover money.
Mar. 3, 1797, c. 20, s. 1, v. 1, p. 512.
Sec. 3624, R. S.

643. Whenever any person accountable for public money neglects or refuses to pay into the Treasury the sum or balance reported to be due to the United States upon the adjustment of his account, the Comptroller of the Treasury shall institute suit for the recovery of the same, adding to the sum stated to be due on such account the commissions of the delinquent, which shall be forfeited in every instance where suit is commenced and judgment obtained thereon, and an interest of six per centum per annum from the time of receiving the money until it shall be repaid into the Treasury.[1] passed upon and settled by the Auditor, and, until the Auditor has settled the account, the Comptroller is without jurisdiction to revise it.

(3) The settlement of an account by the Auditor, so far as the claimant's right or power before the accounting officers is concerned, is final and conclusive, except that any person whose account may have been settled by the Auditor may, within a year, obtain a revision of said account by the Comptroller.

(4) The person who may obtain such revision is the person whose account has been settled by the Auditor. V Compt. Dec., 333, 334.

The Comptroller has the exclusive right to reopen an account which has been revised by himself or his predecessors. IV Compt. Dec., 303. After the expiration of a year from the date of settlement an Auditor has the exclusive right to reopen an account settled by himself or his predecessors. Ibid. Before the expiration of a year the right of revision by the Comptroller is exclusive, and an Auditor can not reopen an account within that period. Ibid. After the expiration of six months from the date of settlement by the Second Auditor, under the act of July 1,1892 (27 Stat. L., 194), no appeal having been taken within that period, the Auditor for the War Department has the exclusive right to reopen the settlement. Ibid, 471.

Section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, specifies the officers and persons by whom the revision of accounts by the Comptroller may be obtained, and it must be construed to be exclusive. IV Compt. Dec., 723. Under section 8 of the act of July 31, 1894, the Comptroller of the Treasury is authorized to revise, upon his own motion, all items embraced in an account, including items upon which payment has been accepted; and in particular instances, where justice requires it, such authority may be exercised in favor of a claimant. Ibid, 22.

The accounting officers are not authorized to reopen accounts which have been settled, except for the purpose of correcting mistakes of fact arising from errors of calculation, or upon the production of newly discovered material evidence. VI Compt. Dec., 236. The accounting officers are not authorized to reopen accounts for the purpose of correcting decisions upon questions of law subsequently held to be erroneous. Ibid, 91.

The right of the accounting officers to reopen accounts which have been settled, either by themselves or their predecessors, for the purpose of correcting mistakes of fact arising from errors of calculation, or upon the production of newly discovered material evidence, or for fraud or collusion, has received the sanction of the courts and of the law-making power. The act of July 31, 1894, does not take away or modify that right. IV Compt. Dec., 303.

Where the Comptroller has made a final settlement of a claim from the War Department, an order of the Secretary that the accounts be reexamined has no validity. B. & O. R. R. Co. v. U. S. 31, Ct. Cls., 484.

[1] It is a defense to a charge (under the 62d article) of the embezzlement defined in section 5490 of the Revised Statutes as consisting in a failure to safely keep public moneys by an officer charged with the safe-keeping of the same that the funds alleged to have been embezzled were, without fault on the part of the accused, lost in transportation or fraudulently or feloniously abstracted. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 155.

[2] In view of the injunction and definition of sections 3622 and 5491 of the Revised Statutes, an officer who, in his official capacity, receives public money (not pay or allowances) which he fails duly to account for to the United States is guilty of embezzlement. The statute makes no distinction as to the sources from which the money is derived or the circumstances of its receipt. Nor is it material whether or not the officer actually converted it to his own use or what was the motive of his disposition of it. So, held, that an officer who, having claimed and exacted certain moneys from Government contractors for alleged liabilities on their part, failed to pay the same into the Treasury or to duly account therefor, was guilty of embezzlement under the ninth paragraph of article 60. Dig. Opin. J. A. G.. par. 156.

650. The provisions of the five preceding sections shall be construed to apply to all persons charged with the safe-keeping, transfer, or disbursement of the public money, whether such persons be indicted as receivers or depositaries of the same. (See secs. 3615–3652e, R. S.)

651. Upon the trial of any indictment against any person for embezzling public money under the provisions of the six preceding sections, it shall be sufficient evidence, for the purpose of showing a balance against such person, to produce a transcript from the books and proceedings of the Treasury, as required in civil cases, under the provisions for the settlement of accounts between the United States and receivers of public money.[1] (See secs. 3625, 3633, R. S.)

652. The refusal of any person, whether in or out of office, charged with the safe-keeping, transfer, or disbursement of the public money, to pay any draft, order, or warrant drawn upon him by the proper accounting officer of the Treasury, for any public money in his hands belonging to the United States, no matter in what capacity the same may have been received or may be held, or to transfer or disburse any such money promptly, upon the legal requirement of any authorized officer, shall be deemed, upon the trial of any indictment against such person for embezzlement, as prima facie evidence of such embezzlement.[2] (See sec. 3644, R. S.)

Refusal to pay draft prima facie evidence of embezzlement.

653. If any officer charged with the disbursement of the public moneys accepts, receives, or transmits to the Treasury Department, to be allowed in his favor, any receipt or voucher from a creditor of the United States, without having paid to such creditor in such funds as the officer received for disbursement, or in such funds as he may be authorized to take in exchange, the full amount specified in such receipt or voucher, every such act is an act of conversion by such officer to his own use of the amount specified in such receipt or voucher. [1] U. S. v. Gaussen, 19 Wallace, 198.

[2] Section 5495 of the Revised Statutes provides that the refusal of any person charged with the disbursement of public moneys promptly to transfer or disburse the funds in his hands, "upon the legal requirement of an authorized officer, shall be deemed, upon the trial of any indictment against such person for embezzlement, as prima facie evidence of such embezzlement." Applying this rule to a military case, it is clear that in the event of such a refusal by a disbursing officer of the Army the burden of proof would be upon him to show that his proceeding was justified and that it would not be for the prosecution to show what had become of the funds. So, where an acting commissary of subsistence, on being relieved, failed to turn over the public moneys to his successor, or to his post commander, when ordered to do so, or to produce such moneys, exhibit vouchers for the same, or otherwise account for their use, when required to do so by the department commander, held, that he was properly chargeable with and convicted of embezzlement under this article (sixtieth article of war). 657. Every officer of the United States, and every person acting for or on behalf of the United States, in any official capacity under or by virtue of the authority of any department or office of the Government thereof; and every officer or person acting for or on behalf of either House of Congress, or of any committee of either House, or of both Houses thereof, who asks, accepts, or receives any money, or any contract, promise, undertaking, obligation, gratuity, or security for the payment of money, or for the delivery or conveyance of anything of value, with intent to have his decision or action on any question, matter, cause, or proceeding which may at any time be pending, or which may be by law brought before him in his official capacity, or in his place of trust or profit, influenced thereby, shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding section.

[1] For statutory regulations respecting details to the staff see the title "Details to the Staff" in the chapter entitled "THE STAFF DEPARTMENTS."

[2] The Adjutant-General's Department is the bureau of orders and records of the Army.

Orders and instructions emanating from the War Department or Army Headquarters and all general regulations are communicated to troops and individuals in the military service through the Adjutant-General. His office is the repository for the records of the War Department which relate to the personnel of the permanent military establishment and militia in the service of the United States, to the military history of every commissioned officer and soldier thereof, and to the movements and operation of troops.

The records of all appointments, promotions, resignations, deaths, and other casualties in the Army, the preparation and distribution of commissions, and the compilation and issue of the Army Register and of information concerning examinations for appointment and promotion, pertain to the Adjutant-General's Office.

The Adjutant-General is charged, under the direction of the Secretary of War, with the management of the recruiting service, the collection and classification of military information in regard to our own and foreign countries, the preparation of instructions to officers detailed to visit encampments of militia, and the digesting, arranging, and preserving of their reports; also the preparation of the annual returns of the militia required by law to be submitted to Congress. Requests for military information, which require action on the part of any military attaché of the United States, will be made to the Adjutant-General of the Army. Par. 833, A. R., 1901.

In the Adjutant-General's Office the names of all enlisted soldiers are enrolled, enlistments and descriptive lists filed, deaths, discharges, desertions, etc., recorded, the general returns of the Army consolidated, returns of regiments and posts and all muster rolls, and the inventories of effects of deceased officers and soldiers preserved. Par. 834, ibid. But, see, as to the custodianship of certain rolls, returns, and records of the volunteer forces called into service during the recent war with Spain, section 8 of the act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 362), paragraph 1238, post.

The act of appropriation of March 15, 1898, contained the following requirement: "For contingent expenses of the Military Information Division of the Adjutant-General's Office, and of the military attachés at the United States embassies and legations abroad, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, three thousand six hundred and forty dollars. Act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 327). For pay of a clerk attendant on the collection and classification of military information, one thousand five hundred dollars." Ibid., 320. Similar provision is made in in the act of March 3, 1899. Ibid., 1064.

[1] Commanders of departments, corps, and posts will make to the Adjutant-General's Office, in Washington, monthly returns of their respective commands on forms furnished by the Adjutant-General of the Army, and in accordance with the directions printed thereon. In like manner company commanders will make monthly returns of their companies to regimental headquarters. Par. 876, A. R., 1901.

For instructions relating to the preparation of monthly returns see paragraphs 876–889, Army Regulations, 1901.

[2] This enactment replaces the requirement of section 1119 of the Revised Statutes by which the term of enlistment was fixed at five years. For regulations governing enlistments in the regular service see Article LXXI, paragraphs 818 to 856, Army Regulations of 1895. For rules governing the recruitment of the volunteer forces see Circular of June 3, 1898, from the Adjutant-General's Office, and General Orders, 122 and 150, A. G. O., of 1899.

[3] The act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 486), fixed the superior limit of age at enlistment at thirty years instead of thirty-five, as required by section 1116, Revised Statutes, and this requirement was repeated in section 2 of the act of August 1, 1894 (28 ibid., 216), which limited the operation of the enactment to a "time of peace," leaving the higher limit of age to become operative in time of war. The superior limit was established at thirty-five years and the inferior limit at eighteen years by section 4 of the act of March 3, 1899 (ibid., 977).

Sec. 1118, R.S.

673. No minor under the age of sixteen years, no insane or intoxicated person, no deserter from the military service of the United States, and no person who has been convicted of a felony shall be enlisted or mustered into the military service.

Prohibited enlistments; penalty.
3 Art. War.

674. Every officer who knowingly enlists or musters into the military service any minor over the age of sixteen years without the written consent of his parents or guardians, or any minor under the age of sixteen years, or any insane or intoxicated persons, or any deserter from the military or naval service of the United States, or any person who has been convicted of any infamous criminal offense, shall, upon conviction, be dismissed from the service, or suffer such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. Third Article of War.

Fraudulent enlistment.
July 27, 1892, s. 2, v. 27, p. 277.

675. Fraudulent enlistment and the receipt of any pay or allowance thereunder, is hereby declared a military offense and made punishable, by a court-martial, under the sixty-second Article of War.[1] Sec. 2, act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 277).

OATH OF ENLISTMENT.

2 Art. War.

676. These rules and articles shall be read to every enlisted man at the time of, or within six days after, his enlistment, and he shall thereupon take an oath or affirmation, in the following form: "I, A. B., do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America; that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever; and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States, and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the rules and Articles of War." This oath may be taken before any commissioned officer of the Army.[2] Second Article of War.

[2] Enlistment is a contract, but it is one of those contracts which changes the status, and where that is changed no breach of contract destroys the new status or relieves from the obligations which its existence imposes. * * * By enlistment the citizen becomes a soldier. His relations to the State and the public are changed. He acquires a new status, with correlative rights and duties, and although he may violate his contract obligations, his status as a soldier is unchanged. He can not of his own

678. To fill vacancies occurring, from time to time, in the several organizations serving without the limits of the United States with trained men, the President is authorized to enlist recruits in numbers equal to four per centum of the total strength authorized for such organizations. Section 29, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 756).

Enlistments in excess of authorized strength. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 29, v. 31, p. 756.

679. The Secretary of War is authorized to detach from the Army at large such number of enlisted men as may be necessary to perform duty at the various recruiting stations, and while performing such duty one member of each party shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a corporal of the arm of the service to which they respectively belong. Section 31, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 756).

Details for recruiting; increased rank. S. 31, ibid.

Historical Note.—The office of Adjutant-General, which had existed during the government under the Articles of Confederation, was created by section 7 of the act of March 5, 1792 (1 Stat. L., 241), which made provision for an adjutant who was to do the duty of an inspector: section 3 of the act of May 30, 1796 (ibid., 483), contained a similar provision for an inspector who was to do the duty of adjutant-general, but who was to continue in service until March 4, 1797, and no longer. Temporary provision seems to have been made for the performance of the duties of the department from March 4, 1797, until May, 1798, when, in anticipation of war with France, an increase of the military establishment was authorized and provision made in section 6 of the act of May 28, 1798 (ibid., 538), for the appointment of an adjutant-general with the rank and pay of a brigadier-general. Section 14 of the act of March 3, 1799 (ibid., 749), contained the requirement that the adjutant-general of the Army should be, ex officio, assistant inspector-general, and that deputy inspectors-general should be, ex officio, deputy adjutants-general, and should perform the duties of adjutants-general volition throw off the garments he has once put on, nor can he, the State not objecting, renounce his relations and destroy his status on the plea that if he had disclosed truthfully the facts the other party, the State, would not have entered into the new relations with him, or permitted him to change his status. U. S. v. Grimley, 137 U. S., 147.

Volunteer recruiting service.—The method of enlistment in the case of volunteers is regulated by section 5 of the act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. L. 361), which confers authority upon the Secretary of War "to prescribe such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the terms of this act, as may in his judgment be necessary for the purpose of examining, organizing, and receiving into service the men called for." Under the authority thus conferred regulations were prepared by the Secretary of War and promulgated to the Army in a circular from the Adjutant-General's Office under date of June 3, 1898. Section 12 of the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 977), authorized the recruitment of a force of 35,000 volunteers, "without restriction as to citizenship or educational qualifications." For orders regulating the enlistment and organization of this force see General Orders, No. 122 and 150, A. G. O., of 1899.

[1] This provision has become practically obsolete, as funds for the payment of the premiums therein authorized are no longer provided for in the annual acts of appropriation for the support of the military establishment.

During the period of the war of the rebellion the amount authorized by the statute was paid, not to the person bringing the recruit, but to the recruit himself as a part of the bounty due him at enlistment. By Circular No. 24, A. G. O., of 1866, this practice was discontinued and the premium was required to be paid to any military person or civilian who brought an accepted recruit to the rendezvous; but these payments were finally suspended, until further orders, by a circular dated February 11, 1868.

in the armies to which they might be assigned. These officers were disbanded on June 15, 1800, in pursuance of a requirement to that effect contained in the act of May 14, 1800 (2 ibid., 85). Section 3 of the act of March 16, 1802 (ibid., 132), provided for an adjutant and inspector of the Army, who was to be taken from the field officers. Section 4 of the act of January 11, 1812 (ibid., 671), created the office of Adjutant-General, with the rank and pay of a brigadier-general, which continued to exist until the close of the war, when it was discontinued in the reduction accomplished by the act of March 3, 1815 (3 ibid., 224). The duties of the department were again performed by officers temporarily detailed for the purpose for a little more than a year, when, by the act of April 24, 1816 (3 ibid., 297), the temporary establishment was made permanent and the strength of the department was fixed at one Adjutant and Inspector-General (brigadier-general), one assistant adjutant-general (colonel) for each division, and one assistant adjutant-general (major) for each brigade. At the general reduction of 1821 the department was reduced to a single officer—an Adjutant-General of the Army—with the rank of a colonel of cavalry. By section 7 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 ibid., 256), two assistant adjutants-general (brevet majors) and four brevet captains were added to the department. By section 6 of the act of June 18, 1846 (9 ibid., 17), four assistant adjutants-general were added for the period of the existing war; by section 2 of the act of March 3, 1847 (ibid., 184), one lieutenant-colonel and two brevet captains were authorized under the same restriction as to tenure of office. By section 3 of the act of July 19, 1848 (ibid., 247), the limitation contained in the two acts last cited was removed, and the establishment, as it existed at the close of the war with Mexico, was made permanent; the vacancies were not to be filled, however, until the further order of Congress; but, by section 4 of the act of March 2, 1849 (ibid., 351), this restriction was repealed and the President was authorized to make appointments and promotions in the department as then constituted by law.

At the outbreak of the war of the rebellion the department was reorganized, its composition being fixed by the act of August 3, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 287), at 1 brigadier-general, 1 colonel, 2 lieutenant-colonels, 4 majors, and 12 captains. By section 22 of the act of July 17, 1862 (ibid., 597), 1 colonel, 2 lieutenant-colonels, and 9 majors were added to the establishment, with the requirement that vacancies in the grade of major should thereafter be filled by selections from captains in the Army. By section 10 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 333), the composition of the department was fixed as follows: One brigadier-general, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant-colonels, and 13 majors. The grade of captain not being provided for in this enactment was thenceforward discontinued. This statute contained the requirement that vacancies in the office of Adjutant-General should thereafter be filled by selection from the officers of the department. By section 2 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), promotions and appointments in the department were forbidden until the further order of Congress, but by Joint Resolution, No. 12, of April 10, 1869 (16 ibid., 53), this statute was suspended in its operation as to vacancies which had existed on March 3, 1869. By the act of March 3, 1873 (17 ibid., 578), the appointment of 1 major to the department was authorized and, by the act of March 3, 1875 (18 ibid., 478), the restriction upon appointments and promotions, imposed by the act of March 3, 1869, was removed, and the composition of the department fixed at 1 brigadier-general, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant-colonels, and 10 majors. By the act of February 28, 1887 (24 ibid., 434), the grades of rank of the officers constituting the department were rearranged so as to consist of 1 brigadier-general, 4 colonels, 6 lieutenant-colonels, and 6 majors, the vacancies created by the act to be filled by promotion according to seniority. By the act of August 6, 1894 (28 ibid., 234), the number of majors in the department was reduced to 4. By the act of May 18, 1898 (30 ibid., 419), the appointment of 1 colonel and 1 major was authorized, with the proviso that, upon the muster out of the volunteer forces, no promotions or appointments should be made until the number of officers of the above grades had been reduced to that authorized by the law in force prior to the passage of the act. By section 3 of the act of June 6, 1900 (31 ibid., 655), the rank of major-general was conferred upon the Adjutant-General "during the service of the present incumbent." By section 13 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 751), the permanent strength of the department was fixed at 1 adjutant-general with the rank of major-general, until a vacancy shall occur in the office on the expiration of the service of the present incumbent, by retirement or otherwise, and thereafter with the rank of brigadier-general, 5 assistant adjutants-general with the rank of colonel, 7 assistant adjutants-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and 15 assistant adjutants-general with the rank of major. A system of details was also established, by the operation of which the permanent commissioned personnel of the department will be gradually replaced, as vacancies occur, by officers detailed from the line of the Army for duty in the Adjutant-General's Department.

[2] For statutory provisions respecting the mileage of this officer see the act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 480). Par. 847, post.

[3] The duties of inspectors-general are defined in the following paragraphs of the Army Regulations of 1895 (see also G. O. 80 and 91, A. G. O. of 1898):

Officers of the Inspector-General's Department will inspect once in each year all military commands, garrisoned posts, and camps, and once in two years such ungarrisoned posts and national cemeteries as can be visited without departing materially from the routes of other prescribed inspections. (Par. 867, A. R., 1895.)

Inspections of the Military Academy will be made only under specific instructions given in each case by the Secretary of War, and inspections of the service schools, in so far as they are distinct from posts, under similar instructions given by the Secretary of War or the Commanding General of the Army. (Par. 869, ibid.)

The military department of civil institutions of learning at which officers of the Army are detailed will be inspected annually, near the close of the college year, under specific instructions. The inspecting officer, upon his arrival at the institutions, will apply to the president or the administrative officer thereof for such aid or facilities as he may require. His report will be sent to the Inspector-General of the Army, then to the Adjutant-General of the Army for note and return, and a copy furnished the president of the institution by the War Department. (Par. 870, ibid.)

The sphere of inquiry of the Inspector-General's Department includes every branch of military affairs, except when specially limited in these regulations or in orders. Inspectors-general and acting inspectors-general will exercise a comprehensive and general observation within their respective districts over all that pertains to the efficiency of the Army, the condition and state of supplies of all kinds, of arms and equipments, of the expenditure of public property and moneys, and the condition of accounts of all disbursing officers of every branch of the service; of the conduct, discipline, and efficiency of officers and troops, and report with strict impartiality in regard to all irregularities that may be discovered. From time to time they will make such suggestions as may appear to them practicable for the cure of any defect that may come under their observation. Par. 857, ibid.

Inspectors-general and acting inspectors-general are under the orders of the Secretary of War and the Commanding General of the Army only, and all orders not confidential will be issued from the Adjutant-General's Office and transmitted to them through the Inspector-General of the Army. They will make the general inspections within the limits of their respective districts, and will each be allowed the necessary clerks and one messenger, who will be assigned by the Secretary of War. (Par. 858, ibid.)

formity to the law appropriating the money; also to ascertain whether the disbursing officers of the Army comply with the law in keeping their accounts and making their deposits; such inquiries to be made by officers of the Inspection Department of the Army, or others detailed for that purpose: Provided, That no officer so detailed shall be in any way connected with the department or corps making the disbursement. Act of April 20, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 33).

686. That the reports of such inspections shall be made out and forwarded to Congress with the annual report of the Secretary of War. Ibid.[1] Reports of inspections.

687. Hereafter no portion of the appropriation for mileage to officers traveling on duty without troops shall be expended for inspections or investigations, except such as are especially ordered by the Secretary of War, or such Limitation on mileage. Aug. 6, 1894, v. 28, p. 237.

Inspectors-general and acting inspectors-general will exercise a comprehensive and general observation within their respective districts over all that pertains to the efficiency of the Army, the condition and state of supplies of all kinds, of arms and equipments, of the expenditure of public property and moneys, and the condition of accounts of all disbursing officers of every branch of the service; of the conduct, discipline, and efficiency of officers and troops, and report with strict impartiality in regard to all irregularities that may be discovered. From time to time they will make such suggestions as may appear to them practicable for the cure of any defect that may come under their observation. Par. 857, ibid.

[1] INSPECTIONS OF PUBLIC WORKS AND DISBURSEMENTS.

The inspection contemplated in this provision is that required by the act of April 20, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 33). See also Chapter XLI, entitled THE NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.

All depots, armories, arsenals, and public works of every kind under charge of officers of the Army, except works of engineering conducted under the direction of the Secretary of War and supervision of the Chief of Engineers, will be inspected annually by officers of the Inspector-General's Department. These inspections will include military and business administration and methods, but will not extend to the scientific or technical character of work, for which the officer in charge is responsible, through the head of his department, to the Secretary of War. Par. 868, A. R., 1895.

The inspection of disbursements and money accounts of disbursing officers required by act of April 20, 1874, will be made by officers of the Inspector-General's Department or others detailed for that purpose, and, as far as practicable, at irregular intervals, but no officer so detailed shall be in any way connected with the corps or staff department making the disbursement. The frequency of these inspections will be regulated by the Secretary of War. Par. 871, ibid.

Inspectors-general and acting inspectors-general will inquire as to the necessity, economy, and propriety of all disbursements, their strict conformity to the law appropriating the money, and whether the disbursing officers comply with the law in keeping their accounts and making their deposits. A statement of receipts and expenditures and of the distribution of funds, with a list of outstanding checks, on forms furnished by the Inspector-General of the Army, will be submitted by the disbursing officer to the inspector, who should immediately transmit the list of outstanding checks to the several depositories. Upon return from a depository, balances will be verified and noted on the inspection report, which will then be forwarded to the Inspector-General. The list of outstanding checks will be retained by the inspector, and a copy, with indorsements thereon, sent to the Inspector-General. Par. 876, ibid.

When an officer ceases to act as a disbursing officer he will submit to the officer to whom the inspection of his accounts has been assigned a statement of his money accounts from date of last inspection to and including the closing of his accounts, with a list of outstanding checks. If an inspection be impracticable, the statement will be forwarded to the Inspector-General of the Army. Par. 877, ibid.

as are made by army and department commanders in visiting their commands, and those made by Inspector-General's Department in pursuance of law, Army Regulations, or orders issued by the Secretary of War or the Commanding General of the Army; and all orders involving the payment of mileage shall state the special duty enjoined.[1] Act of August 6, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 237).

Inspection of Volunteer Soldiers' Homes.
Mar. 3, 1893, v. 27, p. 653.

688. The Secretary of War shall hereafter exercise the same supervision over all receipts and disbursements on account of the Volunteer Soldiers' Homes as he is required by law to apply to the accounts of disbursing officers of the Army. Act of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 653).

Inspector-General of Army to inspect and make report, etc.
Sec. 2, Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 564.

689. The Inspector-General of the Army shall, in person, once in each year thoroughly inspect the [Soldiers'] Home, its records, accounts, management, discipline, and sanitary condition, and shall report thereon in writing, together with such suggestions as he desires to make.[2] Sec. 2, act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 564).

Inspectors-general to designate articles for sale, etc.
Sec. 25, July 28, 1866, v. 14, p. 336.

690. The officers of the Subsistence Department shall procure, and keep for sale to officers and enlisted men at cost prices, for cash or on credit, such articles as may, from time to time, be designated by the inspectors-general of the Army. An account of all sales on credit shall be kept, and the amounts due for the same shall be reported monthly to the Paymaster-General. See sections 1299 and 1300, Rev. Stat. (paragraphs 659 and 660, post).

Oaths, when administered by officers, etc.

[1] The expense for transportation to a point not located on a railroad incurred by an officer of the Inspector-General's Department in inspecting unserviceable river and harbor material, is properly payable from the appropriation for the river and harbor work. III Compt. Dec., 3.

[2] The act of January 19, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 722), required an officer of this Department, at least once each year, to visit the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, "for the purpose of examining into the books and all the affairs thereof, and ascertaining whether the laws, rules, and regulations relating thereto are complied with, the officers are competent and faithful, and the convicts properly governed and employed, and at the same time treated with humanity and kindness. And it shall be the duty of the inspector, at once, to make full report thereof to the Secretary of War."

Historical note.—The Inspector-General's Department had existed during the war of the Revolution, the office of Inspector-General having been held by Baron Steuben, whose appointment was approved by Congress in a resolution dated May 25, 1778. During the incumbency of Baron Steuben a system of drill regulations was prepared and introduced, which continued in use until replaced, in part, by the system prepared by Col. Alexander Smyth in 1810, being finally superseded by the drill regulations prepared by Major-General Scott in 1821. On June 25, 1788, in conformity to a resolution of Congress of that date, the Inspector's Department ceased to exist, and the inspection of the troops was conducted for a time by officers of the line detailed for the purpose. By section 4 of the act of April 30, 1790 (1 Stat. L., 119), the appointment of one Inspector was authorized for the establishment created by that enactment. The act of March 5, 1792 (ibid., 241), merged the duties of the Adjutant and Inspector-General's Departments and made provision for an Adjutant who was to do the duty of an Inspector; section 3 of the act of May 30, 1796 (ibid., 483), made similar provision for an Inspector who was to do the duty of an Adjutant. The acts of March 3, 1797 (ibid., 507), and May 22, 1798 (ibid., 557), authorized the detail of an officer of the line to perform the duties of Inspector-General. Section 6 of the act of May 28, 1798 (ibid., 588), passed in contemplation of war with France, authorized the appointment of an Inspector-General with the rank of major-general, and on July 18, 1798, Gen. Alexander Hamilton was appointed to the vacancy. The temporary military establishment thus authorized, which was never fully completed, was disbanded by the acts of February 20, 1800 (2 ibid., 7), and May 14, 1800 (ibid., 85) and the duties of the Department were again performed by detail until the office of Inspector was created by section 4 of the act of March 16, 1802 (ibid., 132); by section 3 of the act of April 12, 1808 (ibid., 481), two brigade inspectors were authorized to be detailed from the line with increased rank; by the act of December 24, 1811 (ibid., 669), the office of Inspector-General (brigadier-general) was created and two assistants (lieutenant-colonels) were authorized; the duties of the Department were defined in regulations approved by the Secretary of War on November 4, 1812. By the act of March 3, 1813 (ibid., 819), the Adjutant and Inspector-General's Departments were again merged. The act of March 3, 1815 (3 ibid., 224), fixing the peace establishment, made no express provision for these Departments, their duties being performed by officers temporarily detailed for the purpose. By section 10 of the act of April 24, 1816 (ibid., 297), however, the temporary establishment which had existed since 1815 was made permanent. Provision was also made for an Adjutant and Inspector-General of the Army, together with an inspector-general to each division and an assistant to each brigade, which were to be filled by detail of officers from the line. At the general reduction of 1821 the Inspector-General's Department was recognized and continued by section 6 of the act of March 2, 1821 (ibid., 615), its composition being fixed at two inspectors-general with the rank and pay of colonels of cavalry. By section 4 of the act of August 23, 1842 (5 ibid., 512), the Department was reduced to one officer; the disbanded officer was restored, however, by the act of June 12, 1846 (9 ibid., 2), and the composition of the Department, as thus established, underwent no change until the outbreak of the war of the rebellion.

By section 2 of the act of August 3, 1861 (12 ibid., 287), five majors were added to the Department; by section 4 of the act of August 6, 1861 (ibid., 318), two colonels were authorized; and provision for the inspection service of the armies in the field was made by section 10 of the act of July 17, 1862 (ibid., 299), which authorized the rank and pay of lieutenant-colonel of cavalry to be conferred upon the inspectors-general of Army corps. By section 11 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 334), the composition of the Department was fixed as follows: Four colonels, three lieutenant-colonels, and two majors. Section 6 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), contained the requirement that there should be no promotions or appointments in the staff until otherwise directed by law; by the acts of June 8, 1872 (17 ibid., 338), and June 16, 1874 (18 ibid., 77), promotions were authorized to correct inequalities in the rank of officers of the Department. By the act of June 23, 1874 (ibid., 244), the restriction contained in the act of March 3, 1869, was removed and the strength of the Department fixed at one Inspector-General with the rank of colonel, two inspectors-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and two inpectors-general with the rank of major; authority was also conferred for the detail of four officers from the line of the Army for service as assistant inspectors-general, who were to receive the mounted pay of their grades, and no appointments were to be made to the grade of major until the number of officers in the Department had been reduced to five. By the act of December 12, 1878 (20 ibid., 257), the rank of brigadier-general was conferred upon the senior inspector-general. By the act of February 5, 1885 (23 ibid., 297), the composition of the Department was fixed as follows: One Inspector-General (brigadier-general), two colonels, two lieutenant-colonels, and two majors. It was also provided that the Inspector-General should be selected from the officers of the corps, that promotions should be by seniority in the Department, and that appointments to the grade of major should be made from the captains in the line of the Army. By the act of July 7, 1898 (30 ibid., 720), one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, and one major were added to the Department under the conditions above set forth.

By section 14 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 751), the permanent strength of the Department was fixed at one Inspector-General with the rank of brigadier-general, four inspectors-general with the rank of colonel, four inspectors-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and eight inspectors-general with the rank of major. A system of details was also established, by the operation of which the permanent commissioned personnel of the Department will be gradually replaced, as vacancies occur, by officers detailed from the line of the Army for duty in the Inspector-General's Department.

The act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 899), modified the organization prescribed in the act of February 2, 1901, by the insertion of the requirement that, upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the grade of colonel, after the present lieutenant-colonels shall have been promoted or retired, the vacancy shall not be filled and thereafter the number of officers authorized for the Department shall be as follows: One Inspector-General with the rank of brigadier-general, three inspectors-general with the rank of colonel, four inspectors-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and nine inspectors-general with the rank of major.

Judge-Advocate-General is the custodian of the records of all general courts-martial, courts of inquiry, and military commissions, and of all papers relating to the title of lands under the control of the War Department, except the Washington Aqueduct and the public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia. The officers of this department render opinions upon legal questions when called upon by proper authority. Par. 991, A. R., 1901.

The original proceedings of all general courts-martial, courts of inquiry, and military commissions, with the decisions and orders of the reviewing authorities made thereon, and the proceedings of all general courts-martial, courts of inquiry, and military commissions which require the confirmation of the President, but which have not been appointed by him, will be forwarded direct to the Judge-Advocate-General. One copy of the order promulgating the action of the court and a copy of every subsequent order affecting the case will be forwarded to the Judge-Advocate-General, with the record of each case. When more than one case is embraced in a single order, a sufficient number of copies will be forwarded to enable one to be filed with each record. The proceedings of all courts and military commissions appointed by the President will be sent direct to the Secretary of War. Par. 993, A. R., 1901.

Applications of officers, enlisted men, and military prisoners for copies of proceedings of general courts-martial, to be furnished them under the one hundred and fourteenth article of war, will, when received by post or other commanders, be forwarded direct to the Judge-Advocate-General. Par. 995, A. R., 1910.

Communications relating to proceedings of military courts on file in the Judge-Advocate-General's Department will be addressed and forwarded direct by department commanders to the Judge-Advocate-General. In routine matters the Judge-Advocate-General and judge-advocates may correspond with each other direct. Par. 996, A. R., 1901.

The reports which the Judge-Advocate-General may render upon cases received by him, and which require the action of the President, will be addressed to the Secretary of War and will be forwarded, through the Commanding General of the Army, for such remarks and recommendations as he may see fit to make. Par. 997, A. R., 1901.

[1] But, see the act of June 1, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 153), which authorizes any officer of the Army to be so detailed. The act of June 27, 1881, contained a similar requirement.

HISTORICAL NOTE.—The office of Judge-Advocate of the Army was created during the war of the Revolution, having been established by resolution of Congress of July 25, 1775 (Journals of Cong.), soon after the enactment of the Articles of War on June 29 of the same year. In the reenactment of the Articles, in 1776, this officer was styled the Judge-Advocate-General of the Army and was empowered to prosecute in the name of the United States or to conduct such prosecutions by deputy. The office of Judge-Advocate ceased to exist at the disbandment of the Revolutionary armies, but was revived by section 2 of the act of March, 3, 1797 (1 Stat. L., 507), which made provision for a Judge-Advocate, to be taken from the commissioned officers of the line, who was to receive the same pay and allowances as the brigade major (adjutant) and inspector therein authorized. This office, with other offices in the general staff, was discontinued by the act of March 16, 1802 (2 ibid., 132). Section 19 of the act of 1812 (ibid., 674), passed in contemplation of war with England, made provision for one judge-advocate, with the rank of major, to each division, and this number was increased to three by section 2 of the act of April 24, 1816 (3 ibid., 397). At the reduction of 1818 these officers were disbanded (act of April 14, 1818, 3 ibid., 426), and the office of Judge-Advocate of the Army was discontinued by the act of March 2, 1821 (ibid., 615).

By section 4 of the act of March 3, 1849 (9 ibid., 351), the office of Judge-Advocate of the Army was reestablished, with the rank and pay of major of cavalry. By section 5 of the act of July 17, 1862 (12 ibid., 598), the office of Judge-Advocate-General was created, with the rank and pay of brigadier-general; by this enactment the duties of the office were defined. By section 5 of the same statute provision was made for a corps of judge-advocates, one of whom was to be assigned to duty at the headquarters of each army in the field. By section 5 of the act of June 20, 1864 (13 ibid., 145), the Bureau of Military Justice was established, to which the Judge-Advocate-General was transferred, and an Assistant Judge-Advocate-General, with the rank of colonel of cavalry, was authorized. By section 12 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 334), the composition of the department was fixed at one Judge-Advocate-General (brigadier-general), one Assistant Judge-Advocate-General (colonel), and ten judge-advocates were added to the military establishment, who were to be selected by the Secretary of War from the corps of judge-advocates authorized by the act of July 17, 1862. By this statute the office of Solicitor of the War Department was discontinued, the duties of the office being merged in the Bureau of Military Justice. By section 3 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 Stat. L., 318), all appointments and promotions in the several departments of the staff were prohibited until otherwise directed by law; but this restriction was removed, as to the Bureau of Military Justice, by the act of April 10, 1869 (16 ibid., 44), which fixed the number of judge-advocates at eight. By section 2 of the act of June 23, 1874 (18 ibid., 244), the office of Assistant Judge-Advocate-General was discontinued, and it was provided that there should be no appointments to the grade of major until the number of officers of that grade had been reduced to four. By the act of July 5, 1884 (23 ibid., 113), the Bureau of Military Justice and the corps of judge-advocates were consolidated and merged in the Judge-Advocate-General's Department, the composition of which was fixed as follows: One Judge-Advocate-General (brigadier-general), one Asssistant Judge-Advocate-General (colonel), three deputy judge-advocates-general (lieutenant-colonels), and three judge-advocates (majors). Promotion to the grade of colonel was to be by seniority, and provision was made for the detail of officers of the line as judge-advocates of military departments, who were to have, while so serving, the rank and pay of captains mounted.

By section 15 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 751), the permanent strength of the Department was fixed at one Judge-Advocate-General with the rank of brigadier-general, two judge-advocates with the rank of colonel, three judge-advocates with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and six judge-advocates with the rank of major. The system of details of officers of the grade of captain or first lieutenant to serve as acting judge-advocates, and, while so serving, to have the rank, pay, and allowances of captains mounted, as established by the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 113), was recognized and continued.

[1] For historical note see end of chapter.

[2] Section 16 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 752), contained the requirement that "the President is authorized to continue in the service, during the present emergency, for duty in the Philippine Islands and on transports, twenty-four captains and assistant quartermasters of volunteers." The same enactment provided that "all vacancies in the grade of colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major created or caused by this section shall be filled by promotion according to seniority as now prescribed by law." It also provided "that to fill original vacancies in the grade of captain created by this act in the Quartermaster's Department the President is authorized to appoint officers of volunteers commissioned in the Quartermaster's Department since April 21, 1898." See also a clause extending the scope of selection in such appointments in paragraph 578, ante.

707. That the Secretary of War is authorized to appoint, on the recommendation of the Quartermaster-General, as many post quartermaster-sergeants, not to exceed one hundred and fifty,[3] as he may deem necessary for the interests of the service, said sergeants to be selected by examination from the most competent enlisted men of the Army who have served at least four years, and whose character and education shall fit them to take charge of public property and to act as clerks and assistants to post and other quartermasters. Said post quartermaster-sergeants shall, so far as practicable, perform the duties of storekeepers and clerks, in lieu of citizen employees. The post quartermaster-sergeants shall be subject to the Rules and Articles of War and shall receive for their services the same pay and allowances as ordnance-sergeants.[1] *Acts of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. [2] The above statute replaces a similar restriction which was contained in section 2 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 339); the act of February 2, 1901, contained the same restriction. The office of storekeeper in the Quartermaster's Department, by the retirement of the last incumbent, has ceased to exist as a grade of rank on the active list.

[3] Twenty-five post quartermaster-sergeants added to the existing establishment by the act of July 8, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 728); forty added by section 16, act of February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 751).

DUTIES.

708. It shall be the duty of the officers of the Quartermaster's Department, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to purchase and distribute to the Army all military stores and supplies, requisite for its use, which other corps are not directed by law to provide; to furnish means of transportation for the Army, its military stores and supplies, and to provide for and pay all incidental expenses of the military service which other corps are not directed to provide for and pay.

[2] The acts of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 65), and March 2, 1897 (ibid. 613), contained a similar requirement. These clauses were suspended during the period of the existing war by the act of June 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 433). By the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1350), the act of June 7, 1898, was continued in operation "for such further time as in the discretion of the Secretary of War may be found necessary, or until otherwise provided by Congress, not longer, however, than March 1, 1900. By the act of February 24, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 32), the suspension was still further extended under the same conditions until June 30, 1901.

[1] The transportation of organized bodies, or detachments of troops under orders from competent authority directing travel to be performed, is regulated by the requirements of this section, as modified from time to time by the provisions of the annual acts of appropriation for the support of the Army. The allowance of sleeping-car accommodation to officers traveling with troops is regulated by the following requirements of General Orders No. 3, A. G. O., of 1899:

The following persons are entitled, at public expense, to a double berth in a sleeping car, or to the customary stateroom accommodations on steamers where extra charge is made for the same: Officers of the Army traveling on duty with troops; army nurses, civilian clerks and agents in the military service, when traveling under orders on public business; sergeant-majors, ordnance, commissary (post or regimental), quartermaster (post or regimental), and electrician sergeants, hospital stewards, chief musicians, chief trumpeters, principal musicians, and sergeants of the Signal Corps, when traveling under orders on public business without troops; also invalid soldiers, when so traveling on the certificate of a medical officer showing the necessity therefor.

When the number of officers traveling with troops is too small to justify the hire by the Quartermaster's Department of a standard sleeping car for their accommodation, they shall be furnished with such part of a tourist sleeping car, or other suitable sleeping car, properly curtained off for their accommodation, as the Quartermaster's Department may provide for their use during the journey.

REIMBURSEMENT OF CIVILIANS FOR TRAVELING EXPENSES.

The transportation of civilian employees and their reimbursement for traveling expenses are controlled by the following paragraphs of the Army Regulations of 1895:

TRAVELING EXPENSES.

For authorized journeys of civilian employees of any branch of the military service transportation requests will be obtained when practicable, but will be obtained in every case for travel over bond-aided railroads. Par. 813, A. R., 1901.

Reimbursement of actual expenses when traveling under competent orders will be allowed under the following heads, to civilians in the employ of any branch of the military service, excepting the expert accountant of the Inspector-General's Department, paymasters' clerks, and those mentioned in the next succeeding paragraph, viz:

1. Cost of transportation (excluding parlor-car fare) over the shortest usually traveled route, when it was impracticable to furnish transportation in kind on transportation requests.
2. Cost of transfers to and from railroad stations, not exceeding 50 cents for each transfer.
3. Cost of one double berth in a sleeping car, or customary state-room accommodation on boats and steamers when extra charge is made therefor.
4. Cost of meals, not exceeding $3 per day, while en route, when meals are not included in the transportation fare paid; and not exceeding $3 per day for meals and lodgings during necessary delay en route.
5. Cost of meals and lodgings, not exceeding $3 per day, while on duty at places designated in the orders for the performance of temporary duty. Par. 814, ibid.

Veterinary surgeons of cavalry regiments traveling under proper orders, in accordance with paragraph 185, are not entitled to reimbursement under the fifth heading above given. Par. 730, A. R. 1895.

Laborers, teamsters, and employees of similar character, traveling under competent orders, will be entitled to such actual and necessary expenses of travel and subsistence as may be authorized by the chief of bureau which pays the accounts. Those in receipt of a ration under paragraph 1252 will not be allowed commutation therefor. If it be impracticable for them to carry rations in kind, rations will not be drawn for the period during which they are traveling. Par. 815, A. R. 1901.

None but the authorized items of traveling expenses of civilians will be allowed. They will in all cases be set forth in detail in each voucher for reimbursement supported by oath and, when practicable, by receipts. Par. 816, ibid.

Paymasters' clerks and the expert accountant of the Inspector-General's Department, when traveling on duty, will, when transportation in kind can not be furnished by the Quartermaster's Department, be reimbursed for cost of transportation paid by them, exclusive of parlor or sleeping car fares or transfers, and will receive in addition thereto, for all travel whether or not on transportation requests, 4 cents per mile for each mile necessarily traveled by them in the performance of duty—distance to be computed over the shortest usually traveled route. Par. 818, ibid.

Actual traveling expenses, as contemplated in the preceding paragraphs, are paid by the following departments, viz:

Pay Department.—To paymasters' clerks, the expert accountant of the Inspector-General's Department, civilians summoned as witnesses before, and authorized reporters of, military courts.

Ordnance Department.—To employees at arsenals and armories (cost of transportation included) from appropriations for the service of the Ordnance Department.

Engineer Department.—To employees on public works and fortifications (cost of transportation included) from appropriations made specifically for the work.

Quartermaster's Department.—To employees of the Quartermaster's and Subsistence and the transportation so furnished shall be a charge against the officers' mileage account, to be deducted at the rate of three cents per mile by the paymaster paying the account, the amount so deducted to be turned over to the authorized officer of the Quartermaster's Department for the credit of the appropriation for transportation of the Departments, and other employees of the Army not above provided for. Par. 819, ibid. This department also furnishes transportation to maimed soldiers, etc., to enable them to procure artificial limbs (see paragraphs 948 and 949, post), and to soldiers who have been admitted to the Soldiers' Home.

When officers of the staff departments change station the transfer of clerks or other employees to the new stations at the expense of the United States is prohibited, except in cases of urgent necessity, for which the sanction of the Secretary of War will first be obtained. The Pay Department is excepted from this regulation. Par. 820, ibid.

The appropriation for the transportation of the Army is not applicable to the permanent repair of a public highway under the jurisdiction of a State. V Compt. Dec., 673.

TRANSPORTATION OF BAGGAGE.

In changing station an officer's authorized allowance of baggage (a) will be turned over to a quartermaster for transportation as freight by ordinary freight lines, unless otherwise ordered by the department commander or higher authority. No reimbursement will be made to an officer who under such circumstances sends packages by express or ships and pays for the transportation of his baggage. Par. 1118, A. R., 1895.

The baggage to be transported at public expense, including mess chests and personal baggage, upon change of station, will not exceed the following weights:

Rank.	In the field.	Changing station.
	Pounds.	Pounds.
Major-general	1,000	3,500
Brigadier-general	700	2,800
Field officer	500	2,400
Captain	200	2,000
First lieutenant	150	1,700
Second lieutenant and veterinarian	150	1,500
Acting assistant surgeon	150	1,200
Post and regimental noncommissioned staff officer, hospital steward, chief musician, sergeant of the Signal Corps, squadron and battalion sergeant-majors, each	....	500

These allowances are in excess of the weights transported free of charge under the regular fares by public carriers. They may be reduced pro rata by the commanding officer, if necessary, and may, in special cases, be increased by the War Department on transports by water. Shipments of officers' allowance of baggage will in all cases be made at carrier's risk, including those over roads where tariffs provide for extra charge therefor. Par. 1242, A. R. 1901.

The Quartermaster's Department will transport the authorized change of station allowance of baggage and professional books and papers for officers or enlisted men upon retirement, or who die in the service, from their last duty stations to such places within the limits of the United States as may be the homes of their families, or as may be designated by their legal representatives or executors. Par. 1243, ibid.

Transportation of change of station allowance of baggage is authorized for such contract surgeons as may be employed, when they join for duty under the first order, and also on return to their homes on the termination of their contracts, if provided for in the contracts. Graduates of the Military Academy and officers promoted from the ranks will be furnished with transportation for field allowance of baggage on their first assignment to duty as commissioned officers. With these exceptions, transportation of baggage at public expense is not authorized for officers joining for duty on first appointment to military service, nor upon reinstatement or reappointment, nor to effect transfers from one company or regiment to another at the request of parties transferred. Officers ordered on temporary duty and officers going abroad as military attachés (a) are not entitled to such transportation. An officer detailed as attaché, however, is entitled to have his full allowance transported from the post he leaves to his home, or to the nearest convenient place of storage, and upon resuming duty in this country from such place of storage to his post of duty. While on journeys as an attaché the cost of transporting his personal baggage can not be paid by the Quartermaster's Department. (b) Par. 1121, A. R., 1895.

The Quartermaster's Department will furnish transportation for the prescribed regimental and company desks, for the books, papers, and instruments of staff officers necessary to the performance of their duties, and for the medical chests of medical officers; also for the professional books of officers changing station, officers ordered home for retirement, graduates of the Military Academy, and officers joining on first appointment, which they certify belong to them and pertain to their official duties; also the professional books of hospital stewards changing station, not exceeding two hundred pounds in weight. Invoices of packages turned over to the shipping officer will be accompanied by the certificate of the officer as to character of books, and a certified copy will be attached to the bill of lading issued at the initial point of shipment. The certificate as to the character of the books of a hospital steward will be given by the medical officer under whom he last served. Par. 1245, A. R., 1901.

The Quartermaster's Department will transport, for officers changing station, the number of horses for which they are legally entitled to forage, and an attendant to accompany the horses when necessary, subject to the following restrictions:

(1) That the expense paid by the United States shall not exceed $50 for each horse transported. The cost of such shipment will be ascertained in advance, and if found to exceed $50 for each horse, including transportation of attendant, if any, the excess must be prepaid by the owner, who must also pay all the expenses of the attendant other than his transportation.

(2) That the horses are owned by the officer and were used by him in the public service at the station from which he is ordered to move.

(3) The horses of retired officers or officers ordered to their homes to await retirement, or officers ordered on recruiting service or college detail, or to attend schools of instruction as student officers, or to effect a voluntary transfer, will not be transported at public expense. Par. 1069, A. R., 1895.

The Quartermaster's Department may provide transportation of baggage for enlisted men traveling under orders without troops, not to exceed the following weights:

Noncommissioned officers	pounds	100
Privates of the Hospital Corps	do	100
Other privates	do	50

This allowance will accompany each man on the conveyance by which he is transported, and will include the number of pounds of baggage carried free on the passage ticket. Par. 1224, A. R., 1901.

Deduction from mileage.
Ibid.

723. When transportation is furnished by the Quartermaster's Department, or when the established route of travel is over any of the railroads above specified, there shall be deducted from the officers' mileage account, by the paymaster paying the same, three cents per mile for the distance for which transportation has been or should have been furnished.[1] Ibid.

724. Payment and settlement of mileage accounts of officers shall be made according to distances computed over routes established, and by mileage tables prepared by the Paymaster-General of the Army under the direction of the Secretary of War. Ibid.

TRANSPORTATION BY LAND-GRANT AND BOND-AIDED RAILROADS.

Payment of land-grant roads, etc.
Mar. 2, 1901, v. p. 31, 907.

725. For the payment of army transportations lawfully due such land-grant railroads as have not received aid in Government bonds (to be adjusted in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court in cases decided under such land-grant acts), but in no case shall more than fifty per centum of full amount of service be paid: Provided, That such compensation shall be computed upon the basis of the tariff or lower special rates for like transportation performed for the public at large, and shall be accepted as in full for all demands for such service: Provided further, That in expending the money appropriated by this act, a railroad company which has not received aid in bonds of the United States, and which obtained a grant of public land to aid in the construction of its railroad on condition that such railroad should be a post route and military road, subject to the use of the United States for postal, military, naval, and other Government services, and also subject to such regulations as Congress may impose restricting the charge for such Government transportation, having claims against the United States for transportation of troops and munitions of war and military supplies and property over such aided railroads, shall be paid out of the moneys appropriated by the foregoing provision only on the basis of such rate for the transportation of such troops and munitions of war and military supplies and property as the Secretary of War shall deem just and reasonable under the foregoing provision, such rate not to exceed fifty per centum of the compensation for such Government transportation as shall at the time be charged to and paid by private parties to any such company for like and similar transportation; and the amount so fixed to be paid shall be accepted as in full for all demands for such service, * * * dollars.[1] *Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. [2] This enactment replaces the requirement of the act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 629), which restricted expenditures on artillery posts for seacoast defense to $60,000 for a one-battery post and $20,000 additional for each additional battery.

Quarters in kind to be furnished to officers.
Sec. 9, June 17, 1878, v. 20, p. 144.

738. At all posts and stations where there are public quarters belonging to the United States, officers may be furnished with quarters in kind in such public quarters, and not elsewhere, by the Quartermaster's Department, assigning to the officers of each grade, respectively, such number of rooms[2] as is now allowed to such grade by the rules and regulations of the Army.[3] Sec. 9, act of June 17, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 144).

FUEL AND FORAGE.

Allowance of fuel and forage. Sec. 8, June 17, 1878, v. 20, p. 150.

740. Allowance of or commutation for fuel to commissioned officers is hereby prohibited; but fuel may be furnished to the officers of the Army by the Quartermaster's Department, for the actual use of such officers only, at the rate of three dollars per cord for standard oak wood, or at an equivalent rate for other kinds of fuel, according to the regulations now in existence; and forage in kind may be furnished to the officers of the Army by the Quartermaster's Department, only for horses owned and actually kept by such officers in the performance of their official military duties when on duty with troops in the field or at such military posts west of the Mississippi River, as may be from time to time designated by the Secretary of War, and not otherwise as follows:

To the General, five horses;
To the Lieutenant-General, four horses;
To a major-general, three horses;
To a brigadier-general, three horses;
To a colonel, two horses;
To a lieutenant-colonel, two horses;
To a major, two horses;
To a captain (mounted), two horses;
To a lieutenant (mounted), two horses;
To an adjutant, two horses;
To a regimental quartermaster, two horses.[1] Sec. 8, act of June 17, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 150).

No discrimination to officers serving east of Mississippi River. Feb. 24, 1881, v. 21, p. 347.

741. There shall be no discrimination in the issue of forage against officers serving east of the Mississippi River, provided they are required by law to be mounted, and actually keep and own their animals. Act of February 24, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 347).

[1] This statute, which replaces section 1271, Revised Statutes, contains the added condition that horses shall not only be "actually kept" but "owned" by officers in the performance of their military duties.

The right conferred upon officers of the Army by the act of June 18, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 150), to purchase fuel for their actual use only, in the manner and at the terms prescribed by said act, pertains to all officers of the Army, irrespective of the nature of the duties upon which they are engaged. No part of the cost of fuel so sold is properly chargeable to the appropriation for any public work, unless provision is expressly made therein for such cost. 3 Dig. 2d Compt. Dec., par. 655. For allowances of fuel as established by regulation, see table in note 5 to par. 738, ante.

The forage ration for a horse is 14 pounds of hay and 12 pounds of oats, corn, or barley; for a mule, 14 pounds of hay and 9 pounds of oats, corn, or barley. Department commanders will reduce the forage ration when necessary. Par. 1154, A. R., 1901.

One hundred pounds of straw per month is allowed for bedding to each horse or mule in public service. At posts where straw is not furnished, hay will be issued and used for bedding. Par. 1162, ibid.

Forage is furnished only to officers for the horses owned and actually kept by them in the performance of their official duties when serving with troops in the field or at military posts and stations and for the following number: To a lieutenant-general, four, to a major-general or a brigadier-general, three; to a colonel, lieutenant-colonel, major, captain, or lieutenant, mounted, and regimental adjutant and quartermaster, each two. Par. 1157, ibid.

Mounted officers will not use public horses and at the same time draw forage for those they own; nor will they use public animals except as authorized by regulations. Should circumstances render it necessary, an officer may be temporarily furnished public horses, but during such period he will not be permitted to draw forage for a private horse. Par. 1158, ibid.

An officer not mounted may purchase forage for two horses kept for his own use, for which he will be charged cost, including transportation. The sale of forage to mounted officers is forbidden. Par. 1159, ibid.

For a case, in which certain officers of the Army were ordered by the Secretary of War to make restitution to the United States of certain sums of money representing quantities of fuel which had been consumed by them without being paid for as required by law, see Gen. Court-martial Orders No. 85, War Dept., of 1882.

[1] WORKING PARTIES—EXTRA AND SPECIAL DUTY MEN.

Troops will not be employed in labors that interfere with their military duties except in cases of necessity. Par. 181, A. R., 1901.

Enlisted men detailed to perform specific services which remove them temporarily from the ordinary duty roster of the organization to which they belong will be reported on extra duty if receiving increased compensation therefor, otherwise, on special duty. They will not be placed on extra duty, except as bakers or to perform the necessary routine services in the Quartermaster's and Subsistence Departments, without the sanction of the department commander, nor will they be employed on extra duty for labor in camp or garrison which can be properly performed by fatigue parties. Allotments of funds for the payment of extra-duty men at department headquarters and depots under the control of department commanders will be made only with the approval of the Secretary of War. Duty of a military character must be performed without extra compensation. Par. 164, A. R., 1895.

The provisions of section 6 of the act approved April 26, 1898, abolishing extra-duty pay in time of war, applies to enlisted men in every department of the Army, and, as war existed when the act was passed, enlisted men ceased to be entitled to extra-duty pay upon the date of its approval. Circular 15, A. G. O., 1898. See, also, G. O. 77, A. G. O., 1898.

The detail of a noncommissioned officer on extra duty other than that of overseer will not be made without the approval of the Secretary of War. A noncommissioned officer will not be detailed on any duty inconsistent with his rank and position in the military service. Par. 166, A. R., 1895.

Company artificers, farriers, blacksmiths, saddlers, and wagoners will not receive extra-duty pay unless detailed on extra duty in the Quartermaster's Department, wholly disconnected from their companies. Par. 186, A. R., 1901.

Soldiers on extra duty will be paid the extra rates of pay allowed by law for the Details to be in writing. July 13, 1866, c. 176, s. 7, v. 14, p. 93. Sec. 1235, R. S.

743. Working parties of soldiers shall be detailed for employment as artificers or laborers, in the construction of permanent military works or public roads, or in other constant labor only upon the written order of a commanding officer, when such detail is for ten or more days.

Details in the field; how made. Mar. 3, 1863, c. 75, s. 35, v. 12, p. 736. Sec. 1236, R. S.

744. Details to special service from forces in the field shall be made only with the consent of the commanding officer of the forces.

Rates of extra-duty pay. July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 110.

745. Extra-duty pay hereafter shall be at the rate of fifty cents per day for mechanics, artisans, school-teachers, and clerks at Army, division, and department headquarters, and thirty-five cents per day for other clerks, teamsters, laborers, and others.[1] Act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 110.)

Limitation in time of war. S. 6, Apr. 26, 1898, v. 30, p. 365.

746. In war time no additional increased compensation shall be allowed to soldiers performing what is known as extra or special duty. Sec. 6, act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 365).

The same. May 26, 1900, v. 31, p. 211.

747. Enlisted men receiving or entitled to the twenty per centum increased pay herein authorized shall not be entitled to or receive any additional increased compensation for what is known as extra or special duty. Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat L., 211).

duty performed and for the exact number of days employed; and no greater number of men will be emyloyed on extra duty at any time than can be paid the full legal rates for the time employed from the funds provided. Payments made in violation of the above rules will be charged against the officers who ordered the details. Par. 187, ibid.

Extra-duty men will be held to such hours of labor as may be expedient and necessary; but, except in case of urgent public necessity, as in military operations, eight hours will be considered a day's work. For all hours employed beyond that number the soldier will receive additional compensation—the extra hours being computed as fractions of a day of eight hours' duration. Par. 189, ibid.

Details of enlisted men for extra and special duty will be limited to actual necessities, which will be determined by post commanders in accordance with limits published in orders from the War Department. Allotments to posts of funds for extra-duty pay are made by department commanders from allotments made to departments for the purpose, and must not be exceeded without special authority from department commanders. Par. 190, ibid.

[1] Enlisted men of the several staff departments are not entitled to extra-duty pay for services rendered in the department to which they belong. To entitle them to such compensation they must be detailed by competent orders and must have performed duty in another department than that in which they are enlisted. Under existing orders enlisted men of the Ordnance Department are entitled to extra-duty pay when performing duty in the Quartermaster's Department. Circular II, A. G. O., 1886; I, ibid, 1887, and par. 185, A. R., 1901.

Clerical services at Army, division, and department headquarters have, since the act of July 29, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 167), been performed by a corps of general-service clerks and messengers. By the act of August 6, 1894, this force ceased to exist as a part of the enlisted strength of the Army.

The act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 323), and prior acts of appropriation fix the sum that may be expended for the pay of extra-duty men at $200,000 per annum; they also contain the requirement that "no payment of extra-duty pay shall be made at any greater rate per day than is fixed by law for the class of persons employed and the work done therein."

CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES.

Restriction on employment.
Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 906.

748. The number of and total sum paid for civilian employees in the Quartermaster's Department, including those paid from the funds appropriated for regular supplies, incidental expenses, barracks and quarters, army transportation, clothing, camp and garrison equipage, shall be limited to the actual requirements of the service, and no employee paid therefrom shall receive a salary of more than one hundred and fifty dollars per month, except upon the approval of the Secretary of War.[1] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 906).

Sec. 1298, R. S.

750. The Secretary of War may, on the recommendation of the Surgeon-General, order gratuitous issues of clothing to soldiers who have had contagious diseases, and to hospital attendants who have nursed them, to replace any articles of their clothing destroyed by order of the proper medical officers to prevent contagion.[2]

[1] The act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 359), restricted the number of civilian employees in this Department to 1,000; the act of February 12, 1895 (28 ibid., 661), restricted the payments for the services of civilian employees to $1,000,000, and provided that no employee should receive as salary more than $150 per month without the specific authority of law.

The amount to be expended for the payment of civilian employees was fixed at $1,600,000 by the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 459); at $1,500,000 by the acts of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 111), March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 360), and June 30, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 98); at $1,300,000 by the acts of February 9, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 399), September 22, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 486), March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 830), June 13, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 154), and February 24, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 776); at $1,200,000 by the acts of July 16, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 180), and February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 484); at $1,100,000 by the act of August 6, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 240), and at $1,000,000 by the acts of February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 661), March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 66), March 2, 1897 (ibid., 614), and March 15, 1898 (30 ibid., 323); by the acts of June 7, 1898, (30 ibid., 433), March 3, 1899 (ibid., 1350), and February 24, 1900 (31 ibid., 32), the restrictions imposed in the statutes above referred to were suspended, in the discretion of the Secretary of War or subject to the further order of Congress, until June 30, 1901.

[2] GRATUITOUS ISSUES.

Gratuitous issues of clothing may be made, under the provisions of section 1298, Revised Statutes, to replace articles destroyed to prevent the spread of contagious diseases. Par. 1319, A. R., 1901.

Should it become necessary to issue new clothing for use in the burial of a deceased

ACCOUNTABILITY FOR CLOTHING.

Returns of clothing and equipage.
May 18, 1826, c. 74, s. 2, v. 4, p. 174; Feb. 27, 1877, v. 69, p. 243; Mar. 29, 1894, v. 28, p. 47.
Sec. 1221, R. S.

751. Every officer who receives clothing or camp equipage for the use of his command, or for issue to the troops, shall render to the Quartermaster-General, at the expiration of each regular quarter of the year, quarterly returns of such supplies, according to the forms which may be prescribed, accompanied by the requisite vouchers for any issues which shall have been made.[1]

Clothing allowances.
Apr. 24, 1816, c. 69, ss. 7, 8, v. 4, p. 298; May 15, 1872, c. 161, s. 3, v. 17, p. 117.
Sec. 1302, R. S.

752. The money value of all clothing overdrawn by the soldier beyond his allowance shall be charged against him, every six months, on the muster roll of his company, or on his final statements if sooner discharged, and he shall receive pay for such articles of clothing as have not been issued to him in any year, or which may be due to him at the time of his discharge, according to the annual estimated value thereof. The amount due him for clothing, when he draws less than his allowance, shall not be paid to him until his final discharge from the service.[1] soldier, as in the case of a man who dies away from his proper command and under circumstances rendering such issues imperatively necessary, the expense of the issue will be borne by the United States, and the clothing will be dropped from the returns of the issuing officer on the orders of the commanding officer, which must recite the necessity for the issue. Par. 1320, ibid.

Where the clothing of certain enlisted men of volunteers was destroyed near Santiago, Cuba, in 1898, by order of the proper military authority, on account of having been exposed to contagion, and replaced by new clothing which was charged to the enlisted men receiving it on their clothing accounts, it was decided by the Comptroller of the Treasury, November 28, 1900, that the issue was proper under the circumstances of the case, and that the charges therefor in the clothing accounts were erroneous and should be canceled. Circular No. 51, A. G. O., 1900.

[1] A table showing the price of clothing and equipage for the Army, the allowance of clothing in kind to each soldier for each year of his enlistment, and his clothing money allowance for each year and day thereof, also the allowance of equipage to officers and enlisted men, will be published in orders. Par. 1286, A. R., 1901.

Each soldier's clothing account will be kept by the company or detachment commander in the company clothing book. The account will show the money value of the clothing received by the soldier at each issue, and his receipt therefor will be taken in the book. Par. 1303, ibid.

Company and detachment commanders will settle the clothing account of every enlisted man of their respective commands six months after the date of his enlistment, and thereafter on June 30 and December 31 of each year. The entire amount found due the United States for the periods embracing the dates of settlement will be charged to the soldier upon the pay rolls. The money allowance of clothing for the first year will be allotted by half years. Par. 1304, ibid.

The balance due the soldier at either of these dates will be credited to him upon the company clothing book. It will not be placed upon the pay rolls, but the final balance due at date of discharge will be entered upon his final statements. In case of transfer the balance due the soldier or the United States will be entered on the descriptive list. All balances of this character will be stated in words and figures. Par. 1305, ibid.

The clothing account of a soldier who deserts should be settled in full to the date of desertion. The balance due him or the United States will be entered on the next pay rolls after date of desertion. The amount due the United States or the soldier at date of desertion should be ascertained by crediting the soldier with clothing allowance from date of last clothing settlement to the date of desertion (excluding the day of desertion) and debiting him with the money value of all cloth-

753. The amounts of deposits and clothing balances accumulating to the soldier's credit under sections thirteen hundred and two and thirteen hundred and five shall, when payable to him upon his discharge, be paid out of the appropriations for "pay of the Army" for the then current fiscal year. ing drawn by him; the difference between the two amounts will be the amount due the United States or the soldier. Par. 1306, ibid.

A deserter is entitled to clothing allowance from the date he surrenders or is apprehended, and the amount due him will be computed from the tables then and subsequently in force. A new clothing account will be opened without reference to his account at date of desertion. Par. 1307, ibid.

Clothing allowance accruing to a soldier after return to the service from desertion will not be used to reduce the amount of the soldier's indebtedness at date of desertion; the full amount of the soldier's indebtedness must be charged on the roll, to be deducted by the paymaster when he settles the soldier's account. Par. 1309, ibid.

Section 1297, Revised Statutes, forbidding the allowance of clothing to ordnance-sergeants, was repealed by the act of July 14, 1892. 27 Stat. L., 578.

Limit of cost. Mar. 2, 1889, v. 25, 831.

759. Hereafter the regimental price fixed for altering and fitting soldiers' clothing shall not exceed the cost of making the same at the clothing depots.[1] Act of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 831).

Historical note.—The office of Quartermaster-General was created during the war of the Revolution by a resolution of Congress of June 16, 1775; by a subsequent resolution dated July 19, 1775, the appointment to the vacancy was vested in General Washington, and by a resolution of December 22, 1775, the rank of colonel was attached to the office. The appointment was conferred upon Thomas Mifflin, of Pennsylvania, who continued to exercise its functions until August 5, 1780, save for the period between June 5 and October 1, 1776, when the office was held by Col. Thomas Moylan. Upon the resignation of General Mifflin he was succeeded by Gen. Nathaniel Greene, who was appointed to another command on August 5, 1780, and was succeeded by Col. Timothy Pickering, who continued to perform the duties of the office until the close of the war. On July 25, 1785, the office expired by statutory limitation. After the close of active military operations in 1781 the practice of supplying the troops by a system of contracts which had been resorted to during the war, and had been approved by a resolution of Congress dated October 2, 1778, was resumed and continued to exist until its failure as an efficient method of supply was demonstrated during the war of 1812.

The office of quartermaster was established by sections 5 and 6 of the act of March 3, 1791 (1 Stat. L., 222); the incumbent of this office was designated as Quartermaster-General, and the rank of lieutenant-colonel was conferred by sections 10 and 11 of the act of March 3, 1795 (ibid., 431), and the office as thus established was continued in the acts to ascertain and fix the military establishment, approved May 30, 1796 (ibid., 483), and March 3, 1797 (ibid., 507). The provisional establishment authorized in contemplation of war with France by the acts of May 28, 1798 (ibid., 558), and March 3, 1799 (ibid., 740), made provision for a Quartermaster-General, with the rank of major-general, with deputy quartermasters-general for armies and quarter masters for divisions, who were to be selected from the line. Operations looking to an increase of the Army were suspended by the acts of February 20, 1800 (2 Stat. L., 7), and May 14, 1800 (ibid., 85). The duties hitherto performed by the Quartermaster's Department were, by section 3 of the act of March 16, 1802 (ibid., 133), devolved upon the Paymaster-General, and upon the military agents and assistant military agents authorized by that enactment, and this arrangement continued until the establishment of the Quartermaster's Department in 1808.

The procurement of supplies for the military establishment during the period immediately following the organization of the Government under the Constitution was regulated by section 5 of the act of May 8, 1792 (1 Stat. L., 280), which contained the requirement that "all purchases and contracts for supplying the Army with provisions, clothing, supplies in the Quartermaster's Department, military stores, Indian goods, and all other supplies or articles for the use of the Department of War be made by or under the direction of the Treasury Department." The office of purveyor of public supplies in the Treasury Department was created by the act of February 23, 1795 (ibid., 419), and this officer was to perform the duties, in connection with contracts and purchases, which had been prescribed in the act of May 8, 1792. The power to make purchases for the military establishment, by contract or otherwise, was vested in the Secretary of War by section 3 of the act of July 16, 1798

[1] LAUNDRY WORK FOR RECRUITS AT DEPOTS.

The Quartermaster's Department is authorized to pay from the appropriation for clothing and equipage a sum not exceeding $1.50 for the laundry work of each recruit at rendezvous and stations who has no funds of his own. The expenditure will be charged on the clothing account of the recruit and so noted on his descriptive and assignment card. Par. 1316, A. R., 1901.

(ibid., 610); and by section 6 of the same enactment, the corresponding power was withdrawn from the purveyor of public supplies, the purpose of the statute being to vest the power of purchase in the Secretary of War and that of auditing the vouchers of purchase in the accounting officers of the Treasury. By the act of March 3, 1809 (2 ibid., 535), a method of making purchases and of accounting for the same was prescribed by statute.

The Quartermaster's Department, eo nomine, was established by the act of March 28, 1812 (2 Stat. L., 690), and consisted of a Quartermaster-General with the rank of brigadier-general, four deputy quartermasters, and as many assistant deputy quartermasters as, in the opinion of the President, the public service might require; in section 3 the duties of the department were defined. A commissary-general of purchases was also authorized, and a purchasing department was established, to consist of a commissary-general of purchases, a deputy for each division, six assistant commissaries of issues, and as many military storekeepers as the service might require. The duties of the purchasing department, which were to some extent in conflict with those prescribed for the Quartermaster's Department, appear to have been restricted to the procurement of subsistence stores and supplies, leaving the purchase of forage, the provision of transportation, etc., to the Quartermaster-General. The act of April 23, 1812 (ibid., 710), established a corps of artificers as a component part of the Quartermaster's Department; and by the act of May 22, 1812 (ibid., 742), a force of barrack masters was authorized, and officers of the department were required to give bond for the faithful expenditure of public moneys and accounting for all public property which might come into their hands. The office of superintendent-general of military supplies was created by the act of March 3, 1813 (ibid., 816), and charged with the duty of supervising the rendition and audit of accounts and returns from officers in the military service; this office was abolished by the act of March 3, 1817 (3 ibid., 366), the duties of audit being transferred to the accounting officers of the Treasury.

In the reorganization of the staff, which was accomplished by the act of April 24, 1816 (3 Stat. L., 297), the services of the Quartermaster-General were retained and a deputy quartermaster-general was authorized for each division and an assistant for each brigade, who were to supersede the existing quartermasters of brigades. By section 3 of the act of April 14, 1818 (ibid., 426), the department was to consist of a Quartermaster-General (brigadier-general), four assistant deputy quartermasters-general, and as many additional assistants as the President might deem proper. At the general reduction of 1821 the strength of the department was fixed at a Quartermaster-General (brigadier-general), two quartermasters (majors of cavalry), and ten assistant quartermasters, to be detailed from the line with $10 per month additional compensation. By section 4 of the act of May 18, 1826 (4 ibid., 173), two quartermasters and ten assistants were added, who were also to be taken from the line. This statute imposed upon the department the duty of distributing (but not purchasing) the clothing, camp and garrison equipage required for the use of the troops. By section 9 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 ibid., 256), two assistant quartermasters-general (lieutenant-colonels), and eight assistant quartermasters (captains) were added, and officers already in the department were placed on the same footing in respect to rank, pay, and emoluments (that of officers of dragoons of corresponding rank) as those therein authorized; forage and wagon masters, not to exceed twenty in all, were also authorized. The office of commissary-general of purchases was abolished by section 3, act of August 23, 1842 (5 ibid., 512), and its duties were merged in those required to be performed by the Quartermaster's Department.

At the outbreak of the war with Mexico provision was made for the expansion of the department in section 5, act of June 18, 1846 (9 Stat. L., 17), by the appointment of a quartermaster (major) for each brigade and an assistant quartermaster (captain) for each regiment. By section 10, act of February 11, 1847 (ibid., 126), four quartermasters and ten assistant quartermasters were added to the department; by section 10, act of July 19, 1848 (ibid., 247), so much of the act of February 11, 1847, as required the discharge of the additional officers therein authorized was repealed. Five military storekeepers were added by the act of March 3, 1857 (11 ibid., 200).

For the volunteer forces called into the service at the commencement of the war of the rebellion, brigade quartermasters (captains) were authorized for each brigade, and the permanent force of the department was increased by the addition of one colonel, two lieutenant-colonels, four majors, and twenty captains by section 3 of the act of August 3, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 287); captains after fourteen years' service were to be advanced to the grade of major, and wagon masters and teamsters were authorized with the pay and allowances of sergeants and corporals, respectively. The number of military storekeepers was increased to twelve by section 8 of the act of 1862 (ibid., 509). The office of the Quartermaster-General was reorganized into eight divisions, and six inspectors and ten chief quartermasters of armies and departments (colonels) and division quartermasters with the rank of major were authorized for the period of the war.

At the general reorganization of 1866, the strength of the department was increased to the following: One Quartermaster-General (brigadier-general), six assistant quartermasters-general (colonels), ten deputy quartermasters-general (lieutenant-colonels), fifteen quartermasters (majors), and forty-four assistant quartermasters (captains), section 13, act of July 28, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 334). The vacancies created by the act were to be filled by the appointment of persons who had served in the Quartermaster's Department during the war of the rebellion; so soon as the vacancies created by the act had been once filled, however, there were to be no appointments or promotions to the grades of captain and major until the number of officers in those grades had been reduced to twelve and thirty respectively. Promotions and appointments were prohibited until the further order of Congress by section 6, act of March 3, 1869 (15 Stat. L., 318, sec. 1194, R. S.), but this prohibition was removed by the act of March 3, 1875 (18 ibid., 330), which provided the following permanent organization for the department: One Quartermaster-General (brigadier-general), four assistant quartermasters-general (colonels), eight deputy quartermasters-general (lieutenant-colonels), fourteen quartermasters (majors), and thirty assistant quartermasters (captains); no more military storekeepers were to be appointed, and the office was eventually to cease to exist upon the death or retirement of the storekeepers then in service. Appointments to the grade of captain from civil life were authorized, in the discretion of the President, by the act of March 3, 1883 (22 ibid., 456), but this requirement was repealed by the act of August 6, 1894 (28 ibid., 234), which restricted such appointments to officers of the next lower grade in the line of the Army. The corps of quartermaster-sergeants was added by the act of July 5, 1884 (23 ibid., 107), and the corps of army service men was attached to the department by the act of June 20, 1890 (26 ibid., 163). At the outbreak of the war with Spain the Secretary of War was authorized, by the act of July 7, 1898 (30 ibid., 714), to assign four officers of the department to duty as inspectors, and these officers, together with the four principal assistants in the office of the Quartermaster-General, the heads of the divisions in the same office, and the officers in charge of the principal depots, not exceeding twelve in number, were to have, during such assignment, the rank and pay one grade higher than that actually held by them in the regular or volunteer service; such increase in rank, however, was in no case to exceed that of colonel, and was to continue for a period not exceeding one year after the close of the war. Two colonels, two lieutenant-colonels, three majors, and twenty captains were added to the volunteer force of the department for the period of the existing war. The corps of post quartermaster-sergeants was increased to a total strength of one hundred and five by the act of July 8, 1898 (ibid., 728).

By section 16 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L. 751), the permanent strength of the department was fixed at one Quartermaster-General with the rank of brigadier-general, six assistant quartermasters-general with the rank of colonel, nine deputy quartermasters-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, twenty quartermasters with the rank of major, and sixty quartermasters with the rank of captain mounted. A system of details was also established by the operation of which the permanent commissioned personnel of the department will be gradually replaced, as vacancies occur, by officers detailed from the line of the Army for duty in the Quartermaster's Department.

ORGANIZATION.

758. The Subsistence Department shall consist of one Commissary-General of Subsistence with the rank of brigadier-general, three assistant commissaries-general with the rank of colonel, four deputy commissaries-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, nine commissaries with the rank of major, twenty-seven commissaries with the rank of captain, mounted, the number of commissary-sergeants now authorized by law, who shall hereafter be known as post commissary-sergeants.[2] Sec. 17, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 752).

[1] For note containing the statutory history of the Subsistence Department see end of chapter.

[2] Section 17 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 752), contained the requirement that "all vacancies in the grades of colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major, created or caused by this act, shall be filled by promotion, according to seniority, as now prescribed by law;" the same enactment also contained the proviso that "to fill vacancies in the grade of captain created by this act, the President is authorized to appoint officers of volunteers commissioned in the Subsistence Department since April 21, 1898." See also the act of March 2, 1901, paragraph 578, ante.

Section 2 of the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 715), authorized the Subsistence Department of the volunteer service to be increased "during the present war, and not to exceed one year thereafter, eight majors and twelve captains for the discharge of such subsistence duties as may be assigned to them by the Secretary of War, to be nominated and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to be appointed by the President."

The same statute contained the requirement that "during the existence of the present war, and for not exceeding one year thereafter, every commissary of subsistence, of whatever rank, who shall be assigned to the duty of purchasing and shipping subsistence supplies at important depots, shall have the rank next above that held by him and not above colonel, but the number so assigned shall only be such as may be found necessary, not exceeding twelve; also that the two commissaries of subsistence who may be detailed as assistants to the Commissary-General of Subsistence, shall have the rank of colonel: Provided, That when any such officer is relieved from said duty, his temporary rank, pay, and emoluments shall cease, and he shall return to his lineal rank in the Department."

These statutes were repealed by section 11, act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 979). For the volunteer subsistence staff, see the act of March 2, 1899 (30 ibid., 979).

PROMOTIONS, DETAILS.

Promotions. Feb. 2, 1901. s. 26, v. 31, p. 755.

759. So long as there remain any officers holding permanent appointments in the * * * Subsistence Department * * * including those appointed to original vacancies in the grades of captain and first lieutenant under the provisions of sections sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, and twenty-four of this act, they shall be promoted according to seniority in the several grades, as now provided by law, and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to apply to vacancies which can be filled by such promotions or to the periods for which the officers so promoted shall hold their appointments. Sec. 26, act of February 2, 1901, (31 Stat. L., 755).

Details. Ibid.

760. When any vacancy, except that of the chief of the department or corps, shall occur, which can not be filled by promotion as provided in this section, it shall be filled by detail from the line of the Army, and no more permanent appointments shall be made in those departments or corps.[1] Ibid.

The same. Ibid.

761. Such details shall be made from the grade in which the vacancies exist, under such system of examination as the President may, from time to time, prescribe.[2] Ibid.

POST COMMISSARY-SERGEANTS.

Post commissary-sergeants. Mar. 3, 1873, c. 224, v. 17, p. 485. Sec. 1142, R. S.

762. The Secretary of War is authorized to select from the sergeants of the line of the Army who shall have faithfully served therein five years, three years of which in the grade of noncommissioned officers, as many commissary-sergeants as the service may require, not to exceed one for each military post or place of deposit of subsistence supplies, whose duty it shall be to receive and preserve the subsistence supplies at the posts, under the direction of

[1] Section 17 of the act of February 2, 1901, contained a provision excepting vacancies caused by that enactment from the operation of this section. Such vacancies are filled by the President under his constitutional power to appoint, as modified by the acts of August 6, 1894, (28 Stat. L., 234), February 2, 1901 (section 17), and the act of March 3, 1901.

[2] For regulations respecting details to the staff see the article so entitled in the chapter relating to the Staff Departments.

CIVIL EMPLOYEES.

The employment of civilians in the Subsistence Department is regulated by the annual acts of appropriation. The amount to be expended for such services was fixed at $105,000 in the acts of March 3, 1883, July 5, 1884, March 3, 1885, and June 30, 1886; at $110,000 by the acts of February 9, 1887, September 22, 1888, March 2, 1889, June 13, 1890, February 24, 1891, July 16, 1892, and February 27, 1893, and at $100,000 by the acts of August 6, 1894, February 12, 1895, and March 16, 1896.

the proper officers of the Subsistence Department, and under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War. The commissary-sergeants hereby authorized shall be subject to the rules and articles of war, and shall receive for their services the same pay and allowances as ordnance-sergeants.[1]

767. Officers not to trade in articles of subsistence.
768. Methods of purchase; emergency purchases.

763. It shall be the duty of the officers of the Subsistence Department, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to purchase and issue to the Army such supplies as enter into the composition of the ration.[3]

Duties.
Apr. 14, 1818, c. 61, s. 7, v. 3, p. 427; Mar. 3, 1835, c. 49, s. 1, v. 7, p. 780.
Sec. 1141, R.S.

764. The officers of the Subsistence Department shall procure and keep for sale to officers and enlisted men at cost prices, for cash or on credit, such articles as may from time to time be designated by the inspectors-general of the Army. An account of all sales on credit shall be kept, and the amounts due for the same shall be reported monthly to the Paymaster-General.[4]

[1] For regimental commissary-sergeants of cavalry, see section 2, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 748); for regimental commissary-sergeants of infantry, see section 10 of the same enactment. The act of June 30, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 123), authorizes the detail of one commissary-sergeant to act as assistant to the commissary of cadets at the Military Academy. By General Orders No. 17, A. G. O., of February 16, 1900, the number of post commissary-sergeants was fixed at 165; by General Orders No. 59, A. G. O., of May 3, 1900, the number was increased to 200. General Orders No. 1, A. G. O., of 1900, contains the requirement that "at military posts and stations and in the field the regimental commissaries and regimental commissary-sergeants of cavalry and infantry regiments will perform the necessary work of their respective offices in the subsistence department at the stations of the headquarters of their regiments, and no commissary-sergeants of the general staff will be assigned to posts at which there is a regimental headquarters, except under unusual conditions."

[2] The Subsistence Department, under the direction of the Secretary of War, provides for the distribution and expenditure of funds appropriated for subsisting enlisted men and for purchasing articles kept for sale to officers and enlisted men. The Commissary-General furnishes lists of articles authorized to be kept for sale, and gives instructions for procuring, distributing, issuing, selling, and accounting for all subsistence supplies. Par. 1351, A. R., 1901.

Subsistence supplies comprise—

(1) Subsistence stores, consisting of articles composing the ration and those furnished for sale to officers and enlisted men, also lantern candles for stable use, forage for beef cattle, and coarse salt for public animals and rebrining.

(2) Subsistence property, consisting of the necessary means for handling, preserving, issuing, selling, and accounting for these stores. Par. 1355, ibid.

Exceptional supplies. Feb. 12, 1895 v. 28, p. 658.

765. Hereafter exceptional articles of subsistence stores for officers and enlisted men, which are to be paid for by them, regardless of condition upon arrival at posts, may, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War, be obtained by open purchase without advertising. Act of February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 658).

Subsistence to seamen and marines. Sec. 1143, R. S.

766. The officers of the Subsistence Department shall, upon the requisition of the naval or marine officer commanding any detachment of seamen or marines under orders to act on shore, in cooperation with the land troops, and during the time such detachment is so acting or proceeding to act, furnish rations to the officers, seamen, and marines of the same.

Officers not to trade in articles for issue or sale. Apr. 14, 1818, c. 61, s. 9, v. 3, p. 427; Mar. 3, 1835, c. 49, s. 1, v. 4, p. 780; Mar. 3, 1865, c. 81, s. 6, v. 13, p. 497; July 28, 1866, c. 299, s. 25, v. 14, p. 336. Sec. 1150, R. S.

767. No officer belonging to the Subsistence Department, or doing the duty of a subsistence officer, shall be concerned, directly or indirectly, in the purchase or sale of any article entering into the composition of the ration allowed to troops in the service of the United States, or of any article designated by the inspectors-general of the Army, and furnished for sale to officers and enlisted men at cost prices, or of tobacco furnished for sale to enlisted men, except on account of the United States; nor shall any such officer take or apply to his own use any gain or emolument for negotiating or transacting any business connected with the duties of his office, other than that which may be allowed by law.

Purchases. Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 905.

768. Hereafter, except in cases of emergency or where it is impracticable to secure competition, the purchase of all supplies for the use of the various departments and posts of the Army and of the branches of the army service shall only be made after advertisement, and shall be purchased where the same can be purchased the cheapest, quality and cost of transportation and the interests of the Government considered; but every open-market emergency purchase made in the manner common among business men which exceeds in amount two hundred dollars shall be reported for approval to the Secretary of War under such regulations as he may prescribe.[1] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 905).

[1] The object of this provision is to secure the Government the benefit arising from competition. It is expected that this benefit will manifest itself in the selection of the best and most suitable supplies for the least expenditure of public money. Where the prices for supplies are fixed and uniform it is unusual and impracticable to advertise for proposals. Such cases are not within the meaning of the statute. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., par. 1112. Expenditures for water and gas are not expenditures for supplies within the meaning of this act. Ibid., 1111. So held also as to street-car tickets. Ibid., 1124.

The officers of the Quartermaster's Department are not bound to award contracts

THE RATION.[1]

Par.
769. President to prescribe components.
770. The garrison ration, the field ration, the emergency ration; meat issues, proportions; the same, substitutions.
771, 772. Issues to enlisted men.
773. Issues to matrons and nurses.
774. Issues to Indians.
775, 776. Sugar and coffee.
777. The same, commutation.

President to prescribe components of ration.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 40, v. 31, p. 758.

769. The President is hereby authorized to prescribe the kinds and quantities of the component articles of the army ration, and to direct the issue of substitutive equivalent articles in place of any such components whenever, in his opinion, economy and due regard to the health and comfort of the troops may so require.[2] Sec. 40, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 758).

to the lowest bidder in every instance, but only to the lowest responsible bidder for the best and most suitable article, in case the right to reject "any and all bids," which the statute reserves, is not exercised. Ibid., 433.

Evidence of compliance with the requirements of this statute should accompany all contracts filed in the Second Comptroller's Office. Ibid., 426.

Whenever an officer of the Army enters into a contract on behalf of the Government for the purchase of quartermaster's or subsistence supplies, under the authority conferred by this statute, it should be made to appear by the certificate of the officer that the supplies were required for immediate use. The officer should also certify as to the time and manner of the advertisement, and that the award was made to the lowest responsible bidder for the best and most suitable article. Ibid., 428.

Under the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 109), there are four classes of purchases of army supplies made by the Quartermaster and Subsistence Departments, namely: First "emergency purchases," which must be at once reported to the Secretary of War for his approval; second, purchases of "small amounts for immediate use," which must be made "by contract after public notice of not less than ten days;" third, purchases of the great bulk of army supplies, which must be made under the general rule prescribed by the Army Regulations, that is, after public notice of not less than thirty days; and, fourth, unusual and important purchases, where the Secretary of War deems public notice of from thirty to sixty days advisable. Ibid., 1119.

In all cases where purchases of regular or miscellaneous supplies for the Army are made by the Quartermaster's Department or by the Subsistence Department after public notice of ten days or more, without executing formal written contracts, the vouchers therefor must be accompanied by the following evidence, namely: First, a copy of the public notice for bids; second, a certificate as to the time and manner of the public notice for bids; third, the accepted bid; fourth, a copy of the letter accepting the bid, and, fifth, a certificate that the award was made to the lowest responsible bidder for the best and most suitable article. Ibid., p. 1122.

The object of this legislation is to secure for the Government the benefit of competition in obtaining supplies and to prevent favoritism in making the purchases thereof. It contemplates one general mode of purchase, namely, by contract, after advertisement, with "the lowest responsible bidder for the best and most suitable article," with but a single exception, and that is where an "emergency" exists requiring the purchase to be otherwise made. Such emergency may arise not only before the required public notice can be given, but after it has once been given, in consequence of the failure to receive any bids or proposals; in either case the purchase thereupon would be an emergency purchase, and come within the requirement of the statute for an immediate report to the Secretary of War for his approval. This requirement is, I think, designed to extend to all purchases which are not made agreeably to the general mode above indicated, and hence it applies to the purchase of parts of machinery, or parts of stoves or ranges, for repairs, or of patented articles, when the same is (as in cases of emergency, and those only, it may be) made in open market. XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 349.

[1] For historical note in reference to the army ration see end of chapter.

[2] This enactment replaces the requirement of section 1146, Revised Statutes, which authorized the President to "make such alterations in the component parts of the ration as a due regard to the health and comfort of the Army and economy may require."

770. In accordance with the provisions of section 40 of the act entitled "An act to increase the efficiency of the permanent military establishment of the United States," approved February 2, 1901, which authorizes the President to "prescribe the kinds and quantities of the component articles of the army ration, and to direct the issue of substitutive equivalent articles in place of any such components whenever, in his opinion, economy and a due regard to the health and comfort of the troops may so require," the following is promulgated for the information and guidance of all concerned:

The kinds and quantities of articles composing the army ration and the substitutive equivalent articles which may be issued in place of such components shall be as follows:

1. For troops in garrison (garrison ration).

a The issue of liquid coffee to troops when traveling by rail is governed by paragraph 1388 of the Army Regulations of 1901.

4. For troops traveling on vessels of the United States army transport service.

Food on transports for troops traveling will be prepared from the articles of subsistence stores which compose the ration for troops in garrison, varied by the substitution of other articles of authorized subsistence stores of equal money value when required. No savings will be allowed to troops on transports.

5. For use of troops on emergent occasions in active campaign (emergency ration).

An emergency ration, prepared under direction of the War Department, will be issued to troops on active campaign, but will not be used at any time or place where regular rations are obtainable. It will be packed in a conveniently shaped package, and will be carried in the haversack or saddlebags and accounted for at inspection, etc., by the soldier.

6. Proportions of meat issues.

Fresh meats will ordinarily be issued seven days in ten, and salt meats three days in ten. If fish (dried, pickled, or canned) is issued it will be in substitution of salt meat. The proportions of the meat issues may be varied at the discretion of department commanders, not, however, without due consideration being given to the equitable rights of contractors engaged in furnishing fresh meats to the troops under their commands.

7. Substitute when the issue of both fresh meat and vegetables is impracticable.

Whenever the issue of both the fresh meat and vegetable components is impracticable there may be issued in lieu of them canned fresh-beef-and-vegetable stew, at the rate of 28½ ounces to the ration.

[1] ISSUES TO CIVILIANS.

Issues of rations to civilian employees are governed by the requirements of paragraph 1398, Army Regulations, 1901, which provides that "issues of rations to civilians employed with the Army will be made on ration returns signed by the officers in charge of the employees, when ordered by the commanding officer."

Rations furnished for the use of the Army, being the public property of the United States, can only be disposed of or issued in accordance with law. Issues to destitute citizens not being so authorized are made on the responsibility of the officer ordering the same. In this connection, see paragraph 1405, A. R., 1901.

Private persons not connected with the Army are not entitled to be subsisted at the expense of the United States, either while in quarantine hospitals or otherwise. 5 Comp. Dec., 191.

A civilian employee of the Army engaged to accompany a scientific expedition at a salary of $125 per month is not entitled to subsistence, but, like a commissioned officer, must subsist himself. Herendeen v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 348.

[1] The acts of June 23, 1879, and May 4, 1880, contained the requirement that 10 per cent of the cost price should be added to the cost of all stores (except tobacco) sold to officers and enlisted men, to cover wastage, transportation, and other incidental charges (21 Stat. L., 32, 111). This provision was repealed by the act of July 5, 1884, above cited. To a civilian employed with the Army at a remote place, where food can not otherwise be procured, stores will be sold for cash, in limited quantities, for his own use, at invoice or contract prices with 10 per cent added. Par. 1284, A. R., 1895. The amounts due for such sales to be deducted from the next payment to the officer or enlisted man. See paragraphs 782, 783, and 784, post.

[1] Under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 410), the proceeds of all sales of subsistence supplies are exempt from being covered into the Treasury, and are immediately available for the purchase of fresh supplies. 3 Dig. 2nd Comp. Dec., par. 1259.

Under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 410), the proceeds of all sales of subsistence supplies, being exempt from being covered into the Treasury, revert to the appropriation "Subsistence of the Army," out of which they were originally expended, and are applicable to the purpose for which they are appropriated by law, namely, the purchase of fresh supplies only during the fiscal year for which the appropriation to which they revert is available, for which purpose they are immediately available without the intervention of a repay warrant. Ibid.

The subsistence supplies contemplated by the provision of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 410), declaring the proceeds of all sales of such supplies immediately available for the purchase of fresh supplies, comprise not only the supplies denominated "subsistence stores," but also the necessary means for handling, preserving, issuing, selling, and accounting for these supplies, as tools, scales, measures, utensils, stationery, safes, office furniture, etc. Ibid., 1336.

[2] Section 1233, Revised Statutes, which required cooks to be detailed, in turn, from the privates of each company was repealed by the act of June 29, 1879 (20 Stat. L., ch. 24, p. 276). See G. O. 94, A. G. O., 1898. The act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 721), authorized the enlistment of one cook in each company composing the military establishment. Such cook was to have the rank and receive the pay of a corporal. This statute was replaced by the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 977), which authorized two cooks to be enlisted in each troop of cavalry, battery of artillery, and company of infantry of the Regular and Volunteer establishments. By section 9 of the act of March 2, 1899, the cooks so enlisted were to have the pay of sergeants of infantry.

COMMUTATION OF RATIONS.

Coffee and sugar.
July 5, 1838, s. 17, v. 5, p. 258.
Sec. 1294, R. S.

789. For each ration of sugar and coffee not issued, nor commuted for the extract of coffee combined with milk and sugar, enlisted men shall be paid in money.[1]

[1] Commutation in the military or naval service is money paid in substitution of something to which an officer, soldier, or sailor is entitled. Commutation, being regulated by statutes and regulations, can not be allowed by inferior authority. The principle which governs the commutation of rations in lieu of subsistence is that commutation will not be allowed where subsistence in kind is provided by the Government. Jaekle v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 133.

Authority to establish the rates of the allowance for commutation of rations has not been given by statute, but these rates have been left to be fixed by Army Regulations. But these amounts are recognized and sanctioned in the provisions of the Army appropriation acts relating to the Subsistence Department. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1957.

Paragraph 1273, Army Regulations, 1895, in directing that commutation in lieu of rations shall not be allowed to soldiers where subsistence in kind is provided by the Government, excepts cases where the same is specially authorized by the Secretary of War. Held, that this part of the Regulations was substantially superseded by the statutory provision of the existing army appropriation act of February 27, 1893, which enumerates several specific classes of enlisted men as persons to whom the payment may be made without reserving to the Secretary of War any authority to extend the privilege. Par. 1958, ibid.

The allowance for commutation of rations, made payable by the army appropriation act of February 27, 1893, "to enlisted men traveling on detached duty, when it is impracticable to carry rations," etc., held to be restricted to the period covered by the travel, and not to be payable to a soldier for commutation of rations consumed at the destination where he was placed by his orders on detached duty, viz, for four days' board at a hotel at the terminus of his travel. Par. 1959, ibid.

A claim for commutation of rations on furlough can not be allowed without the production of the furlough issued, or other satisfactory evidence that payment has not been made. The burden of proof rests upon the claimant to establish the validity of his claim by something more than his unsupported statements. 1 Comp. Dec., 513.

Commutation of rations may be allowed at the following rates, under the conditions mentioned, viz:

Conditions.	Rate. per day each.
1. To a soldier at the conclusion of his furlough, provided that on or before the last day thereof he has reported at his proper station or has been discharged	$0.25
2. To sergeants of the post noncommissioned staff (and soldiers acting as such) on duty at forts and stations where there are no other troops	.40
3. To a soldier on detached duty, stationed in a city or town where subsistence is not furnished by the Government	.75
4. To a soldier traveling under orders from a place or station at which his rations have been regularly commuted	1.50
5. To enlisted men traveling under orders (when the journey can not be performed in twenty-four hours and it is impracticable to carry rations of any kind), as follows:
To an enlisted man traveling alone	1.50
To two enlisted men traveling as a detatchment or traveling as a guard to an insane patient or military prisoner, each	1.50
To an insane patient or military prisoner traveling under guard of one or two enlisted men, to be paid, on the order of the commanding officer, in advance to, and to be receipted for by, the person to whose charge the patient or military prisoner is committed by the order	1.50

Par. 1272, A. R., 1895.

Commutation of rations will not be allowed to enlisted men serving where subsistence is furnished by the Government; or traveling under orders when they can carry and cook their rations, or can carry cooked or travel rations; or traveling under orders by steamboat or steamship where the passage rates include meals; or failing to report at their proper stations on or before the last day of furlough unless discharged; or recruiting parties at their stations; nor to civil employees. Par. 1273, ibid.

A soldier who has been granted a furlough to expire upon the arrival of his regiment in the United States, is entitled to commutation of rations until he receives notice of its arrival and for a time thereafter sufficient to enable him to join it. 5 Comp. Dec., 941.

Pay during captivity.
Mar. 30, 1814, c. 37, s.14, v.3, p.115.
Sec. 1288, R. S.

790. Every noncommissioned officer and private of the Regular Army, and every officer, noncommissioned officer, and private of any militia or volunteer corps in the service of the United States who is captured by the enemy, shall be entitled to receive during his captivity, notwithstanding the expiration of his term of service, the same pay, subsistence[1] and allowance to which he may be entitled while in the actual service of the United States; but this provision shall not be construed to entitle any prisoner of war of such militia corps to any pay or compensation after the date of his parole, except the traveling expenses allowed by law.

Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 904.

791. For the payment of the regulation allowances for commutation of rations in lieu of rations: To enlisted men on furlough; to ordnance-sergeants on duty at ungarrisoned posts; to enlisted men and male and female nurses stationed at places where rations in kind can not be economically issued; to enlisted men traveling on detached duty when it is impracticable to carry rations of any kind; to enlisted men selected to contest for places or prizes in department and army rifle competitions while traveling to and from places of contests; and to male and female nurses on leaves of absence, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War. Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 904).

Historical note.—The office of Commissary-General of Supplies and Purchases was created during the war of the Revolution by a resolution of Congress dated July 19, 1775, and on the recommendation of General Washington, Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut, was appointed to the office. The methods of supplying the Army with provisions having proved inadequate, however, the matter was investigated by a committee of the Congress, and the department was reorganized by a resolution of Congress dated June 10, 1777. Under the new arrangement the duties of purchase and distribution were separated and intrusted to independent bureaus under the Commissary-General of Purchases and the Commissary-General of Issues. The duties of the Commissary-General of Issues were defined in the resolution of Congress of June 10, 1777; those of the Commissary-General of Purchases were made the subject of occasional modifications, and will be found in the resolutions of June 10, 1777, and November 30, 1780. By the resolution of July 10, 1781, the departments of purchases and issues were merged in the office of Superintendent of Finance, under whose direction a system of supplying the Army by contracts was established. By a subsequent resolution, dated May 28, 1784, the office of Superintendent of Finance was abolished, its duties being merged in the Board of the Treasury created by that enactment. Under this arrangement, which continued in force after the organization of the Government under the Constitution, all subsistence supplies for the Army were purchased by the Treasury Department under contracts entered into under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury (sec. 5, act of May 8, 1792, 1 Stat. L., 280; act of February 23, 1795, ibid., 419). By the acts of July 16, 1798 (ibid., 610), and March 3, 1809 (2 ibid., 535), the present methods of purchasing supplies for the Army, and accounting for the same, were established.[1] The contract system continued to exist until the reorganization of the staff, which was accomplished by the act of April 4, 1818 (3 ibid., 426), when it was replaced by the present Subsistence Department.

[1] Under section 1288, Revised Statutes, which provides that any soldier who is captured by the enemy shall be entitled to receive, during his captivity, "the same pay, subsistence, and allowance to which he may be entitled while in the actual service," a soldier so captured is entitled to commutation of rations during his captivity at the rate provided in General Orders No. 37, A. G. O., of 1865, viz, 25 cents per day from the appropriation "Subsistence of the Army." 6 Comp. Dec., 846.

At the reduction of 1802 a system of military agencies was established in connection with the procurement and distribution of subsistence stores and supplies. Three military agents and such number of assistant military agents, not exceeding one to each military post, as the service might require, were authorized by section 3 of the act of March 16, 1802 (2 Stat. L., 132); the assistants were to be selected from the line of the Army and were to receive additional monthly compensation. By section 4 of the act of March 28, 1812 (ibid., 696), the military agency system was abolished, and the duty of procuring military supplies was vested in the Commissary-General of Purchases and in the Quartermaster's Department thereby created. By section 2 of the act of April 4, 1818 (3 ibid., 426), the office of Commissary-General was created with the rank and pay of a colonel of ordnance, and provision was made for as many assistant commissaries as the service might require; these officers were to be detailed from the line, and were to receive twenty dollers per month additional pay. The duties of the department thus created were restricted to the purchase and issue of subsistence stores and supplies; and the system, which was experimental in character, was to continue for five years from the passage of the act.

At the general reduction of 1821[2] the organization of the department was somewhat modified, the office of Commissary-General of Subsistence being created and provision made for as many assistant commissaries as the service might require, not exceeding fifty, who were to be taken from subalterns of the line, and were to receive, in addition to their monthly pay, certain sums, to be regulated by the Secretary of War, and to be not less than ten dollars nor more than twenty dollars in amount; they were to perform duty in both the Subsistence and Quartermaster's Departments, as might be required under the orders of the Secretary of War. By the act of June 23, 1823 (3 ibid., 721), the existing arrangement of the department was continued for five years. Two assistant commissaries with the rank of major were added to the department by the act of March 3, 1829 (4 ibid., 360), and the system was to be continued for a third period of five years. By section 5 of the act of March 3, 1835 (ibid., 780), the Subsistence Department, which had hitherto been in an experimental stage, was placed upon a permanent basis. By section 11 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 ibid., 256), there were added to the department one assistant commissary-general of subsistence with the rank and pay of a lieutenant-colonel of dragoons, one commissary of subsistence with the rank and pay of quartermaster, and three commissaries with the rank and pay of assistant quartermasters.

No further change in the composition or duties of the department was made until the outbreak of the war with Mexico, when, by section 5 of the act of June 18, 1846 (9 ibid., 17), the President was authorized to appoint as many additional officers, not exceeding one commissary (major) to each brigade, and one assistant commissary (captain) to each regiment, as he might deem necessary; these appointments, however, were not to extend beyond the period of the existing war. By the act of September 26, 1850 (9 ibid., 469), four commissaries of subsistence (captains) were added to the existing establishment, and these appointments were to be made from the line of the Army.

At the commencement of the war of the rebellion a commissary of subsistence (captain) was allowed for each brigade of the volunteer forces authorized to be raised by the act of July 22, 1861 (12 Stat. L. 269), and four commissaries of subsistence (majors) and eight commissaries of subsistence with the rank of captain were added to the permanent establishment by the act of August 3, 1861 (ibid., 287); by section 10 of the act of July 17, 1862 (ibid., 599), a commissary of subsistence for each army corps, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, was also authorized. By the act of February 9, 1863 (ibid., 648), the department was reorganized, the rank of brigadier-general being conferred upon the Commissary-General of Subsistence, who was to be selected from the department, and one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, and two majors were added. These offices were to be filled by regular promotion.

The peace establishment of the department was fixed by section 16 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 335), as follows: One Commissary-General of Subsistence (brigadier-general), two assistant commissaries-general of subsistence (colonels), two deputy commissaries-general of subsistence (lieutenant-colonels), eight commissaries (majors), and sixteen commissaries of subsistence (captains). The repealing clause of the act of July 28, 1866, having been regarded as including within its scope the provision for additional compensation to officers detailed from the line, which had been authorized by section 3 of the act of March 3, 1821 (3 ibid., 615), it was provided by section 24 of the act of July 15, 1870 (16 ibid., 320), that lieutenants of the line detailed to perform the duties of acting commissaries of subsistence should receive $100 additional pay per annum. Section 6 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), contained the requirement that there should be no more promotions or appointments in the staff of the Army until otherwise directed by law, but this restriction was removed, as to the Subsistence Department, by section 3 of the act of June 23, 1874, which reorganized the department and fixed its commissioned strength at one brigadier-general, two colonels, three lieutenant-colonels, eight majors, and twelve captains. By the act of February 12, 1895 (28 ibid., 656), the number of captains was reduced to eight. The requirement of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 ibid., 457), authorizing captains in this department to be appointed from civil life was repealed by the act of August 6, 1894 (28 ibid., 234), and appointments to the lowest grade are now required to be made from the line of the Army. The act of June 30, 1882 (22 ibid., 118), and subsequent acts of appropriation have made provision for the payment of $100 additional pay to officers detailed from the line to perform the duties of acting commissaries of subsistence. A corps of post commissary-sergeants was added to the department by the act of March 3, 1873 (17 ibid., 485; section 1142, Revised Statutes). They were to be appointed by the Secretary of War in such number as the service might require, but were not to exceed one for each military post.

By section 2 of the act of July 7, 1898 (30 ibid., 715), there were added to the strength of the department during the war with Spain eight majors and twelve captains of volunteers, and the two assistants to the Commissary-General of Subsistence and the officers in charge of important depots were given one grade of rank and pay in addition to that actually held by them; such increase, however, was not to exceed the rank of colonel in any case, and was to continue for a period not exceeding one year after the close of the existing war.

By section 17 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 752), the permanent strength of the department was fixed at one Commissary-General with the rank of brigadier-general, three assistant commissaries-general with the rank of colonel, four deputy commissaries-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, nine commissaries with the rank of major, and twenty-seven commissaries with the rank of captain mounted; the existing force of commissary-sergeants was recognized and continued in service and were thereafter to be designated as post commissary-sergeants. A system of details was also established by the operation of which the permanent commissioned personnel of the department will be gradually replaced, as vacancies occur, by officers detailed from the line of the Army for duty in the Subsistence Department.

The army ration.—The army ration, as established by the act of April 30, 1790 (1 Stat. L., 121); section 8, act of March 3, 1795 (ibid., 434); and section 13, act of May 30, 1796 (ibid., 484); consisted of 1 pound of fresh or salt beef, or three-quarters of a pound of pork or bacon; 1 pound of flour, one-half a gill of spirits, and to each 100 rations 1 quart of salt, 2 quarts of vinegar, 2 pounds of soap, and 1 pound of candles. By section 3 of the act of June 7, 1794 (ibid., 242); section 6, act of January 2, 1795 (ibid., 400), and section 11, act of May 30, 1796 (ibid., 484), sundry additions were made to meat, bread, and seasoning components of the ration in the case of troops employed on frontier service. The ration was increased by section 6 of the act of July 16, 1798 (ibid., 605), so as to consist of 1¼ pounds of fresh or salt beef, or three-quarters of a pound of pork or bacon; 1 pound and 2 ounces of flour; 1 gill of spirits; and to each 100 rations 2 quarts of salt, 2 quarts of vinegar, 4 pounds of soap, and 1½ pounds of candles; and the ration, as thus constituted, was made permanent by section 6 of the act of March 16, 1802 (2 ibid., 134). By section 22 of the act of March 3, 1799 (1 ibid., 749), the regular spirit ration was reduced to one-half gill, and commanding officers were authorized to make extra issues of spirits, at the rate of one-half gill per ration, "in cases of fatigue service or other extraordinary occasions."[1] The spirit ration was replaced by coffee and sugar at the rate of 6 and 12 pounds, respectively, per hundred rations, by section 17 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 ibid., 256), and the ration of coffee and sugar was increased to 10 and 15 pounds, respectively, by section 4 of the act of June 21, 1860 (12 ibid., 68); by section 10, act of July 5, 1862 (ibid., 510), the extract of coffee was authorized to be issued in lieu of the coffee and sugar ration.[1] A vegetable component, consisting of 15 pounds of beans or peas, or 10 pounds of rice or hominy, was added to the ration by Executive order, under the authority conferred by section 8 of the act of April 14, 1818 (3 ibid., 426), paragraph —, Army Regulations of 1847). An increase in the components of the ration to the following extent was authorized by section 13 of the act of August 3, 1861 (12 ibid., 289); the ration of bread or flour was increased to 22 ounces, and an alternate issue of 1 pound of hard bread authorized, and a vegetable ration, to consist of 1 pound of potatoes, was required to be issued "at least three times per week, if practicable." This increase was to terminate at the close of the war, when the ration was to be reduced to the articles and quantities as authorized by law or regulation on July 1, 1861. Pepper was added as one of the seasoning components, at the rate of 4 ounces to the hundred rations, by section 11, act of March 3, 1863 (12 ibid., 744), and section 2 of the act of June 20, 1864 (13 ibid., 144), contained the requirement that the ration should thereafter be the same as provided by law and regulation on the 1st day of July, 1861, with the addition of the pepper ration authorized by the act of March 3, 1863; the components of beans (or peas), or rice (or hominy), at the rate of 15 and 10 pounds, respectively, to the hundred rations, having been added by Executive regulation, were included in the operation of the act of July 1, 1864, and became part of the authorized ration. By section 5 of the act of June 16, 1890 (26 ibid., 158), 1 pound of vegetables was added to the ration, "the proportion to be fixed by the Secretary of War."

[1] Issues of spirits, as a component part of the ration, were discontinued by Executive order in 1832 (General Orders No. 100, A. G. O., 1832), and an issue of coffee and sugar was substituted therefor at the rate of 4 pounds of coffee and 8 pounds of sugar to the hundred rations.

By the act of March 2, 1819 (3 Stat. L., 488), an "extra gill of whisky or spirits" was allowed to enlisted men engaged in the construction of fortifications or the execution of surveys, but by the act of May 19, 1846 (9 Stat. L., 14), this ration was allowed to be commuted in money. Upon the discontinuance of the spirit ration in 1838, section 22 of the act of March 3, 1799 (1 Stat. L., 754), became operative, which authorized the issue of spirits "in case of fatigue service or other extra occasions." This placed the spirit ration upon the basis of an extra issue; such issues, therefore, being discretionary with the Executive. They were discontinued by General Orders No. 120, War Department, of 1865.

ORGANIZATION.

792. The Pay Department shall consist of one Paymaster-General with the rank of brigadier-general, three assistant paymasters-general with the rank of colonel, four deputy-paymasters-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, twenty paymasters with the rank of major, and twenty-five paymasters with the rank of captain mounted.[2] Sec. 21, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754).

Additional paymasters. July 5, 1838, c. 162, s. 25, v. 5, p. 259. Sec. 1184, R. S.

793. When volunteers or militia are called into the service of the United States, and the officers of the Paymaster's Department are not deemed by the President sufficient for the punctual payment of the troops, he may appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and add to said corps as many paymasters, to be called additional paymasters with the rank of major, not exceeding one for every two regiments of volunteers or militia, as he may deem necessary.

[1] For a note containing the statutory history of the Pay Department, see end of chapter.

[2] Section 21 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754), contains the requirement that "all vacancies in the grade of colonel and lieutenant-colonel created or caused by this section shall be filled by promotion according to seniority, as now prescribed by law, and no more appointments to the grade of major and paymaster shall be made until the number of majors and paymasters is reduced below twenty: And provided, That persons who have served in the Volunteer Army since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, as additional paymasters may be appointed to positions in the grade of captain created by this section. So long as there remain surplus majors an equal number of vacancies shall be held in the grade of captain, so that the total number of paymasters authorized by this section shall not be exceeded at any time." For requirements of law in respect to appointments in this department as it existed prior to the approval of the act of February 2, 1901, see section 7 of the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 979). For a statutory extension of the field of selection, as indicated in section 21 of the act of February 2, 1901, see the act of March 2, 1901, par. 578, ante.

Service to be temporary. July 5, 1838, c. 162, s. 25, v. 5, p. 259. Sec. 1185, R. S.

794. Additional paymasters shall be retained in service only so long as they may be required for the payment of volunteers and militia, as provided herein.

PROMOTIONS AND TRANSFERS.

Promotions. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 26, v. 31, p. 755.

795. So long as there remain any officers holding permanent appointments in the * * * Pay Department * * * including those appointed to original vacancies in the grades of captain and first lieutenant under the provisions of sections sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, and twenty-four of this act, they shall be promoted according to seniority in the several grades, as now provided by law,[1] and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to apply to vacancies which can be filled by such promotions, or to the periods for which the officers so promoted shall hold their appointments. Sec. 26, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 755).

Details. Ibid.

796. When any vacancy, except that of the chief of the department or corps, shall occur, which can not be filled by promotion as provided in this section, it shall be filled by detail from the line of the Army, and no more permanent appointments shall be made in these departments or corps. Ibid.

The same. Ibid.

797. Such details shall be made from the grade in which the vacancies exist, under such system of examination as the President may, from time to time, prescribe.[2] Ibid.

[1] Paymasters of the Army are the financial agents of the Government, and their disbursements, represented by vouchers, are examined and scrutinized by the Comptroller, whose duty it is finally to determine whether or not any particular disbursement shall be credited to the officer. In charging an officer, or refusing him credit for erroneous disbursements, the question of proper care invariably enters into consideration in arriving at a decision. The right to determine that question is a most essential feature of the functions of the Comptroller. 3 Dig. 2d Compt. Dec., par. 8.

[2] Troops will be paid every month unless circumstances prevent, in which case the paymaster charged with the payment will immediately report the facts through his chief paymaster to the Paymaster-General. Par. 1502, A. R., 1901.

[3] Payments will be made as soon after the close of each month as practicable:

(1) By paymasters in person; or

(2) By check to be sent by registered mail or express, or currency shipped by express.

The troops at posts where paymasters are stationed and others in their immediate vicinity, to be designated in instructions issued from the Adjutant-General's Office, will be paid by paymasters in person.

For posts at which payments are not required to be made in person, the paymaster will transmit the pay due in one or more of the following ways:

(1) By individual check, payable to the order of each man for the exact amount due.

(2) By enclosing in a separate sealed envelope the exact amount in currency due each soldier, with his name and the amount inclosed marked thereon. Par. 1503, ibid.

Duplicate pay rolls will be duly signed by the men, and forwarded by the commanding officer by mail to the paymaster who has been designated by the department commander to pay the command. Par. 1505, ibid. For regulations respecting the payment of troops by check see paragraphs 1502–1527 Army Regulations of 1901.

A paymaster of the Army who alleges that he inclosed certain sums of money in a package transmitted by him to an officer for the payment of troops, which sums were not found in the package when received, the seals being unbroken, is not entitled to credit therefor. 6 Compt. Dec., 940.

A soldier of a company which performed duty usually performed by engineer soldiers, but which was regularly mustered and paid as a company of infantry, is not entitled to pay as an engineer soldier. Ibid., 25.

[4] An officer of the Pay or Medical Department can not exercise command, except in his own department; but by virtue of his commission he may command all enlisted men like other commissioned officers. Par. 18, A. R., 1901.

CLERKS TO PAYMASTERS.

Paymasters' clerks. Apr. 24, 1816, c. 69, s. 3, v. 3, p. 297; July 5, 1838, c. 162, s. 20, v. 5, p. 259; June 20, 1864, c. 145, s. 10, v. 13, p. 145. June 30, 1882, v. 22, p. 118. Sec. 1190, R. S.

805. Paymasters and additional paymasters shall be allowed a capable noncommissioned officer or private as clerk. When suitable noncommissioned officers or privates can not be procured from the line of the Army, they are authorized, by and with the approbation of the Secretary of War, to employ citizens as clerks, at a salary of fourteen hundred dollars a year.[1] Act of June 30, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 118).

Pay of clerks. May 26, 1900, v. 31, p. 209.

806. Hereafter the pay of army paymasters' clerks who have served as such over fifteen years shall be one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum; the pay of army paymasters' clerks who have served as such over ten years shall be one thousand six hundred dollars each per annum; the pay of army paymasters' clerks who have served as such over five years shall be one thousand five hundred dollars each per annum; the pay of other army paymasters' clerks shall be one thousand four hundred dollars each per annum. Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 209).

[1] For travel allowances of paymasters' clerks see paragraph 847, post. Salaries of clerks to paymasters are now graded according to length of service. See next paragraph for rates of pay for periods of service.

[2] Pay is the monthly pecuniary compensation of officers and soldiers of the Army, as fixed by sections 1261, 1280, etc., Revised Statutes. It is quite distinct from "allowances." Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1894; X Opin. Att. Gen., 285. The right to pay begins and ends with the period of legal service. Except by special authority of Congress an officer or soldier can not be paid for military service rendered before appointment, enlistment, or muster in. Nor are officers so assigned within the meaning of the act of February 12, 1877, where they are simply mounted on Government horses captured from Indians, and do not furnish, at their own expense horses, saddles, bridles, sabers, pistols, spurs, and other cavalry equipments. cate being cited by the officers on their subsequent vouchers. Officers ceasing to draw mounted pay will file with the last pay voucher a copy of the order relieving them from duty which required them to be mounted. The act of July 17, 1862 (12 Stat. L., 594), allowed to officers "assigned to duty which required them to be mounted" certain increased pay. So section 1261, Revised Statutes, entitles captains and lieutenants, when "mounted," to receive respectively $200 and $100 per annum of pay more than when "not mounted." Held, that to entitle officers to the increase of pay under these statutes it was not, and is not, essential that the duties required of them should make it absolutely necessary that they should be mounted, but that it was, and is, sufficient if these duties were, or are, such as are usually and appropriately performed by mounted officers, and such as can not be performed effectively or without material embarrassment and inconvenience to the service except by such officers (note in this connection the construction in Griswold v. Hepburn, 2 Duvall, 20, of the provision in Art. I, sec. 8 § 18 of the Constitution, that Congress shall have the power "to make all laws which shall be necessary," etc., for the execution of its special powers—as meaning not indispensable but appropriate and conducive to the purpose); and further that the certificate of the proper commander of an officer (as of the Chief Signal Officer in a case of an officer engaged in signal duty, or of the Superintendent at West Point in a case of an acting quartermaster stationed at that post), that the duties of the officer properly required (in the sense above indicated) that he should be mounted, would (the Secretary of War approving) be sufficient to entitle him to receive the additional pay. Held, that a captain or lieutenant detailed as a professor in a college, under section 1225, was not entitled to mounted pay. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1909.

814. In time of war every officer serving with troops operating against an enemy who shall exercise, under assignment in orders issued by competent authority, a command above that pertaining to his grade shall be entitled to receive the pay and allowances of the grade appropriate to the command so exercised: Provided, That a rate of pay exceeding that of a brigadier-general shall not be paid in any case by reason of such assignment.[1] Sec. 7, act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364).

[1] Under section 7 of the act of Congress approved April 26, 1898, an officer is not entitled to the pay and allowances of the grade appropriate to a command exercised by him above that pertaining to his grade except when "serving with troops operating against an enemy" and exercising the command of the higher grade "under assignment in orders issued by competent authority." It has been held by the Secretary of War that troops serving within the limits of the United States at a time when there is no foreign army within said limits are not operating against an enemy, notwithstanding the existence of war conditions. For the purpose of restricting assignments to command under this section to "competent authority," it has also been decided that such authority can be exercised only by the Secretary of War, or by the commanding general of an army "operating against an enemy." Circular 18, A. G. O., 1898. See also G. O. 86, A. G. O., 1898.

The command prescribed by law for an officer of the Army must be held to be the appropriate command of that grade, and such command is not subject to change by Executive order, or regulation, except as provided by law. 5 Compt. Dec., 354.

An officer of the Army who, under assignment in orders issued by his superior officer, exercises a command above that pertaining to his grade exercises such command under competent authority within the meaning of section 7 of the act of April 26, 1898. Ibid., 354.

Under section 7 of the act of April 26, 1898, an officer of the Army serving in time of war with troops operating against an enemy, who is required by the Army Regulations, upon a specified contingency, to exercise a command above that pertaining to his grade, must be regarded as exercising such "command under assignment in orders issued by competent authority," and is entitled to the pay of the higher grade. Ibid., 639.

The office of an officer of the Army and his rank are not necessarily identical. Wood v. U. S., 107 U. S., 414; 5 Compt. Dec., 280.

A captain in the Army while performing duty as chief quartermaster does not exercise a command within the meaning of section 7 of the act of April 26, 1898, and is not entitled to increased pay for exercising a command above that pertaining to his grade. 5 Compt. Dec., 137. A judge-advocate who is assigned by a corps commander to act as judge-advocate on his staff does not thereby acquire any higher rank and is not entitled to any additional pay. Ibid., 168.

A major of infantry who, on the assignment of the lieutenant-colonel to the command of the regiment, was assigned to the command of a battalion was not assigned to a command above that pertaining to his grade, and is not entitled to the increase of pay provided by the act of April 26, 1898, for exercising a command above that pertaining to his grade. Ibid., 862.

The fact that a major of the Army was for a time assigned to the command of a post garrisoned by two batteries of artillery does not make such a command the appropriate command of a major, and a captain assigned to such a command is not entitled to the pay of a major. Ibid., 891.

There is no law authorizing the allowance of additional pay to an enlisted man for performing the duties of a commissioned officer, and a claim for such pay can not be allowed. 4 Compt. Dec., 120.

A second lieutenant of the Army who exercised the command of a first lieutenant did not "exercise a command above that pertaining to his grade," within the meaning of the act of April 26, 1898, and he is not entitled to the pay of the higher grade. 6 Compt. Dec., 905.

of the act of April 26, 1898, is entitled to the pay and allowances of the grade appropriate to the command so exercised, and, under section 1262, Revised Statutes, is also entitled to increased pay for length of service, such increased pay to be computed on the pay of the grade appropriate to such higher command. Ibid., 710.

[1] This enactment replaces the requirement in pari materia of the act of May 26, 1900. (31 Stat. L., 211.) The act of March 3, 1901 also provides that "the officers and enlisted men who have served in China at any time since the twenty-sixth day of May, nineteen hundred, shall be allowed and paid for such service the same increase of pay proper as is herein provided for." Under this statute an officer is entitled to 10 per cent increase of his pay proper for the highest grade he holds, or of the highest grade to which his pay and allowances are lawfully assimilated, but such increase of pay does not operate to increase his pay for length of service. See 6 Compt. Dec., 944.

The act does not make any change in the regular pay or allowance of the Army, but makes provision for a special or extra allowance to officers and enlisted men of the Army while they are serving in the places named in the act. It obviously applies only to service rendered on and after the date of the act.

The provisions of the various laws, to wit, section 11, act of June 20, 1864 (13 Stat. L., 145), section 1265, Revised Statutes, act of May 8, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 43), and act of July 29, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 102), authorizing leaves of absence to be allowed to officers for specified periods "without deduction of pay or allowances" have not been construed to entitle an officer while on leave to allowances the payment of which was conditioned upon the performance of some particular service, such as payment of $100 a year as acting assistant commissary under section 1261, Revised Statutes, or pay for exercising a higher command under section 7, act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 365).

The 10 per cent increase on pay proper being allowed by the act only to officers serving in the places named therein, I am of the opinion that an officer on duty in one of the places named in the act, who is relieved from duty and given a sick leave or an ordinary leave, is not entitled to the 10 per cent increase in computing his pay after the date on which he leaves the place where the increased pay for service therein is authorized by law. 6 Comp. Dec., 948.

The provisions of the act in respect to the 10 per cent increase therein provided were special and peculiar, and while the 10 per cent increase would undoubtedly be included in the term "pay" as to officers serving in places named in the act, it would not be included in either of the terms "pay" or "allowances" as to officers not serving in such places.

In all the laws relating to contract surgeons they are clearly distinguished from officers of the Army. See sections 1 and 2, act of May 12, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 406); section 7, act of March 2, 1899, to increase the efficiency of the Army (30 Stat. L., 979), and the acts providing for mileage to officers traveling without troops and to con-

It has been uniformly held that a contract surgeon, also called acting assistant surgeon, is neither an officer nor an enlisted man and is not a member of the Army, but has the status of a civilian employee. See 26 Ct. Cls., 302; Dig. 2d Compt. Dec., vol. 3, sections 929, 932; 4 Compt. Dec., 631, 632; 5 Compt. Dec., 86, 275; 6 Compt. Dec., 356, 376, 403.

As a contract surgeon is neither an officer nor an enlisted man he is not entitled to increased pay under the act of May 26, 1900, supra. Dec. Compt. Treas., Oct. 19, 1900, Cir. 42 A. G. O., 1900.

The date on which a volunteer officer, appointed by the President, formally accepts his appointment should be considered as the date of the commencement of his military service. No such officer should be recognized as having been in the military service of the United States, under his appointment, because of any service that may have been rendered by him prior to his formal acceptance of that appointment.—Decision Sec. PAY DURING ABSENCE.

Pay during absence.
Aug. 3, 1861, c. 42, s. 20, v. 12, p. 290; Mar. 3, 1863, c. 75, s. 31, v. 12, p. 736; June 20, 1864, c. 145, s. 11, v. 13, p. 145; July 15, 1870, c. 294, s. 24, v. 16, p. 320; May 8, 1874, c. 154, v. 18, p. 43; July 29, 1876, c. 239, v. 19, p. 102.

826. Officers when absent on account of sickness or wounds, or lawfully absent from duty and waiting orders, shall receive full pay; when absent with leave, for other causes, full pay during such absence not exceeding in the aggregate thirty days in one year, and half-pay during such absence exceeding thirty days in one year. When absent without leave, they shall forfeit all pay during such absence, unless the absence is excused as unavoidable.[2] U. S. v. Williamson, 23, Wall., 411. Sec. 1265, R. S.

Leaves of absence on full pay.
July 29, 1876, v. 19, p. 102.

827. All officers on duty shall be allowed, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, sixty days' leave of absence without deduction of pay or allowance: Provided, That the same be taken once in two years: And provided further, That the leave of absence may be extended to three months, if taken once only in three years, or four months if taken only once in four years.[3] Act of July 29, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 102).

[1] The provision of section 1275, Revised Statutes, that an officer wholly retired shall receive, upon retirement, one year's pay and allowances, entitles such an officer to receive a sum equal to the total of one year's pay and all the pecuniary allowances of an officer of his rank. And held that the fact that an officer, at the time of being wholly retired, was under a sentence of suspension from rank and pay, did not affect his right to receive such full sum upon the retirement. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2198.

[2] Section 1265 of the Revised Statutes provides that an officer absent without leave shall forfeit all pay unless the absence is excused as unavoidable; the rule prevails whether a court-martial declares a forfeiture or not. Dodge v. U. S., 33 Ct. Cls., 28. The pay of an officer absent without leave is not absolutely forfeited, but only when it has been made to appear that the absence was not unavoidable. Smith v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 452. A statement by the Adjutant-General that an officer was "absent without leave" is conclusive as to his status, and is not affected by statements made by officers of the War Department implying the belief that the officer was not responsible for his absence. 3 Dig., 2d Compt. Dec., par. 2. The act of March 3, 1863, section 1265, Revised Statutes, provides that an officer absent without leave shall forfeit his pay. If payment has been made it may be recovered. Lapse of time does not preclude the Government from charging an officer with a payment made to him contrary to law. Crowell v. U. S., 22 Ct. Cls., 69.

[3] Section 1265 of the Revised Statutes was replaced by the act of May 8, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 43), which provided that "all officers on duty west of a line drawn north and south through Omaha City and north of a line drawn east and west upon the southern boundary of Arizona shall be allowed sixty days' leave of absence without deduction of pay or allowances: Provided, That the leave is taken but once in two years: And provided further, That the leave may be extended to three months if taken only once in three years, or four months if taken once only in four years." This statute was superseded by the act of July 29, 1876, above cited. For statutory provisions respecting leaves of absence to graduates of the Military Academy, see the chapter entitled THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

828. Leaves of absence which may be granted officers of the Regular and Volunteer Army serving in Alaska or without the limits of the United States, for the purpose of returning thereto, or which may have been granted such officers for such purpose since the thirteenth day of October, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, shall be regarded as taking effect on the dates such officers reached or may have reached the United States, respectively, and as terminating, or as having terminated, on the respective dates of their departure from the United States in returning to their commands as authorized by an order of the Secretary of War, dated October thirteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight.[1] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 902).

Section 31 of the act of March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. L., 736), does not apply to an officer ordered to proceed to his home and there await orders, though the order was issued at his own request. An officer "absent with leave" is at liberty to go where he will; an officer ordered to a particular place, there to await orders, must remain in that place and continue as much under orders as though assigned to any ordinary military duty. Williamson v. U. S., 10 Ct. Cls. 50, and 23 Wall., 411; Phisterer v. U. S., 11 Ct. Cls. 98, and 94 U. S., 219.

An officer ordered home to await orders may change his place of residence, reporting the fact to the War Department. Phisterer v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cls. 98. An officer ordered home to await orders can not make his home ambulatory by simply reporting from the places where he may chance to be. Chilson v. U. S., 11 Ct. Cls. 691.

[1] Leaves of absence will be granted in terms of months and days as "one month," "one month and ten days." Leave for one month, beginning on the first day of a calendar month, will expire with the last day of the month, whatever its number of days. Commencing on an intermediate day, the day will expire the day preceding the same day of the next month. The day of departure, whatever the hour, is counted as a day of duty; the day of return as a day of absence. Par. 63, A. R., 1901.

A leave of absence commences on the day following that on which the officer departs from his proper station. The expiration of his leave must find him at his post, except as indicated in paragraphs 1467 and 1484. A leave of absence granted an officer in the field, or on special duty, will take effect on the termination of the campaign, or on the completion of such duty, unless in the opinion of the department commander his services can sooner be spared, in which case it will take effect at such time as the department commander may direct. In all other cases an officer is expected to avail himself of a leave as soon as proper facilities offer, unless a specific date is stated in the order, and if unable to do so, he will report the fact to the authority granting the leave. Par. 64, ibid.

Held (1871), that an officer ordered to his home to await orders did not occupy the status of an officer on leave of absence, and was not therefore on half pay during the period of thus awaiting orders, but was entitled for such period to the full pay of his rank. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1906. This opinion was affirmed in the same case (United States v. Williamson) by the Court of Claims in 1873 (9 Ct. Cl. 503,) and by the Supreme Court in the next year (23 Wallace 411). But in the United States v. Phisterer, 4 Otto, 219, it was held that an officer ordered to his home to await orders was not entitled to commutation for quarters and fuel, his home not being a "station" in the sense of par. 1080, Army Regulations. See G. O. 78, Hdqrs. of Army, 1877, issued in consequence of this decision. But see the recent case of United States v. Lippitt, 10 Otto, 663, where the officer was ordered to the headquarters of a military department to await orders.

PAY DURING ABSENCE IN CONFINEMENT.

Officers and enlisted men in arrest and confinement by the civil authorities will receive no pay for the time of such absence; if released without trial, or after trial

Sec. 1266, R. S.

829. Every officer who is dropped by the President from the rolls of the Army, for absence from duty three months without leave, shall forfeit all pay due or to become due.

Commutation of quarters.
June 17, 1878, s. 9, v. 20, p. 151.

830. At all posts and stations where there are public quarters belonging to the United States, officers may be furnished with quarters in kind in such public quarters, and not elsewhere, by the Quartermaster's Department, assigning to the officers of each grade, respectively, such number of rooms as is now allowed to such grade by the rules and regulations of the Army: Provided, That at places where there are no public quarters, commutation[1] and acquittal, their right to pay for the time of such absence is restored. Par. 1464, A. R., 1901.

The fact that an officer or soldier is under charges does not by military law deprive him of his pay, although under the application of military rules exceptions may arise to this rule. Dodge v. U. S., 33 Ct. Cls., 28.

The pay of officers detained by the civil authorities continues, but an officer absent without leave in willful diregard of his obligation must be held responsible for the results. Ibid.

[1] Commutation in the military or naval service is money paid in substitution of something to which an officer, sailor, or soldier is entitled; being regulated by statutes and regulations, it can not be allowed by inferior authority. Jaegle v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls. 133. The right of an officer of the Army to commutation of fuel and quarters springs out of the general authority of the War Department, and has been indirectly sanctioned by Congress from the origin of the Government. This usage has been so long practiced in the Army, and so often sustained by Congress in appropriations for the payment of such commutations, that the right of officers under the regulations of the Army can not now be questioned. Whittlesey v. U. S., 5 Ct. Cls., 99. Since the foregoing decision was rendered the allowance of quarters for the several grades of officers of the Army and the monthly rate of commutation therefor having been fixed by statute the practice can no longer be said to rest upon usage or upon the authority of regulations. See acts of June 18, 1878, and June 23, 1879. See also Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1941.

Officers on the active list detailed as professors of colleges and engineer officers engaged upon civil works are entitled to commutation of quarters and to purchase fuel under the provisions of section 9 of the act of June 17, 1878. Such commutation in the case of an engineer officer would not be payable from the appropriation for the civil work upon which he is engaged. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., pars. 1915,1916. See also Long v. U. S., 8 Ct. Cls., 398. An officer ordered home to await orders is not entitled to commutation of quarters, such home not being a military station. Phisterer v. U. S., 13 Ct. Cls., 110. When a military officer is ordered to the headquarters of a military department to await further orders and pursuant to the order remains there, performing no duty, he is entitled to commutation of quarters. If such headquarters are in a large city where there are quarters assignable to officers on duty it is not necessary for him to demand that quarters be assigned him. Lippitt v. U. S., 14 Ct. Cls., 148, and 100 U. S., 663.

Held that the term of description in section 9 of the act of June 18, 1878, "at places where there are no public quarters" includes places where the public quarters were insufficient for all the officers of the command; and that officers stationed at such therefor may be paid by the Pay Department to the officer entitled to the same at a rate not exceeding twelve dollars per room per month, and the commutation for quarters allowed to the General shall be at the rate of one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month, and to the Lieutenant-General at the rate of one hundred dollars per month. Sec. 9, act of June 17, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 151).

Duty without troops. Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 901.

places, to whom, on account of the insufficiency of the existing accommodations, no quarters could be furnished would be entitled to the commutation allowance. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 569, par. 26.

An officer who has quarters in kind at one station does not by a change of station acquire a right to other quarters or commutation therefor until he vacates quarters at the former station, and amounts received for such commutation are a proper charge against him. 3 Dig. 2d Comp. Dec., par. 1139.

Temporary absence from his station on duty which requires an officer of the Army to travel during a considerable portion of the time does not amount to a change of station, and the officer does not lose his rights or acquire other rights respecting quarters by such absence. If there are available quarters at his station he is not entitled to commutation. Ibid., 1141.

Officers temporarily on duty in the field shall not lose their right to quarters or commutation thereof at their permanent stations while so temporarily absent. Act of July 16, 1892, 27 Stat. L., 176.

For allowance for rooms in kind see note 3 to paragraph 738 ante.

Where an army paymaster has paid an officer a sum as a commutation allowance through an error of law the United States is not bound by such payment, and may recover the money so paid in a proper action, with interest from the date when the officer's accounts were settled by the Treasury Department, at the rate established by the laws of the State in which the action is brought. U. S. v. Dempsey, 104 Fed. Rep., 197.

[1] Under the authority conferred by the act of March 3, 1901, it has been decided by the Secretary of War that "officers on duty in the War Department, at army and other general headquarters, attending surgeons and other officers on duty in cities and other places where public quarters are not furnished, but where enlisted men are on duty only as guards, orderlies, clerks, and messengers, and recruiting officers at city stations are regarded as being on duty without troops within the meaning of the laws and regulations." G. O. 43, A. G. O., 1901.

[2] The act of June 28, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 118), authorized commutation of quarters to be paid to officers and enlisted men of the Signal Service serving in the arctic regions, the same in amount as though they were serving in Washington in the District of Columbia. For regulations in respect to the payment of commutation of quarters to officers see paragraphs 1489 to 1496, Army Regulations of 1901.

Temporary absence.
Feb. 27, 1893, v. 27, p. 478.

Attachés, etc., Feb. 27, 1893, v. 27, p. 478.

835. Hereafter the officers detailed to obtain military information from abroad shall be entitled to mileage and transportation, and also to commutation of quarters while on duty, as provided when on other duty. Act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 478).

[1] Officers of the Army acting as Indian agents at places where there are suitable quarters provided by the Government are not entitled to commutation of quarters. 4 Compt. Dec., 210.

An officer relieved from duty at a station where he had quarters in kind and ordered to report in person for duty at a college during vacation is not entitled to commutation of quarters prior to the date on which he reports in person at the college. 4 Compt. Dec., 254.

An officer is not entitled to reimbursement for the amount paid for quarters when serving at a post where there are public quarters to which he could have been assigned by the Quartermaster's Department. 2 Compt. Dec., 187. Officers can not base claims to commutation of quarters on refusal or failure to occupy public quarters provided for their use. Ibid., 223.

Officers of the Army on the retired list who, upon their own application, are detailed to educational institutions, in accordance with the provisions of the act of November 3, 1893, are entitled to the full pay of their rank. 6 Compt. Dec., 120. Such officers are not entitled to commutation of quarters. Ibid., 506.

The act of May 12, 1898, which limits the compensation of contract surgeons to $150 per month, by implication prohibits the payment of commutation of quarters to contract surgeons. 6 Compt. Dec., 403. An officer who has been relieved from duty and directed to proceed to his home to await orders is not entitled to commutation of quarters. Ibid., 233.

[2] For instructions respecting the payment of commissioned officers see paragraphs 1298 to 1313, Army Regulations of 1895.

Section 1268 of the Revised Statutes, requires that officers shall be paid monthly; section 3848, Revised Statutes, in effect, forbids their being paid in advance. Their right, however, to assign their monthly pay, when duly accrued, has long been admitted. XV Opin. Att. Gen., 611. The prohibition by Army Regulations of the transfer of pay accounts before they are due implies the right to transfer them when or after due. XV Opin. Att. Gen., 271. The pay of an officer authorized to receive it can be paid by a paymaster only to the officer himself or his proper assignee. Where two or more persons produce assignments of an officer's pay, or of a portion or portions of the same, the paymaster should refuse to pay at all. The Government can not undertake to decide such controversies. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1923.

An officer will not hypothecate nor transfer a pay account not actually due. [a] When due it may be transferred by indorsement, naming the party to whom transferred, and may be paid by the proper paymaster if satisfied of the genuineness of the officer's signature and if no stoppage or other disability as to pay prevents. The date of transfer, certified by the officer whose account it is, will appear in the indorsement. When an officer transfers a pay account, he will, at the time of transfer, communicate the fact to the chief paymaster of the department, through the paymaster who is expected to pay it. If the officer be on leave, or if his accounts be payable

The assignment of their pay accounts by army officers after the same become due is authorized by paragraph 1300 of the Army Regulations of 1895, and is legal. 3 Compt. Dec., 45.

An officer's "pay account" is not commercial paper, but, in its legal aspect, a mere receipt.(a) So held that a bona fide assignee of an officer's pay account for a certain month, who, on receiving payment thereon from a paymaster, delivered to the latter the account with his name written on the back of same, did not thereby incur the obligation of an indorser, or render himself liable as such for the amount to the paymaster, on its being ascertained that the officer had already himself drawn his pay for that month, and that a double payment had thus been made. Dig. Opin., J. A. G., par. 1892.

It has been held by the Comptroller of the Treasury that the allotment of any portion of the pay of a commissioned officer constituted a violation of the requirements of section 3477, Revised Statutes. 6 Compt. [1] Section 1273, Revised Statutes, fixed the allowance of mileage at 10 cents per mile, to be computed over the nearest post route and to be paid by the Pay Department. The act of June 16, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 72), discontinued mileage as a method of reimbursement for expenses incurred in traveling on duty, and substituted therefor the payment of actual expenses in all cases of travel under orders. This provision was repeated in the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L. 452). The mileage allowance was restored and fixed at the rate of 8 cents per mile by the act of July 24, 1876 (19 Stat. L. 97), but was not payable when actual transportation had been furnished by the Quartermaster's Department, or in a conveyance owned or chartered by the United States, or on any railroad over which the troops and supplies of the United States were entitled to be transported free of charge; the distance in each case was to be computed by the shortest usually traveled route. Section 1273 was repealed by the act of July 24, 1876, above cited. The act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L.,456), contained the requirement that mileage should be computed over the shortest usually traveled routes between the points named in the order, and that the necessity for travel should be certified to, in each case, in the order directing the journey. The act of June 30, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 95), fixed the rate of mileage at 4 cents per mile, and, in addition thereto, the cost of transportation actually paid, exclusive of sleeping and parlor car fares. The act of February 9, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 396), contains the following provision: "That in disbursing this amount the maximum sum to be allowed and paid to an officer shall be four cents per mile, distance to be computed over the shortest usually traveled routes, and, in addition thereto, upon the officer's certificate that it was not practicable to obtain transportation from the Quartermaster's Department the cost of the transportation actually paid by the officer over said route or routes, exclusive of sleeping or parlor car fare and transfers: And provided further, That when any officer so traveling shall travel in whole or in part on any railroad on which the troops and supplies of the United States are entitled to be transported free of charge he shall be allowed for himself only four cents per mile as a subsistence fund for every mile necessarily traveled over any such last-named railroad. All the money hereinbefore appropriated except the appropriation for mileage to officers when traveling on duty without troops when authorized by law shall be disbursed and accounted for by the Pay Department as pay of the Army, and for that purpose shall constitute one fund," which was repeated in the acts of September 22, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 483), March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 827), June 13, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 151), February 24, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 773), July 14, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 177), and February 27, 1893. The acts of February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 657), and March 16, 1896 (29 ibid., 60), contain the same requirements. The act of March 2, 1897 (29 ibid., 612, 614), provided that actual transportation should be furnished by the Quartermaster's Department to officers traveling under orders, and that mileage only should be paid by the Pay Department. The act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 318), contained the requirement that "the maximum sum to be allowed and paid to any officer of the Army shall be seven cents per mile, distances to be computed by the shortest usually traveled route." By the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L.,1068), the foregoing requirement was made permanent. The act of March 15, 1898, also contained the proviso that "officers who, by reason of the decision of the accounting officers of the Treasury, have been compelled to pay from their own means one-half of the cost of their travel fare over railroads known as fifty per centum railroads shall be reimbursed the same by the Pay Department, and paymasters against whom disallowances have been made by the accounting officers of the Treasury, under such decision, shall have the amount so disallowed passed to their credit." For requirements of regulation in respect to travel on the public business, see paragraphs 77–84 and 1472–1488, Army regulations of 1901. See also pars. 842 to 851 post.

[2] This replaces a similar requirement in the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1068). In conformity to a decision of the Comptroller of the Treasury dated March 3, 1899, the following instructions have been promulgated by the Secretary of War in respect to the travel allowances of officers traveling without troops "to, from, and between" the insular possessions of the United States.

[1] Under the authority conferred by the act of March 3, 1901, it has been decided by the Secretary of War that "traveling with troops," in the sense here employed, will be regarded as covering all cases of officers included in orders for movement, in whatever manner, of their appropriate commands or in orders for movement of detachments, escorts, or stores which proceed by marches or by transportation belonging to or especially hired for the purpose by the United States, the idea being that in marches the officers should move as do the troops and that where transportation is specially devoted to the movement it is sufficient for all included therein. But the term will not be regarded as covering cases of officers included in the movement by railroad, stage, or like established lines of conveyances; of detachments of less than ten armed or unarmed men, such as guards and nurses for disabled or insane officers or soldiers; recruiting parties and escorts for inspectors, paymasters, and others, or the public funds or property in their charge, or of officers traveling on troop trains or transports, but not ordered to report to the commanding officer nor on duty with the troops or command on board, and such officers are not regarded as traveling with troops within the meaning of the laws and regulations. G. O. 43, A. G. O., 1901.

[2] The full 3 cents per mile deducted from the officer's mileage account must be turned over to the Quartermaster's Department and credited to the appropriation for transportation of the Army and its supplies in all cases where that Department has furnished the transportation, and this, too, without regard to the class of roads over which the transportation has been furnished.

If transportation is not furnished by the Quartermaster's Department its appropriation is not entitled to any credit.

The money turned over to an authorized officer of the Quartermaster's Department and credited to the appropriation for transportation of the Army and its supplies will be available for use to the same extent that it would be if it had been regularly appropriated. Dec. Compt. of Treasury of July 18, 1900. Circular 28, A. G. O., 1900. This provision authorizes army officers, before the commencement of a journey, under orders requiring travel without troops, to obtain actual transportation from the Quartermaster's Department, the cost of which will be deducted from the mileage authorized to be paid under paragraph 839. For regulations in furtherance of this requirement see G. O. 76, A. G. O., 1900.

troops and supplies of the United States are entitled to be transported free of charge, or over any of the bond-aided Pacific railroads, or over any fifty per centum land-grant railroad, officers traveling as herein provided for shall, for the travel over such roads, be furnished with transportation requests, exclusive of sleeping and parlor car accommodations, by the Quartermaster's Department. Ibid.

Deduction. Ibid.

845. When transportation is furnished by the Quartermaster's Department, or when the established route of travel is over any of the railroads above specified, there shall be deducted from the officer's mileage account by the paymaster paying the same three cents per mile for the distance for which transportation has been or should have been furnished.[1] Ibid.

Restriction on payment of mileage. Duty to be stated.
Aug. 6, 1894, v. 28, p. 237.

846. Hereafter no portion of the appropriation for mileage to officers traveling on duty without troops shall be expended for inspections or investigations, except such as are especially ordered by the Secretary of War, or such as are made by army and department commanders in visiting their commands, and those made by Inspector-General's Department in pursuance of law, army regulations, or orders issued by the Secretary of War or the Commanding General of the Army; and all orders involving the payment of mileage shall state the special duty enjoined.[2] Act of August 6, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 237).

[1] The act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 210), contained the following provision: "For traveling expenses and commutation of quarters for civilian physicians employed by the Surgeon-General, one thousand five hundred dollars."

[2] It is a well-established fact that persons traveling on Government business are entitled to be reimbursed for their expenses. This is done either by a mileage allowance, a fixed sum as a commutation of expenses, or an itemized statement showing actual expenses. Prior to 1874 mileage was the most usual measure of allowances. 4 Compt. Dec., 421. Mileage is a form of reimbursement, and "public business" is the foundation on which it rests. Perrimond v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 509. Allowances for travel and subsistence are payable to officers and agents of the United States only when they are employed at other places than their places of residence. Test v. U. S., ibid., 357. In fact, mileage is merely a commutation for traveling expenses. U. S. v. Smith, 158 U. S., 350.

The mileage allowance to an officer of the Army on the active list is fixed by law, the law in effect at the time the travel is performed and not the law in effect when the order for the travel is issued. 1 Compt. Dec., 29.

Except in cases of emergency, the right to mileage can not be conferred by an order issued after the journey has been performed. 4 Compt. Dec., 175. The law and regulations requiring a specific order prior to the commencement of the journey must be strictly complied with, and the officer must make the journey within a reasonable time in accordance with the order to acquire a right to mileage. Ibid.

An order to travel to a designated point, perform certain duty and return, is, in effect, two distinct orders, and the mileage allowances for each trip is fixed by the law at the time the travel in each case was commenced. 1 Compt. Dec., 29.

It is not necessary that an order to travel should specifically designate places and routes. It may leave them to the discretion of the officer, and the subsequent approval of the Department will be conclusive upon the accounting officers. Billings v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 166. If public business was an element in an officer's circuity of route, he is entitled to mileage therefor; if it was not, the Government is not answerable for the increased distance. Du Bose v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 514.

MILEAGE TO PAYMASTERS' CLERKS AND TO THE EXPERT ACCOUNTANT OF THE INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Travel allowances to paymasters' clerks and to expert accountant. Feb. 27, 1893, v. 27, p. 480.

817. That hereafter the maximum sum to be allowed paymasters' clerks and the expert accountant of the Inspector-General's Department when traveling on duty shall be four cents per mile, and, in addition thereto, when transportation can not be furnished by the Quartermaster's Department the cost of same actually paid by them, exclusive of sleeping or parlor car fare and transfers. Act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 480).

Where the route is left to the discretion of the officer, his mileage should be calculated by the shortest usually traveled route, unless some good reason be shown for deviation. Crosby v. U. S., 22 Ct. Cls., 13. 2 Compt. Dec., 544.

The question as to the shortest usually traveled route between any two points is a question of fact, and to be determined by the best obtainable evidence. * * * The time required in making the journey, the rates of fare, and the fact that an officer should be absent from his post of duty for the shortest possible period are important elements in determining the shortest usually traveled route in any particular case.

Evidence should accompany the voucher on which payment is made, to establish the fact that the distance is computed by the route which, for the time and occasion, is the shortest usually traveled route. Mileage can in no case be allowed for any distance in excess of the distance actually traveled, and if the distance actually traveled exceed the distance by the shortest usually traveled route, mileage can be allowed only for the distance by the shortest usually traveled route. 1 Compt. Dec., 115.

The mileage of an officer of the Army is to be computed by the shortest usually traveled route regardless of the number of miles actually traveled, unless the orders under which he travels, or the necessities of the service (and not the mere convenience of the officer), require the use of a route longer than that usually traveled. 2 ibid., 544. See also 1 ibid., 118, 209; 4 ibid., 74; 5 ibid., 196.

When it appears that an army officer was directed to travel on military duty and had no order to stop over, or delay on his journey, it must be presumed by the accounting officers that he was directed to go by the shortest usually traveled route, without unnecessary delay, and he will be allowed only the cost of "through limited tickets" for such travel. The accounting officers look to the officer's orders as to the necessity for delay en route, not questioning the authority of the War Department to determine whether the officer's duty requires that he shall stop over on his journey. 3 Dig. Dec., 2nd Compt., par. 1426.

The law relating to the cost of transportation contemplates that army officers traveling on duty without troops shall travel over the usually traveled routes in the mode usually adopted and by the conveyances usually employed. The exigencies of the service should be of an unusual character, not admitting of even the possibility of delay, to justify the officer in engaging the more costly transportation on fast or limited trains. Ibid., 1429.

An officer ordered home, at his own request, to await orders, is entitled to mileage from his post to his home, such a journey constituting travel under orders. Williamson v. U. S., 23 Wall., 411; Phisterer v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cls., 98, and 94 U. S., 219. Where an officer who has received but has not yet taken advantage of a leave of absence is ordered to convey prisoners to another post his leave is to that extent suspended, and he is entitled to mileage. Andrews v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 264.

The Army Regulations provide that the expiration of an officer's leave of absence must find him at his station. His station means his permanent station, not a place to which he was temporarily ordered and at which he accepted his leave of absence. Andrews v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 264. An officer's proper station can not be changed by his being ordered to perform a temporary duty while on leave of absence. Ibid. If an officer on leave of absence be ordered to temporary duty at the place where he may happen to be, and he be kept there until after his leave of absence expires and Payments to be made by Pay Department. June 30, 1886, v. 24, p. 95.

848. All the money hereinbefore appropriated (for pay, travel allowances, and commutation of quarters) shall be disbursed by the Pay Department of the Army, and for that purpose shall constitute one fund.[1] Act of June 30, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 95).

PAYMENTS OF MILEAGE TO BE MADE BY PAYMASTERS.

Mileage to be paid by Pay Department. July 15, 1870, s. 24, v. 16, p. 320. Sec. 1273, R.S.

849. No payment [of mileage] shall be made to any officer except by a paymaster of the Army.

TRAVEL PAY ON DISCHARGE.

Travel pay on discharge. Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 902. Sec. 1289, R.S.

850. Hereafter when an officer shall be discharged from the service, except by way of punishment for an offense, he shall receive for travel allowances from the place of his discharge to the place of his residence at the time of his appointment or to the place of his original muster into the service four cents per mile; and an enlisted man when discharged from the service, except by way of punishment for an offense, shall receive four cents per mile from the then be ordered to his proper station, he will not be entitled to mileage. Barr v. U. S., 14 Ct. Cls., 272.

An officer who voluntarily quits the military service is not entitled to travel pay. 1 Compt. Dec., 370.

An officer whose resignation, tendered on the ground of physical disability, is accepted, becomes entitled to travel pay, provided the disability did not exist at the time of his entering the service, or was not incurred on account of his own misconduct during service. The length of service is material evidence in determining whether the disability existed prior to entry into the service. Ibid.

[1] All subsequent acts of appropriation for the support of the Army have contained a similar provision. The acts of appropriation of May 26, 1900, and March 3, 1901, except from the foregoing clause the appropriations for mileage of officers when authorized by law.

While the act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 318), does not make it the duty of officers to use those railroads from which a benefit will accrue to the Government, it is no doubt within the authority of the Secretary of War, by regulation, to direct their use whenever practicable. 5 Compt. Dec., 196. An officer who actually travels over any of the railroads mentioned in the act, and having failed to secure transportation in kind, pays his own fare, is entitled to be reimbursed so much as it would have cost the Government had a request been used. When an officer travels over any of the railroads included in the act it will be presumed, in the absence of affirmative evidence to the contrary, that he has been furnished with a transportation request. Ibid. The cost of a local ticket, of the class obtained, between points for which transportation in kind is furnished should be deducted from the mileage allowance. Ibid.

An officer of the Army traveling under orders and using a conveyance upon which transportation and subsistence are furnished or paid for by the Government is not entitled to mileage. 4 Compt. Dec., 429. See also Ibid., 86.

Sleeping-car service is not a necessary incident to transportation, but must usually be considered as lodging, yet special circumstances may appear showing a legislative intent to include such service as a part of transportation. In ordinary cases where subsistence is excluded from traveling expenses such exclusion must be held to cover sleeping-car service on the ground that it is lodging and a part of subsistence. 4 Compt. Dec., 420.

The provision in the act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 321), that the maximum sum to be allowed and paid to "any officer of the Army" shall be 7 cents per mile applies to all officers of the Army, including officers of the Corps of Engineers. 4 Compt. Dec., 711.

place of his discharge to the place of his enlistment, enrollment, or original muster into the service.[1] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 902).

Sea travel. Ibid.

851. For sea travel on discharge actual expenses only shall be paid to officers and transportation and subsistence only shall be furnished to enlisted men. Ibid.

STOPPAGES.

Repairs to arms, etc.
Feb. 8, 1815, s. 7, v. 3, p. 204.
Sec. 1303, R.S.

852. The cost of repairs or damages done to arms, equipments, or implements shall be deducted from the pay of any officer or soldier in whose care or use the same were when such damages occurred, if said damages were occasioned by the abuse or negligence of said officer or soldier.[2]

[1] An officer who voluntarily quits the military service is not entitled to travel pay. 1 Compt. Dec., 370.

An officer whose resignation, tendered on the ground of physical disability, is accepted, becomes entitled to travel pay, provided the disability did not exist at the time of his entering the service, or was not incurred on account of his own misconduct during service. The length of service is material evidence in determining whether the disability existed prior to entry into the service. Ibid.

Under section 1289 of the Revised Statutes an officer of the Volunteer Army is entitled to travel pay from the place of his discharge to the place where he accepted his appointment, but is not entitled to mileage on his discharge. 5 Compt. Dec., 113.

An officer or soldier who is discharged for his own convenience is not entitled to travel pay or allowances. Ibid., 113.

An officer who is ordered to proceed to his home and is discharged, to take effect at a subsequent date, is entitled to mileage, but not to travel pay. Ibid., 87. See also ibid., 705.

Under section 1289 of the Revised Statutes, an officer of the Volunteer Army is entitled to travel allowances from the place of his discharge to the place where he accepted his appointment, but is not entitled to mileage on his discharge. Ibid., 113.

An order retiring an officer from active service in the Army, which contains no direction for him to proceed to his home, can not be regarded as an order directing him to perform the journey so as to confer a right to mileage. 4 ibid., 175.

[2] The pay of an officer or soldier can not be subjected to stoppage except by the authority of a statute or regulation specifically authorizing the same or of a sentence of court-martial imposing a forfeiture or fine as a punishment, or where the party has become indebted to the United States on account. In a case of supposed liability to stoppage, resulting from a neglect or an act chargeable as a military offense, and as to which the facts are disputed, it is in general preferable to have the case investigated and the actual pecuniary liability, if any, fixed by a trial by court-martial. A superior is not authorized to stop against the pay of an inferior the value of property charged to have been criminally misappropriated; and it is the experience of the Judge-Advocate-General that most or many of the cases of loss of or injury to public property in which the facts have been investigated and the damage assessed by boards of survey, would have been more profitably passed upon by courts-martial, by which, instead of a stoppage, a forfeiture could have been imposed, as a punishment, by sentence. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 719, par. 1. See also ibid, p. 720, pars. 2, 4, 5; 721 ibid., par. 8.

By operation of law, indeed, under certain express statutory provisions, an officer's or soldier's pay may be withheld altogether, or temporarily, or be subjected to certain charges and thus reduced. Thus, by section 1265, Revised Statutes, an officer absent without leave forfeits all pay during the period of his absence, unless the same be excused as unavoidable. By section 1266, an officer dropped from the rolls for an unauthorized absence of three months is required to "forfeit all pay due or to become due." Section 1766 prohibits the payment of his compensation to any person while he continues "in arrears to the United States." Sections 1303 and 1304 require in effect that the cost of damage done to arms, etc., and the value of military stores found deficient, shall, except where the loss is occasioned by no personal fault of the party, be charged against the pay of the officer or soldier responsible for the damage or deficiency. Ibid, par. 1901.

May 18, 1826, s. 3, v. 4. p. 174.
Sec. 1304, R. S.

853. In case of deficiency of any article of military supplies, on final settlements of the accounts of any officer charged with the issue of the same, the value thereof shall be charged against the delinquent and deducted from his monthly pay, unless he shall show to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War, by one or more depositions setting forth the circumstances of the case, that said deficiency was not occasioned by any fault on his part. And in case of damage to any military supplies, the value of such damage shall be charged against such officer and deducted from his monthly pay, unless he shall, in like manner, show that such damage was not occasioned by any fault on his part.[1]

Rations, etc., purchased on credit.
Mar. 3, 1865, s. 5, v. 13, p. 497.
July 28, 1866, s. 25, v. 14, p. 336.
Sec. 1299, R. S.

854. The amount due from any officer for rations purchased on credit, or for any article designated by the inspectors-general of the Army and purchased on credit from commissaries of subsistence, shall be deducted from the payment made to such officer next after such purchase shall have been reported to the Paymaster-General.

Officer in arrears.
Jan. 25, 1828, c. 2, v. 4, p. 246.
May 20, 1836, c. 77, v. 5, p. 31.
Sec. 1766, R. S.

855. No money shall be paid to any person for his compensation who is in arrears[2] to the United States until he has accounted for and paid into the Treasury all sums for which he may be liable. In all cases where the pay or salary of any person is withheld in pursuance of this section, the accounting officers of the Treasury, if required to do so by the party, his agent or attorney, shall report forthwith to the Solicitor of the Treasury the balance due; and the Solicitor shall, within sixty days thereafter, order suit to be commenced against such delinquent and his sureties.

[1] The power given to the Secretary of War to order a stoppage of pay against a delinquent officer is exclusive and discretionary, but is not to be asserted against an officer acting under an order which he is bound to obey, and as to which he is expressly relieved from personal liability. Such an abuse of power would not tend to preserve but to subvert military order and discipline. The refusal of the Secretary of War to stop an officer's pay is not a decision upon the merits; it will not bind the Government nor preclude the Comptroller from causing a suit to be brought against the officer; it merely determines that the officer is so far without fault that the harsh and summary remedy of stopping his pay should not be resorted to. Smith v. U. S., 24 Ct. Cls., 209, 215; Billings v. U. S., 23 ibid., 166, 175.

Where a paymaster receives no notice of stoppage and innocently pays an officer, the overpayment must be recovered from the officer. Smith v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 452.

When an officer has been overpaid, or is indebted to the United States for money or property, or has failed properly to account for the same, the chief of the bureau concerned will promptly notify him of the amount of his indebtedness, or his failure to account. If after such notice he does not refund, or make satisfactory explanation, or take proper action within a reasonable time, the matter will be reported to the Secretary of War. Par. 1497, A. R., 1901.

On the order of the Secretary of War, stoppages may be made against the pay of officers for overpayments, illegal disbursement, or loss through fraud or neglect of the public funds, and for deficiencies in, loss of, or damage to, military supplies, unless proof be furnished that the deficiency, loss, or damage was not occasioned by any fault on their part. Par. 1498, ibid.

The notice of stoppage of officers' pay will be prepared in the form of a monthly circular to paymasters, advising them of stoppages outstanding at its date. This circular will be submitted to the Secretary of War for his approval prior to its publication. When an officer's name is borne thereon, no payment of salary will be made to him which is not in accordance with the stoppage entry made against his name. Par. 1499, ibid.

Overpayments to an officer will be deducted on the first payment after a notice of stoppage against him is received, even if the pay accounts have been assigned. Par. 1500, ibid.

[2] Persons in "arrears," are only such, as having previous transactions of a pecuniary nature with the Government, are found, upon the settlement of these transactions, to be in arrears to it. III Opin. Att. Gen., 52. This section only applies to cases in which the party who claims compensation is liable to the United States. Hedrick v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 88.

Withholding officers' pay.
July 16, 1892, v. 27, p. 177.
Sec. 1766, R. S.

856. The pay of officers of the Army may be withheld under section seventeen hundred and sixty-six of the Revised Statutes on account of an indebtedness to the United States admitted or shown by the judgment of a court, but not otherwise, unless upon a special order issued according to the discretion of the Secretary of War.[1] Act of July 16, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 177).

PAY OF HOSPITAL MATRONS AND FEMALE NURSES.

Matrons.

Nurses, reserve nurses.
Ibid.

859. The pay and allowances of nurses and reserve nurses, when on active service, shall be forty dollars per month when on duty in the United States, and fifty dollars per month when without the limits of the United States. Ibid.

Chief nurses.
Ibid.

860. When serving as chief nurses, their pay may be increased by authority of the Secretary of War, such increase not to exceed twenty-five dollars per month. Ibid.

Payments.
Ibid.

861. Payments to the Nurse Corps shall be made by the Pay Department. Ibid.

[2] Section 9 ibid.

[3] The monthly pay of hospital stewards fixed at $45, and that of acting hospital stewards at $25, by the act of March 1, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 435). The pay of privates of the Hospital Corps was fixed at $18 per month by the act of July 13, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 120).

[4] The monthly pay of post commissary-sergeants was fixed at $34 by the act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat. L., 485), and that of post quartermaster-sergeants at the same rate by the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 107).

[5] The pay of sergeants of the first class in the Signal Corps was fixed at $45 per month by the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653). The pay of sergeants of the second class in the Signal Corps was fixed at $34 per month by the act of June 20, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 219).

The enlisted men of the Army Service Corps, stationed at the Military Academy, receive the same pay and allowances as enlisted men of corresponding grades in the artillery. Act of June 20, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653). See the chapters entitled ENLISTED MEN and THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

[6] The pay of first and second class privates of the Signal Corps was fixed by section 3, act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364).

Artificers, cavalry, artillery, and infantry, fifteen dollars.

Wagoners, cavalry, artillery, and infantry, fourteen dollars.

ADDITIONAL PAY.

Additional pay, May 15, 1872, s. 2, v. 17, p. 116. March 16, 1896, v. 29, p. 60. Sec. 1281, R.S.

863. To the rates of pay stated in the preceding section one dollar per month shall be added for the third year of enlistment, one dollar more per month for the fourth year, and one dollar more per month for the fifth year, making in all three dollars' increase per month for the last year of the first enlistment of each enlisted man named in said section.[2]

Pay of chief musicians. Sec. 3, Aug. 1, 1894, v. 28, p. 216.

864. The chief musicians of regiments shall receive sixty dollars a month and the allowances of a quartermaster-sergeant.[3]

Pay of Indian scouts; allowance for horses. July 28, 1866, c. 299, s. 6, v. 14, p. 333; Aug. 12, 1876, v. 19, p. 131. Sec. 1276, R.S.

865. Indians, enlisted or employed by order of the President as scouts, shall receive the pay and allowances of cavalry soldiers. That so much of the army appropriation act of twenty-fourth July, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, as limits the number of Indian scouts to three hundred is hereby repealed; and sections ten hundred and ninety-four and eleven hundred and twelve of the Revised Statutes, authorizing the employment of one thousand Indian scouts, are hereby continued in force: Provided, That a proportionate number of noncommissioned officers may be appointed. And the scouts, when they furnish their own horses and horse equipments, shall be entitled to receive forty cents per day for their use and risk so long as thus employed. Act of August 12, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 131).

[1] The additional pay of gunners was fixed by section 7, act of February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 749).

[2] It was provided by the act of May 15, 1872 (17 Stat. L., 116), that this increase should be considered as retained pay, and should not be paid to the soldier until his discharge from the service, and should be forfeited unless his service was honest and faithful to the date of discharge. By the act of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 60), it was enacted that thereafter no pay should be retained.

[3] By the terms of section 3, act of August 1, 1894 (28 Stat L., 216), chief musicians, artificers, and wagoners theretofore excluded from the benefits of the act of May 15, 1872 (paragraphs 643, 644 post), became entitled to said benefits.

PAY OF ENLISTED MEN IN CONFINEMENT BY CIVIL AUTHORITY.

In view of the "pay status of (officers and) enlisted men withdrawn from duty by arrest and confinement by the civil authorities," as established by par. 1464, A. R., 1901—held that an enlisted man had no claim for his pay for a period during which he was detained by the civil authorities in arrest and for trial, although his offense was shown to have been a slight one and he was convicted of an offense of much less gravity than that with which he was charged.

WAR INCREASE—INCREASE FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

War increase. Apr. 26, 1898. s. 6, v. 30, p. 262,

866. In time of war the pay proper of enlisted men shall be increased twenty per centum over and above the rates of pay as fixed by law.[1] Sec. 6, act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 262).

Foreign service. Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 903.

867. Hereafter the pay proper of all * * * enlisted men serving beyond the limits of the States comprising the Union, and the Territories of the United States contiguous thereto, shall be increased * * * twenty per centum for enlisted men over and above the rates of pay proper as fixed by law for time of peace, and the time of such service shall be counted from the date of departure from said States to the date of return thereto.[2] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 903).

RETAINED PAY.[3]

No pay to be retained hereafter Mar. 16, 1896, v 19, p. 50.

867a. Hereafter no pay shall be retained; but this provision shall not apply to deductions authorized on account of the Soldiers' Home. Act of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 60).

[1] It has been decided by the Comptroller of the Treasury that the increase of 20 per cent authorized by section 6 of the act of April 26, 1898, is to be computed upon the minimum rates of pay, or pay proper, allowed by law to the several grades of enlisted men. All increases in or additions to the pay of enlisted men, as for reenlistment, length of service, certificates of merit, and the like are to be excluded from the computation. 4 Compt. Dec., 668.

[2] This enactment replaces a requirement in pari materia which was contained in the act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 211). The act of March 3, 1901, also contains a provision that "the officers and enlisted men who have served in China at any time since the twenty-sixth day of May, nineteen hundred, shall be allowed and paid for such service the same increase of pay proper as is herein provided for." The statute last named also contains the requirement that "enlistments in the Regular Army on and after April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, from which date war was declared to have existed between the United States and Spain, up to and including April twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, shall be deemed enlistments for the war with Spain, and shall entitle men so enlisting to the extra pay and on the same conditions granted to men who enlisted in the Regular Army subsequent to the declaration of war, for the war only, as provided by an act approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Regular and Volunteer Army for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred."

[3] By the acts of May 15, 1872 (17 Stat. L., 116, sec. 1281, Revised Statutes), and June 16, 1890 (26 ibid., 157), certain portions of the monthly pay of enlisted men were retained by the United States. The sums so retained were paid to the soldier at discharge, with interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the several dates of retention, provided the service of the soldier had been honest and faithful, and the Secretary of War was authorized to determine what misconduct on the part of the soldier should "constitute a failure to render honest and faithful service" within the meaning of the statute. It was provided, however, that "no soldier who has deserted at any time during the term of an enlistment shall be deemed to have served such term honestly and faithfully" (26 Stat. L., 157). The practice of retaining pay was discontinued as to enlisted men in the first year of their enlistments by the act of February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 654), and as to enlisted men generally by the act of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 60). Since March 16, 1896, the several statutes respect-

REENLISTMENT AND CONTINUOUS SERVICE PAY.

May 15, 1872, c. 160, s. 3, v. 17, p. 116; Aug. 4, 1854, c. 247, s. 2, v. 10, p. 575; Aug. 1, 1894, v. 28, p. 215.
Sec. 1282, R.S.

868. All enlisted men mentioned in section twelve hundred and eighty, who, having been honorably discharged have reenlisted or shall reenlist within three months thereafter, shall, after five years' service, including their first enlistment, be paid at the rate allowed in said section to those serving in the fifth year of their first enlistment.[1] Act of August 1, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 215).

Continuous service pay.
Reenlistment.
Aug. 4, 1854, c. 247, s. 2, v. 10, p. 575: May 15, 1872, c. 160, s. 4, v. 17, p. 117; Aug. 1, 1894, s. 3, v. 28, p. 215.
Sec. 1284, R.S.

869. Every soldier who, having been honorably discharged, reenlists within three months thereafter, shall be further entitled, after five years' service, including his first enlistment, to receive, for the period of five years next thereafter, two dollars per month in addition to the ordinary pay of his grade; and for each successive period of five years of service, so long as he shall remain continuously in the Army, a further sum of one dollar per month. The past continuous service of soldiers now in the Army shall be taken into account, and shall entitle such soldier to additional pay according to this rule; but services rendered prior to August fourth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, shall in no case be accounted as more than one enlistment.[2]

Period extended to three months.
R. S., secs. 1282, 1284, amended.
Aug. 1, 1894, s. 3, v. 28, p. 215.

870. The period within which soldiers may reenlist with the benefits conferred by sections twelve hundred and eighty-two and twelve hundred and eighty-four[3] of the Revised Statutes, be, and the same is hereby, extended to three months; and hereafter every enlisted man in the Army, excepting general service clerks and general service messengers, shall be entitled to all the benefits conferred by sections twelve hundred and eighty-one[4] and twelve ing the retention of pay of enlisted men have applied only in the settlement of the accounts in cases where retained pay had accrued prior to the passage of the act of March 16, 1896. (a)

[1] The authority to retain pay conferred by section 1281, Revised Statutes (paragraph 639, ante), was withdrawn as to all enlisted men by the act of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., p. 60). See par. 642, ante.

[2] The right of a soldier, under section 1284 of the Revised Statutes, to $1 per month additional pay for ten years' service does not depend merely upon the ten years' service, but upon an honorable discharge and a second reenlistment. The increase can be allowed only for services rendered after the enlistment, and the principle applies to subsequent reenlistments. 1 Compt. Dec., 459; 3 Dig. Dec. 2d Compt., 967; Webb v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 58. By section 1286, Revised Statutes, $2 per month additional pay was allowed to certain noncommissioned officers who served in the war with Mexico.

a Retained pay is authorized by law. The Secretary of War has no control over it. He only determines whether the service has been honest and faithful. The operation of the law follows immediately upon his decision, and either vests in the soldier the right to receive the pay or deprives him of it, according to the character of the service he has rendered. 3 Dig. 2d Compt. ALLOTMENTS OF PAY BY ENLISTED MEN.

Allotments of pay by enlisted men.
Mar. 2, 1899, s. 16, v. 30, p. 981.

871. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to permit enlisted men of the United States Army to make allotments of their pay, under such regulations as he may prescribe, for the support of their families or relatives, for their own savings, or for other purposes, during such time as they may be absent on distant duty, or under other circumstances warranting such action.[3] Sec. 16, act of March 2, 1889 (30 Stat. L., 981).

Credit for allotments.
May 26, 1900, v. 31, p. 200.

872. All allotments of pay of enlisted men of the United States Army, under section sixteen of act of Congress approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, that have been or shall be paid to the designated allottees after the expiration of one month subsequent to the month in which said allotments accrued shall pass to the credit of the disbursing officer who has made or shall make such payment: Provided, That said disbursing officer shall, before making payment of said allotments, use, or shall have used, due diligence in obtaining and making use of all information that may have been received in the War Department relative to the grantors of the allotments: And provided further, That if an erroneous payment is made because of the failure of an officer responsible for such report to report, in the manner prescribed by the Secretary of War, the death of a grantor or any fact which renders the allotment not payable, then the amount of such erroneous payment shall be collected by the Paymaster-General from the officer who fails to make such report, if such collection is practicable. Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 206).

[1] Paragraphs 868 and 869, ante.

[2] Page 863, ante. Section 1283, Revised Statutes, contains the provision that enlisted men, now in the service, shall receive the rates of pay established in this chapter according to the length of their service.

The act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 478), which prohibited the reenlistment of privates of over ten years' service or who were over 35 years old, except such as had served as enlisted men for twenty years or upward, was repealed by the act of August 1, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 215), and the provisions of section 1284, Revised Statutes, were extended to all enlisted men in the Army, except general-service clerks and messengers. See also pars. 1528, 1529, and 1530, A. R., 1901.

Held that the additional pay upon reenlistment accorded to soldiers by section 1284, Revised Statutes, was intended as a compensation for long and continued military service, without reference to the kind of service or the corps in which it was rendered; and therefore that, where this additional pay had once begun to accrue to a soldier by reason of his having entered, in accordance with the provisions of the section, upon a second term of five years' service in the infantry, his continued right to the same was not interrupted by his being discharged from the infantry and (on the next day) enlisted in the Ordnance Corps. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1911.

A soldier who reenlisted more than three months after the expiration of his previous term of enlistment is not entitled to the additional pay provided by section 1281, Revised Statutes, as amended by section 3 of the act of August 1, 1894, for reenlisting within three months, notwithstanding that, by reason of sickness, his reenlistment was antedated, by direction of the Major-General Commanding the Army, so as to bring it within the limitation of three months; nor to regular pay prior to his actual reenlistment. 6 Compt. Dec., 754.

[3] Under section 16 of the act of March, 1899, which authorizes the Secretary of War to permit enlisted men of the Army to make allotments of their pay, payment in advance, or without evidence that the soldier is entitled to the amount allotted at the time the payment is to be made, is not authorized. 6 Compt. Dec., 252.

Payments. Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 896.

873. Hereafter all allotments of pay of enlisted men of the United States Army, under section sixteen of act of Congress approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, that have been or shall be paid to the designated allottees, after the expiration of one month subsequent to the month in which said allotments accrued, shall pass to the credit of the disbursing officer who has made or shall make such payment. Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 896).

The same.

874. Said disbursing officer shall, before making payment of said allotments, use, or shall have used, due diligence in obtaining and making use of all information that may have been received in the War Department relative to the grantors of the allotments. Ibid.

Ibid.

Erroneous payments.

875. If an erroneous payment is made because of the failure of an officer responsible for such report to report, in the manner prescribed by the Secretary of War, the death of a grantor or any fact which renders the allotment not payable, then the amount of such erroneous payment shall be collected by the Paymaster-General from the officer who fails to make such report, if such collection is practicable.[1] Ibid.

Ibid.

PAY OF RETIRED ENLISTED MEN.

Retired enlisted men. War service; how computed. Sec. 1283, R. S. Sept. 30, 1890, v. 26, p. 504; Mar. 16, 1896, v. 29, p. 62.

876. That when an enlisted man has served as such thirty years in the United States Army or Marine Corps, either as private or noncommissioned officer, or both, he shall, by application to the President, be placed on the retired list hereby created, with the rank held by him at the date of retirement, and he shall receive thereafter seventy-five per centum of the pay and allowances of the rank upon which he was retired: Provided, That if said enlisted man had war service with the Army in the field, or in the Navy or Marine Corps in active service, either as volunteer or regular, during the war of the rebellion, such war service shall be computed as double time in computing the thirty years necessary to entitled him to be retired.[1] Act of September 30, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 504).

[1] For requirements of regulations in respect to allotments of pay by enlisted men, and payments of the same to the designated allottees, see paragraphs 1531 to 1544, Army Regulations of 1901. Under the authority conferred by the above statutes the privilege of making allotments of pay is restricted to enlisted men and does not extend to commissioned officers.

Credit for foreign service. May 26, 1900, v. 31, p. 209.

877. Hereafter in computing length of service for retirement, credit shall be given the soldier for double the time of his actual service in Porto Rico, Cuba, or in the Philippine Islands. Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 209).

Allowances of retired enlisted men. Mar. 16, 1896, v. 29, p. 62.

PAY OF VOLUNTEERS AND MILITIA.

Pay and allowances of volunteers, etc. Apr. 22, 1898, s. 12, v. 30, p. 363. Sec. 1292, R.S.

878a. All officers and enlisted men of the Volunteer Army, and of the militia of the States when in the service of the United States, shall be in all respects on the same footing as to pay, allowances, and pensions as that of officers and enlisted men of corresponding grades in the Regular Army.[3] Sec. 12, act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 363).

DEPOSITS.

Deposits of soldiers' savings. May 15, 1872, c. 161, s. 1, v. 17, p. 117; Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 456. Sec. 1305, R.S.

879. Any enlisted man of the Army may deposit his savings, in sums not less than five dollars, with any army paymaster, who shall furnish him a deposit book, in which shall be entered the name of the paymaster and of the soldier, and the amount, date, and place of such deposit. The money so deposited shall be accounted for in the same manner as other public funds, and shall pass to the credit of the appropriation for the pay of the Army, and shall not be subject to forfeiture by sentence of court-martial, but shall be forfeited by desertion, and shall not be permitted to be paid until final payment on discharge, or to the heirs or representatives of a deceased soldier, and that such deposit be exempt from liability for such soldier's debts: Provided, That the Government shall be liable for the amount deposited to the person so depositing the same.[1]

Certificate of merit.
Feb. 2, 1891, v. 26, p. 737.
Sec. 1285, R.S.

883. A certificate of merit granted to an enlisted man for distinguished service shall entitle him, from the date of such service, to additional pay at the rate of two dollars per month while he is in the military service, although such service may not be continuous. Sec. 2, act of February 9, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 737).

PAY DURING ABSENCE.

Furloughs.
Eleventh Article of War.

884. Every officer commanding a regiment or an independent troop, battery, or company, not in the field, may, when actually quartered with such command, grant furloughs to the enlisted men in such numbers and for such time as he shall deem consistent with the good of the service. Every officer commanding a regiment, or an independent troop, battery, or company, in the field, may grant furloughs, not exceeding thirty days at one time, to five per centum of the enlisted men for good conduct in the line of duty, but subject to the approval of the commander of the forces of which said enlisted men form a part. Every company officer of a regiment, commanding any troop, battery, or company not in the field, or commanding in any garrison, fort, post, or barrack, may, in the absence of his field officer, grant furloughs to the enlisted men, for a time not exceeding twenty days in six months, and not to more than two persons to be absent at the same time.[1] Eleventh Article of War.

[1] The act of June 16, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 157), contains the requirement that the sums retained from the monthly pay of enlisted men under sections 1281 and 1282, Revised Statutes, shall be treated as deposits upon which interest shall be paid in accordance with sections 1305, 1306, 1307, and 1308, Revised Statutes.

[2] Amended by the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 456), so as to authorize the deposit, at interest, of sums not less than $5 in amount.

[3] For regulations respecting deposits, see paragraphs 1371–1378, Army Regulations of 1895.

Held, under section 1306, Revised Statutes, that a soldier, having savings on deposit as authorized by section 1305, Revised Statutes, was not entitled to interest on the same after the date of the approval of a sentence imposing upon him a dishonorable discharge; although such discharge, by reason of the soldier being subjected to a term of confinement adjudged by the same sentence, was not delivered personally to the soldier but to the commanding officer to retain in trust for him pending his confinement. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1052.

Section 1305, Revised Statutes, provides for the deposit by an enlisted man of his savings with a paymaster, to be paid over to him upon discharge. Held that this statute provided for voluntary deposits only; and that an officer, however laudable his motive, was not legally authorized in thus depositing, against the will of a soldier, certain money in his hands belonging to the latter. Ibid., par. 1913.

Absence without leave. Thirty-second Article of War.

885. Any soldier who absents himself from his troop, battery, or company, or detachment, without leave from his commanding officer, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.[2] Thirty-second Article of War.

[1] For instructions in respect to the issue of furloughs see paragraphs 116–124, Army Regulations, 1901. Enlisted men on furlough suffer no deduction of pay in consequence of their authorized absence. They are paid on their return to duty, and can only be paid, while absent on furlough, with the authority of the Secretary of War.

[2] An enlisted man who has absented himself from his post or company without authority is subjected to the forfeiture of pay and allowances prescribed by paragraph 144 of the Army Regulations of 1901, although not brought to trial for his absence as an offense. The forfeiture is a stoppage by operation of law, irrespective of any punishment that may be imposed, and whether any be imposed or not. Thus a soldier acquitted under a charge of desertion is acquitted of the absence without leave involved in the charge, and can not be punished therefor; but, if he has been absent without leave in fact, he incurs the forfeiture specified in the regulation. And a soldier brought to trial for, and convicted of, an absence without leave is subject to the forfeiture, though none be adjudged in the sentence. Otherwise, however, if the findings be disapproved as not sustained by the testimony. But the stoppage incurred under paragraph 137, Army Regulations of 1901, is enforced only upon a conviction by court-martial. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 140, par. 3; see also pars. 137 and 144, 1556, 1557, and 1558, Army Regulations of 1901.

The forfeiture specified in paragraph 133, Army Regulations of 1895, should not be enforced for absences of less than one day, but the soldier should be left to be punished by sentence of summary court. Thus where the unauthorized absence was for but seven and a half hours a forfeiture of a day's pay would deprive the soldier of pay for sixteen and a half hours which he had actually earned. Held, therefore, that a stoppage of one day's pay in such a case was not warranted. Ibid., 141, par. 4.

In paragraphs 144, 1557 and 1558, Army Regulations of 1901, it is directed that no enlisted man shall receive pay or allowances for any time during which he has been absent without leave (unless he shall furnish to his commanding officer a satisfactory excuse for such absence), and, further, that a deserter shall forfeit all pay and allowances due him at the time of his desertion. These forfeitures are incurred by operation of law, upon the commission of the offense, independently of any punishment for the same by sentence of court-martial, and it is not essential to their taking effect that the offense should have been found by a military court. In general, however, they can not safely be enforced in the absence of an ascertainment of the guilt of the party by a trial and conviction. Only such pay is affected by these regulations as is expressly specified therein. Thus a deserter forfeits both pay due at the time of his offense and pay for the period of his unauthorized absence, so that, upon his apprehension or surrender, nothing whatever is due him. But here the forfeiture by operation of law ends; from this date his pay begins to run anew; and unless his sentence (in the case of his trial and conviction) includes a forfeiture of pay due he will be entitled to his pay (less any legal stoppages or deductions) from such date (which is considered to be that of his return to service) to the date of his discharge, whether this be a dishonorable discharge adjudged by the sentence and executed forthwith, or—the sentence not imposing such punishment—an honorable discharge given him in the usual manner after a further period of service. Paragraph 140, indeed, provides that this pay shall not be rendered to him prior to trial, but it does not affect his right to receive it when the trial is completed, and it is found not to be forfeited by the sentence of the court.

886. Every noncommissioned officer and private of the Regular Army, and every officer, noncommissioned officer, and private of any militia or volunteer corps in the service of the United States who is captured by the enemy, shall be entitled to receive during his captivity, notwithstanding the expiration of his term of service, the same pay, subsistence, and allowance to which he may be entitled while in the actual service of the United States; but this provision shall not be construed to entitle any prisoner of war of such militia corps to any pay or compensation after the date of his parole, except the traveling expenses allowed by law.

An officer or soldier brought to trial for desertion or absence without leave, and acquitted, can not of course be subjected to any of these forfeitures; norcan one who has been convicted but whose conviction has been disapproved by the competent reviewing authority. An acquittal of desertion, or a disapproval of a conviction of desertion, includes of course an acquittal, or a legal nullifying of the conviction, of the offense of absence without leave included in the desertion.

So, where a charge of desertion against a soldier was removed in orders, as unfounded, and he was granted an honorable discharge, held that the forfeiture prescribed by these regulations could not be enforced. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 562, par. 9.

An enlisted man who is discharged at his own request by reason of the illness of his wife is discharged for his own convenience and is not entitled to travel pay. Ibid., 939.

For statute regulating the travel pay of enlisted men of the regular and volunteer forces when discharged by the Secretary of War see the act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 708), par. 541, ante. For statutes regulating the payment of extra pay to officers and enlisted men of volunteers on muster out or discharge from the military service see the acts of January 12, 1899 (30 Stat. Under section 1290, Revised Statutes, as modified by the act of February 27, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 244), it has been held that where a soldier's first discharge is followed by his reenlistment within a few days, so that his service is practically continuous, and his second discharge occurs at the place of his original enlistment, he is not entitled to commutation for travel and subsistence to the place of his second enlistment. HISTORICAL NOTE.—A system of payments to troops by means of regimental paymasters had been prescribed by several resolutions of Congress during the Government under the Articles of Confederation. The office of Paymaster-General had also been established, but had ceased to exist prior to the organization of the Government under the Constitution, the office and duties of Paymaster-General having been merged in those of Commissioner of Army Accounts by a resolution of Congress dated March 3, 1787. The system of regimental paymasters, established during the war of the Revolution, was recognized and continued in the military force authorized by the act of September 29, 1789 (1 Stat. L., 95). A regiment of infantry and a battalion of artillery were added to the establishment by the act of April 30, 1790 (ibid., 119), to each of which a paymaster was attached, with the proviso that the paymaster, in common with the other officers of the regimental staff, should be selected from subalterns of the line. An additional regiment of infantry was authorized by the act of March 3, 1791 (ibid., 222), with the same organization, and three additional regiments of infantry and a squadron of dragoons were added to the existing establishment by the act of March 5, 1792 (ibid., 241), the infantry regiments having the organization prescribed by the act of April 30, 1790. As no paymaster was authorized for the squadron of dragoons it is presumed that payments to that organization were made by an officer detailed for the purpose.

By section 3 of the act of May 8, 1792 (1 Stat. L., 280), a paymaster with the rank and pay of major was authorized, who was "to reside near the headquarters of the troops of the United States." He was required to give a bond in the sum of $20,000, and his duties were defined in the same enactment. By section 3 of the act of March 3, 1797 (ibid., 507), the title of Paymaster-General was conferred upon this officer, who was to receive the pay and allowances already authorized by law. By section 7 of the act of May 28, 1798 (ibid., 558), passed in contemplation of war with France, the rank or stoppage by order, can not be imposed for an offense. But it is entirely legal to stop against a soldier's pay, under the Army Regulations, an amount required to reimburse the United States for loss on account of damage done to public property, while at the same time bringing the soldier to trial by court-martial for the offense involved. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 720, par. 3. Gratiot v. U. S., 15 Peters, 336; McKnight v. U. S., 98 U. S., 180.

Pay due an officer or soldier can legally be stopped only by reason of an accountability to the United States (XVI Opin. Att. Gen., 477). Thus it can not be stopped to reimburse a hospital fund for money stolen, such fund, like a company fund, not being public money. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 721, par. 8.

The United States is not authorized to stop against the pay of an officer or soldier an amount of personal indebtedness to another officer or soldier, though such indebtedness may have grown out of the relations of the military service. Thus, in the absence of a sentence of court-martial forfeiting the same, an officer's pay can not legally be stopped with a view to the reimbursement of enlisted men who have deposited with him money for safe-keeping, which he has failed to return when required, the officer being accountable for the same in a personal capacity only. Ibid., par. 2375.

Authorized stoppages will be entered on the rolls and paid in the following order:

1. Reimbursements to the United States for the loss or damage to arms, equipments, or other public property, the nature of which will be clearly stated, extra issues of clothing, transportation, subsistence, expense of apprehending deserters.
2. Amounts paid post exchange and laundrymen at recruit rendezvous.
3. Reimbursements to individuals (as the paymaster, for instance).
4. Forfeitures for desertion, and fines by sentence of court-martial. Par. 1568, A. R., 1901.

and pay of lieutenant-colonel was conferred upon the incumbent of the office of Paymaster-General, and deputy paymasters were authorized, in addition to the regimental paymasters. By section 3 of the act of March 16, 1802 (2 ibid., 132), passed with a view to reduce and fix the military peace establishment, provided for a paymaster of the Army; he was to be assisted by seven paymasters and two assistants, who were to be attached to districts; the deputy paymasters and assistants were to be detailed from the line, and were to receive additional pay at the rate of $30 and $10 per month, respectively.

The distribution of clothing to the Army was vested in the Pay Department by section 8 of the act of March 16, 1802 (2 ibid., 132), and section 9 of the act of January 11, 1812 (ibid., 671); this duty continued to be performed by the Pay Department until it was transferred to the Quartermaster's Department by the act of May 18, 1826 (4 ibid., 173).

Provision was made for the payment of the troops during the war of 1812 by the appointment of as many district paymasters as the President might deem necessary; if taken from the line these officers were to receive $30 per month additional pay; if appointed from civil life, they were to receive the pay and emoluments of majors of infantry. Act of May 16, 1812, 2 Stat. L., 735. The Pay Department was established, eo nomine, by section 3 of the act of April 24, 1816 (3 ibid., 297), and was to consist of a Paymaster-General, who, with the regiment and battalion paymasters, was to constitute the Pay Corps. The regimental and battalion paymasters were given the rank of majors of infantry, and were to be selected from subalterns of the line or from civil life; provision was made in this act for clerical service by a clause authorizing the detail of noncommissioned officers as paymasters' clerks, who, while so employed, were to receive double pay. Fourteen paymasters were added to the department by the act of March 2, 1821 (ibid., 615), and three by the act of July 4, 1836 (5 ibid., 117). The twenty-fifth section of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 ibid., 256), made provision for the expansion of the department, to meet the emergency of a sudden increase in the strength of the Army, by authorizing the President to appoint such number of additional paymasters as he might deem necessary "to pay the troops with sufficient punctuality;" such increase, however, was not "to exceed one for every two regiments of militia or volunteers," and the additional paymasters were to be continued in service only so long as their services might be required to pay militia and volunteers. The substance of this requirement was subsequently incorporated in the Revised Statutes as section 1184 of that enactment. By section 3 of the act of July 4, 1836, the President was authorized to assign any officer of the Army to duty as a paymaster, and the officer so assigned was to give bond, but was entitled to receive the pay and emoluments allowed by law to paymasters. By section 4 of the act of August 23, 1842 (ibid., 512), the number of majors in the department was reduced to fourteen.

The duties of the officers of the Pay Department were defined by section 4 of the act of April 24, 1816 (3 ibid., 297), and by the act of July 14, 1832 (4 ibid., 580), bonds were required and paymasters brought under the Articles of War by section 6 of the act of April 24, 1816 (3 ibid., 297). The rank indicated by their pay and allowances was conferred upon officers of this department by section 13 of the act of March 3, 1847 (9 ibid., 184), and the restriction in respect to the exercise of command, which is embodied in section 1183 of the Revised Statutes, appeared originally in the same enactment. By section 12 of the same act two deputy paymasters-general (lieutenant-colonels) were added to the establishment. At the close of the war with Mexico the organization of the department was fixed at one Paymaster-General (colonel), two deputy paymasters-general (lieutenant-colonels), and twenty-five paymasters with the rank of major, and the officers of the department were placed upon the same footing in respect to tenure of office as officers of other disbursing departments of the Army. By the same enactment the bonds of paymasters were required to be renewed at least once in every four years, and as much oftener as the President might direct.

The needs of the department were met during the period of the war of the rebellion by the appointment of additional paymasters under the authority conferred by section 25 of the act of July 5, 1838 (sec. 1184, Revised Statutes). At the general reorganization of the Army in 1866 the personnel of the department was established at one Paymaster-General (brigadier-general), two assistant paymasters-general (colonels), two deputy paymasters-general (lieutenant-colonels), and sixty paymasters with the rank of major. The Paymaster-General was to be selected from the corps, and the vacancies in the grade of major were to be filled by the appointment of persons who had served as additional paymasters during the war of the rebellion. Secs. 18 and 23, act of July 28, 1866, 14 Stat. L., 335. At the reduction of 1869 it was provided by section 6 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), that there should be no more appointments or promotions in the department until the further order of Congress, but this requirement was modified by the act of June 4, 1872 (17 ibid., 219), which authorized the appointment of a Paymaster-General with the rank of colonel to fill an existing vacancy, and by the act of March 2, 1875 (18 ibid., 338), and joint resolution No. 7 of March 2, 1875 (ibid., 524), which fixed the number of paymasters at fifty. The rank of brigadier-general was restored to the office of Paymaster-General by the act of July 22, 1876 (19 ibid., 95), and the restriction established by the act of March 3, 1869, was finally removed by the act of March 3, 1877 (ibid., 270).

A gradual reduction in the strength of the department was provided for in the acts of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 451), and July 5, 1884 (23 ibid., 108), by authorizing the voluntary retirement of paymasters of over twenty years' service, and by a requirement that there should be no more original appointments to the grade of lieutenant-colonel and major until the number of officers in the department had been reduced to thirty-five and the organization of the department was thereafter to be as follows: one paymaster-general (brigadier-general), two assistant paymasters-general (colonels), three deputy paymasters-general (lieutenant-colonels), and twenty-nine paymasters (majors). By the act of July 16, 1892 (27 ibid., 175), the number of majors was reduced to twenty-five, by the act of February 12, 1895 (28 ibid., 655), it was still further reduced to twenty, which was declared to be the number authorized by law.

By section 21 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754), the permanent strength of the department was fixed at one paymaster-general with the rank of brigadier-general, three assistant Paymasters-General with the rank of colonel, four deputy paymasters-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, twenty paymasters with the rank of major, and twenty-five paymasters with the rank of captain, mounted. A system of details was also established by the operation of which the permanent commissioned personnel of the department will be replaced, as vacancies occur, by officers detailed from the line of the Army for duty in the Pay Department.

908. The Surgeon-General of the Army, with the approval of the Secretary of War, is hereby authorized to employ dental surgeons to serve the officers and enlisted men of the Regular and Volunteer Army, in the proportion of, not to exceed one for every one thousand of said Army, and not exceeding thirty in all. Said dental surgeons shall be employed as contract dental surgeons under the same terms and conditions applicable to army contract surgeons, and shall be graduates of standard medical or dental colleges, trained in the several branches of dentistry, of good moral and professional character, and shall pass a satisfactory professional examination. Ibid.

The same. Examination. Supervision. Ibid.

909. Three of the number of dental surgeons to be employed shall be first appointed by the Surgeon General, with the approval of the Secretary of War, with reference to their fitness for assignment, under the direction of the Surgeon-General, to the special service of conducting the examination and supervising the operations of the others; and for such special service an extra compensation of sixty dollars per month will be allowed: Provided further, That dental-college graduates now employed in the Hospital Corps, who have been detailed for a period of not less than twelve months to render dental service to the Army, and who are shown by the reports of their superiors to have rendered such service satisfactorily, may be appointed contract dental surgeons without examination.[1] Ibid.

[1] This enactment replaces section 2 of the act of May 12, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 400), in pari materia. The office of contract surgeon was first established by regulation, but their compensation has been provided for in the annual acts of appropriation for the support of the Army. Such provision ceased to be made in the act of July 16, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 175), and, until May 12, 1898, when their employment was again authorized by law.

A "contract" or "acting assistant" surgeon is not a military officer and has no military rank or status. He is amenable, indeed, to the military jurisdiction when employed with the Army in the field in time of war, but he is in fact no part of the military establishment, but is simply a civilian employed by the United States, under a special contract for his personal services as a medical attendant to the troops. When not serving with troops before the enemy he has no other relation to the military organization or the Government than that established by the terms of his contract, made in accordance with the Army Regulations. He is not subject to military orders in general, like an officer or soldier, but only to such orders or directions as properly pertain to the peformance of his particular duties. He is of course not eligible to be detailed as a member of a military court. As a civilian, however, he is entitled to the per diem allowance, etc., when duly attending a court-martial as a witness. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 384.

DUTIES.

Assignment to duty.
Sec. 3, July 27, 1892, v. 27, p. 277.

910. Medical officers of the Army may be assigned by the Secretary of War to such duties as the interests of the service may demand.[2]

Professional attendance on families of officers, etc.
July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 112.

911. The medical officers of the Army and contract surgeons shall whenever practicable attend the families of the officers and soldiers free of charge. Act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 112).

Supervision of cooking.
Mar. 3, 1863, c. 78, s. 8, v. 12, p. 744.
Sec. 1174, R. S.

912. The officers of the Medical Department of the Army shall unite with the officers of the line, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War, in superintending the cooking done by the enlisted men; and the Surgeon-General shall promulgate to the officers of said corps such regulations and instructions as may tend to insure the proper preparation of the ration of the soldier.

Right of command.
Feb. 11, 1847, c. 8, s. 8, v. 9, p. 125.
Sec. 1169, R. S.

913. Officers of the Medical Department of the Army shall not be entitled, in virtue of their rank, to command in the line or in other staff corps.[3]

[1] For regulations fixing the status and regulating the employment and duties of contract and dental surgeons see par. 1574 to 1589, Army Regulations, of 1901.

[2] The Medical Department, under the direction of the Secretary of War, is charged with the duty of investigating the sanitary condition of the Army and making recommendations in reference thereto, with the duty of caring for the sick and wounded, making physical examinations of officers and enlisted men, the management and control of military, the recruitment, instruction and control of the Hospital Corps and of the Army Nurse Corps (female), and furnishing all medical and hospital supplies, except for public animals. Par. 1570, A. R., 1901.

The medical officer of a command is responsible (within reasonable limits) for the health of the men composing it. Where, in the course of the proper and regular performance of his function, he excuses men from duty on account of sickness or disability, the commanding officer should almost as a matter of course accept his action as conclusive and final. If he refuses to do so and orders on duty a soldier thus excused, he assumes the responsibility of any material injury that may thus result to the individual or the service, and, if injury results in fact, is amenable to trial for the military offense involved. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1658.

[3] An officer of the Pay or Medical Department can not exercise command, except in his own department; but by virtue of his commission he may command all enlisted men like other commissioned officers. Par. 18, A. R., 1901.

The Hospital Corps.
Mar. 1, 1887, v. 24, p. 435; Mar. 16, 1895, v. 29, p. 61.

914. The Hospital Corps[1] of the United States Army shall consist of hospital stewards, acting hospital stewards, and privates; and all necessary hospital services in garrison, camp, or field (including ambulance service) shall be performed by the members thereof, who shall be regularly enlisted in the military service; said corps shall be permanently attached to the Medical Department.[2] Act of March 1, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 435).

Hospital stewards.
Mar. 1, 1887, v. 24, p. 435, Mar. 16, 1896, v. 29, p. 61.

915. The Secretary of War is empowered to appoint as many hospital stewards as, in his judgment, the service may require; but not more than one hospital steward shall be stationed at any post or place without special authority of the Secretary of War. There shall be no appointments of hospital stewards until the number of hospital stewards shall be reduced below one hundred, and thereafter the number of such officers shall not exceed one hundred. Act of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 61).

The same.
June 2, 1898, v. 30, p. 428.

916. All provisions of law limiting the number of hospital stewards in service at any one time to one hundred * * * are hereby suspended during the existing war: Provided, That the increase of hospital stewards under this act shall not exceed one hundred. Act of June 2, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 428).

The same.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 18, v. 31, p. 753.

917. The Secretary of War is authorized to appoint in the Hospital Corps, in addition to the two hundred hospital stewards now allowed by law, one hundred hospital stewards. Sec. 18, Act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 753).

The same.
Ibid.

918. Men who have served as hospital stewards of volunteers of volunteer regiments, or acted in that capacity during and since the Spanish-American war for more than six months, may be appointed hospital stewards in the Regular Army: And provided further, That all men so appointed shall be of good moral character and shall have passed a satisfactory mental and physical examination. Ibid.

[1] The act of March 11, 1864 (13 Stat. L., 20), made provision uniform for a system of ambulances for the armies in the field, by the establishment of an Ambulance Corps, to be composed of officers and enlisted men detailed for such service from the regiments of the line. The composition, distribution, and duties of the corps were regulated by statute, supplemented, in some matters by Executive regulations and orders. The act of March 11, 1864, though passed to meet an emergency of war, was not restricted to a time of war and so continued in existence until replaced by the enactment establishing the Hospital Corps.

[2] Sections 1179, 1180, and 1181 of the Revised Statutes were repealed by the act of March 1, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 435), creating the Hospital Corps. By the act of March 8, 1898 (30 ibid., 261), the enlisted men of the Hospital Corps are required to be included in the authorized enlisted strength of the Army.

Rank and pay. Sec. 3, Mar. 1, 1887, v. 24, p. 435.

919. The pay of hospital stewards shall be forty-five dollars per month, with the increase on account of length of service as is now or may hereafter be allowed by law to other enlisted men. They shall have rank with ordnance-sergeants and be entitled to all the allowances appertaining to that grade. Sec. 3, act of March 1, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 435).

920. No person shall be appointed a hospital steward unless he shall have passed a satisfactory examination before a board of one or more medical officers as to his qualifications for the position, and demonstrated his fitness therefor by service of not less than twelve months as acting hospital steward; and no person shall be designated for such examination except by written authority of the Surgeon-General. Sec. 4, ibid.

The same. June 2, 1898, v 30, p. 428.

921. All provisions of law * * * requiring that a person to be appointed a hospital steward shall first demonstrate his fitness therefor by actual service of not less than twelve months as acting hospital steward, * * * are hereby suspended during the existing war. Act of June 2, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 428).

Privates; duties. Sec. 5, ibid.

922. The Secretary of War is empowered to enlist, or cause to be enlisted, as many privates of the Hospital Corps as the service may require, and to limit or fix the number, and make such regulations for their government as may be necessary; and any enlisted man in the Army shall be eligible for transfer to the Hospital Corps as a private.[1] They shall perform duty as wardmasters, cooks, nurses, and attendants in hospitals, and as stretcher bearers, litter bearers, and ambulance attendants in the field, and such other duties as may by proper authority be required of them.[2] Sec. 5, ibid.

[1] Held, that a person enlisted in the Hospital Corps, or transferred to it from another part of the Army under the authority of the act of March 1, 1887, could not be transferred out of it, or back again to the organization from which he was transferred originally, without a breach of contract. The authority to transfer to this corps is expressly granted by the statute, but there is no statutory authority for depriving transferred members, by undoing their transfers, of the positions given them according to the express law. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1449. For regulations prepared under the authority conferred by this section see paragraphs 1590 to 1620, Army Regulations of 1901, and the Manual for the Medical Department.

[2] Held, that neither the act organizing the Hospital Corps, of March 1, 1887, nor paragraph 1410, Army Regulations, 1895 (par. 1606, A. R., 1901), relating to the assignment of privates of the corps as nurses, etc., was to be construed as restricting

Pay and allowances.
Sec. 6, ibid.; July 13, 1892, v. 27, p. 120.

923. The pay of privates of the Hospital Corps shall be eighteen dollars per month, with the increase on account of length of service as is now or may hereafter be allowed by law to other enlisted men; they shall be entitled to the same allowances as a corporal of the arm of service with which on duty. Sec. 6, ibid.

Acting hospital stewards.
Sec. 7, Mar. 1, 1887, v. 24, p. 436.

924. Privates of the Hospital Corps may be detailed as acting hospital stewards by the Secretary of War, upon the recommendation of the Surgeon-General, whenever the necessities of the service require it; and while so detailed their pay shall be twenty-five dollars per month, with increase as above stated.[1] Acting hospital stewards, when educated in the duties of the position, may be eligible for examination for appointment as hospital stewards as above provided. Sec. 7, ibid.

THE NURSE CORPS.

Par.
925. Composition.
926, 927. Pay and allowances.
Par.
928. Travel expenses.

Composition, appointment, etc.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 19, v. 31, p. 753.

925. The Nurse Corps (female) shall consist of one superintendent, to be appointed by the Secretary of War, who shall be a graduate of a hospital training school having a course of instruction of not less than two years, whose term of office may be terminated at his discretion, whose compensation shall be one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum, and of as many chief nurses, nurses, and reserve nurses as may be needed. Reserve nurses may be assigned to active duty when the emergency of the service demands, but shall receive no compensation except when on such duty: Provided, That all nurses in the Nurse Corps shall be appointed or removed by the Surgeon-Gen-the use of nurses to attendance upon patients within the hospital, but that nurses might legally be furnished from such privates to attend officers at their quarters. Ibid., par. 1452.

Where a hospital is not supplied with enough privates of the Hospital Corps to do the necessary police duty which, under section 5 of the act organizing the corps, of March 1, 1887, they may properly be required to perform, held, that convalescents at the hospital may, in the discretion of the surgeon in charge and by his prescription and direction, be employed to assist in such duty. Ibid., par. 1453.

[1] The act of March 1, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 435), provides for "acting hospital stewards" as a separate grade in the corps, but does not prescribe any mode of filling that grade other than by declaring that "privates" of the corps may be detailed as such "acting" stewards. Held, therefore, that when such a private was so detailed he ceased to be a private of the corps and became at once the acting hospital steward constituted by the act; and if discharged while so detailed, should be discharged as an "acting hospital steward," receiving travel pay as such. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1447.

A private who is detailed as an acting hospital steward, as provided in the act of March 1, 1887, is to be regarded as promoted to that grade, and the extra pay, travel pay, and retired pay to which he may be entitled upon discharge or retirement are to be computed on the basis of the pay provided for an acting hospital steward. 6 Compt. Dec., 807.

eral, with the approval of the Secretary of War; that they shall be graduates of hospital training schools, and shall have passed a satisfactory professional, moral, mental, and physical examination. Sec. 19, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 753).

926. The pay and allowances of nurses and of reserve nurses when on active service shall be forty dollars per month when on duty in the United States, and fifty dollars per month when without the limits of the United States. Ibid.

Pay and allowances. Ibid.

927. They shall be entitled to quarters, subsistence, and medical attendance during illness, and they may be granted leaves of absence for thirty days, with pay, for each calendar year; and when serving as chief nurses their pay may be increased by authority of the Secretary of War, such increase not to exceed twenty-five dollars per month. Payments to the Nurse Corps shall be made by the Pay Department. Ibid.

The same. Ibid.

928. The superintendent and nurses shall receive transportation and necessary expenses when traveling under orders. Ibid.

Travel expenses. Ibid.

HOSPITALS.[1]

929. Hospital matrons * * * may be employed in post or regimental hospitals in such numbers as may be necessary.[1]

Matrons. Mar. 16, 1802, s. 4, v. 2, p. 134. Sec. 1239, R.S.

930. Hospital matrons in post and regimental hospitals shall receive ten dollars a month * * *. One ration in kind or by commutation shall be allowed to each.[2]

[1] HOSPITAL BUILDINGS.

A building will not be erected for nor occupied as a hospital until the opinion of a medical officer has been obtained in writing upon the suitableness of site and proposed arrangement. If the commanding officer dissent from this opinion he will return it to the surgeon of the post with his reasons indorsed thereon, who will forward it, through military channels, to the Surgeon-General of the Army. Par. 1644, A. R., 1901.

Hospitals will be erected at permanent posts in accordance with plans and specifications furnished by the Surgeon-General, approved by the Secretary of War. Par. 1645, ibid.

When alterations of or additions to hospitals are necessary the surgeon of the post, after obtaining from the quartermaster an estimate of cost, will transmit plans and specifications, with proposed modifications, through military channels to the Secretary of War. Similar action will be taken upon quarters for hospital stewards. Par. 1646, ibid.

No portion of any hospital building at a military post will be used or occupied as quarters, nor will any mess be permitted or maintained therein except such as may be necessary for patients and enlisted men there on duty. Par. 1650, ibid.

[1] The authority for the employment of female nurses, conferred by section 1239, Revised Statutes, was replaced by section 19, act of February 2, 1901, paragraphs 925 to 927 ante. The rate of compensation for female nurses, fixed at 40 cents per day by section 1277 of the Revised Statutes, was replaced by the rates of compensation established in section 19 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 753), paragraph 926 ante.

Quarters for hospital stewards.
Feb. 27, 1893, v. 27, p. 484.

931. Hereafter the posts at which such quarters [for hospital stewards] shall be constructed shall be designated by the Seccetary of War, and such quarters shall be built by contract, after legal advertisement, whenever the same is practicable. Act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 484).

PURCHASES OF MEDICAL SUPPLIES.

Purchases.
Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 905.

932. Hereafter, except in cases of emergency or where it is impracticable to secure competition, the purchase of all supplies for the use of the various departments and posts of the Army and of the branches of the army service shall only be made after advertisement, and shall be purchased where the same can be purchased the cheapest, quality and cost of transportation and the interests of the Government considered; but every open-market emergency purchase made in the manner common among business men which exceeds in amount two hundred dollars shall be reported for approval to the Secretary of War under such regulations as he may prescribe.[1] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 905).

Purchases for sick in hospital.
Aug. 3, 1861, c. 42, s. 14, v. 12, p. 289.
Sec. 1175, R. S.

933. Such quantities of fresh or preserved fruits, milk, butter, and eggs as may be necessary for the proper diet of the sick may be allowed in hospitals. They shall be provided under such rules as the Surgeon-General, with the approval of the Secretary of War, shall prescribe.[2]

SALES OF MEDICAL SUPPLIES.

Civilian employees may purchase medicines.
Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 459.

934. Civilian employees of the Army stationed at military posts may, under regulations to be made by the Secretary of War, purchase necessary medical supplies, prescribed by a medical officer of the Army, at cost, with ten per centum added.[3] Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 459).

Sales to National Homes.
June 11, 1896, v. 29, p. 445.

935. Hereafter, upon proper application therefor, the Medical Department of the Army is authorized to sell medical and hospital supplies at its contract prices to the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. Act of June 11, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 445).

[1] For general provisions in respect to the procurement of supplies by contract see the chapter entitled CONTRACTS AND PURCHASES. For special authority to sell unserviceable medical and hospital stores and other property see the act of August 6, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 241). The above enactment repeals and replaces the act of February 27, 1893 (27 ibid., 485), in pari materia.

[2] For statutes authorizing an addition to the ration in the case of patients in hospital who are too sick to be subsisted on the army ration, and for a similar increase in case of enlisted men in camp during recovery from low conditions of health, consequent upon service in unhealthy regions or in debilitating climates, see the act of February 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 212).

THE HOT SPRINGS RESERVATION IN ARKANSAS.

THE ARMY AND NAVY HOSPITAL.

Hot water to be supplied to bath houses off the reservation.

Not to interfere with Army and Navy Hospital supply.

J. R. 14, Mar. 3, 1887, v. 24, p. 647,

936. The Secretary of the Interior * * * is hereby authorized to continue to furnish to the bath houses located off the permanent reservation at Hot Springs, Arkansas, a sufficient amount of hot water for drinking and bathing purposes: Provided, That furnishing such bath houses shall in no way interfere with the supply of hot water necessary for the use of the Army and Navy Hospital and for the bath houses located upon the permanent reservation subject to any further action of Congress on the subject.[1] Joint resolution No. 14, March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 647).

Hot Springs, Ark.

HISTORICAL NOTE.—The medical and surgical needs of the troops composing the revolutionary armies were, at first, supplied by the surgeons who were attached to the several regimental organizations, and no provision seems to have been made for medical or surgical supervision, for the procurement and distribution of supplies, or for the establishment of a general hospital service until 1775, when, by a resolution of Congress dated July 27, 1777, the office of Director-General was established, who was charged with the duties subsequently performed by the Purveyor-General of Medical Supplies. The same enactment provided for a medical staff composed of four surgeons and twenty surgeon's mates, for an apothecary and two storekeepers, and for hospital attendance at the rate of one nurse for every ten patients. Under the authority thus conferred several general hospitals were established at points conveniently near to the several theaters of military operations. The medical establishment thus created was modified by subsequent resolutions of Congress; the changes caused by the resolution of April 22, 1777, being so extensive as to constitute a complete reorganization of the department. As thus modified, however, the department continued in existence until the disbandment of the revolutionary armies in 1783. For the ten years succeeding the organizantion of the Government under the Constitution the medical and surgical necessities of the troops were met by the medical officers attached to the several organizations constituting the military establishment.

The act of March 2, 1799 (1 Stat. L., 721), passed in contemplation of a war with France, but which was never fully executed, made provision for a complete medical establishment consisting of a physician-general, an apothecary-general, and a purveyor, together with such numbers of hospital surgeons and mates as the service might require, who were made liable to duty in the field as well as in the hospitals provided for in the statute. The act of March 2, 1799, was repealed and a Medical Department established by section 3 of the act of February 23, 1802 (2 ibid., 133), which fixed the strength of the department at two surgeons and twenty-five surgeon's mates, who were "to be attached to garrisons and posts, and not to corps." During the war of 1812 the necessities of the case were met by a temporary increase of the department and by the allowance of surgeons to regiments called into the service for the period of the war. By section 7 of the act of March 3, 1813 (ibid., 819), a physician and Surgeon-General was authorized, whose powers and duties were to be prescribed by the President of the United States. The office of apothecary-general was created by the act of April 24, 1816 (3 ibid., 297), but was abolished by the act of March 3, 1821. The office of Surgeon-General was created by section 2 of the act of April 14, 1818 (ibid., 426).

At the general reduction of 1821 the Medical Department was reorganized and made to consist of one Surgeon-General, eight surgeons, and forty-five assistant surgeons. Sec. 2, act of March 2, 1821, 3 ibid., 615. By the act of June 28, 1832 (4 ibid., 500), four surgeons and ten surgeon's mates were added. The act of June 30, 1834 (ibid., 714), contained a requirement that all candidates for appointment, or for promotion to the grade of surgeon, should pass a professional examination as a condition precedent to such appointment or promotion. By this enactment the pay of surgeons was fixed at that allowed to majors, assistant surgeons were to receive for the first five years' service the pay of first lieutenants, and after five years' service the pay of captains. The examination for promotion to the grade of surgeon was to take place after five years' service in the grade of assistant surgeon. By section 33 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 ibid., 256), seven additional surgeons were authorized, but by section 4 of the act of August 23, 1842 (ibid., 512), a reduction of two surgeons and ten assistant surgeons was ordered, the displaced officers being allowed three months' pay when honorably discharged.

At the outbreak of the war with Mexico, under authority conferred by section 6 of the act of February 11, 1847 (9 ibid., 123), two surgeons and twelve assistant surgeons were added to the regular establishment, and regimental medical officers were authorized for the volunteer troops at the rate of one surgeon and one assistant surgeon to each regiment, their service being restricted to the period of the existing war. By the act of March 3, 1849 (ibid., 351), ten assistant surgeons were authorized, and the requirement of the act of July 19, 1848, prohibiting the filling of vacancies in the department was repealed. By the act of August 16, 1850 (11 ibid., 51), four surgeons and eight assistant surgeons were added to the establishment; the force of hospital stewards was increased to such number as the service might require, not to exceed one to each military post; and cooks and nurses, detailed from the enlisted men, were, for the first time, allowed extra-duty pay for service in post hospitals.

At the outbreak of the war of the rebellion regimental medical officers were again authorized, one surgeon and one assistant being allowed to each regiment; by the act of July 2, 1862 (12 Stat. L., 502), an additional assistant was authorized.

By section 3 of the act of July 22, 1861 (ibid., 269), one surgeon to each brigade was authorized, but by the act of July 2, 1862 (ibid., 502), these officers were merged in the corps of forty surgeons and one hundred and twenty assistant surgeons created by that statute for the period of the war.

By the act of June 21, 1861 (ibid., 378), four surgeons and four assistant surgeons were added to the department. By the act of April 16, 1862 ibid., 378), the rank of brigadier-general was conferred upon the Surgeon-General; the office of assistant surgeon-general, with the rank and pay of colonel of cavalry was created and the addition of ten surgeons and twenty assistant surgeons was authorized; a corps of medical inspectors was created, consisting of one inspector-general of hospitals (colonel) and eight assistants (lieutenant-colonels), whose duties were defined by law, and who were to hold office during the continuance of the war. By the act of December 27, 1862 (ibid., 633), eight medical inspectors were added and authority was conferred upon these officers to discharge enlisted men for disability contracted in the military service. By this statute a corps of medical cadets was established which continued to exist until its gradual disbandment was brought about by the passage of the general act of reorganization in 1866. By the act of May 20, 1862 (ibid., 378), six medical storekeepers were authorized. By the act of February 25, 1865 (13 ibid., 437), medical directors of armies in the field and of military departments were allowed the rank and pay of colonels, and those attached to army corps the rank and pay of lieutenant-colonels.

An ambulance service for the armies in the field was provided by the act of March 11, 1864 (13 ibid., 20). It was composed of officers and enlisted men detailed from the several army corps and was carried on under the direction of their respective medical directors. The duties of the corps were regulated by statute, and had to do, exclusively, with the transportation of the sick and wounded and the removal of the wounded from the battlefield. The corps ceased to exist at the disbandment of the volunteer armies in 1865.

At the general reorganization of 1866 (sec. 17, act of July 28, 1866, 14 ibid., 334), the strength of the department was fixed at one Surgeon-General, one assistant surgeon-general, one chief medical purveyor, and four assistant purveyors (lieutenant-colonels), sixty surgeons (majors), one hundred and fifty assistant surgeons, and five medical storekeepers; it was also provided that three years' service, instead of five, should be required of assistant surgeons before attaining the grade of captain. The act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), contained a requirement prohibiting appointments and promotions in the staff until otherwise ordered by Congress; but this requirement was repealed as to the Medical Department by section 4 of the act of June 23, 1874 (18 ibid., 244), which fixed the strength of the medical establishment as follows: One Surgeon-General, one assistant surgeon-general, and one chief medical purveyor (colonel), two assistant medical purveyors (lieutenant-colonels), fifty surgeons, and one hundred and fifty assistant surgeons, who were to receive the rank of captain after five years' service, and five medical storekeepers; the number of contract surgeons was fixed in this statute at seventy-five. By the act of June 26, 1876 (19 ibid., 61), the number of assistant surgeons was fixed at one hundred and twenty-five, and the corps of medical storekeepers was discontinued, the reduction in both cases being accomplished by a requirement forbidding the filling of vacancies until the prescribed limit of numbers had been reached. By this statute the number of surgeons with the rank of colonel was increased to four, and the number with the rank of lieutenant-colonel to eight, the vacancies thus created to be filled by promotion according to seniority.

By the act of March 1, 1887 (24 ibid., 435), the Hospital Corps was created; by the act of July 27, 1892 (27 ibid., 276), the titles of office in the Medical Department were rearranged, officers holding the rank of colonels being arranged as assistant surgeons-general and those having the rank of lieutenant-colonels as deputy surgeons-general, and thereafter medical officers were to be assigned by the Secretary of War to such duties as the necessities of the service might require. By the act of August 18, 1894 (28 ibid., 403), the number of assistant surgeons was reduced to one hundred and ten; but by the act of May 12, 1898 (930 ibid., 406), the number of officers of this grade was increased to one hundred and twenty-five, and authority was conferred upon the Surgeon-General to employ such number of contract surgeons as might be necessary.

By section 18 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 752), the permanent strength of the department was fixed at one Surgeon-General with the rank of brigadier-general, eight assistant surgeons-general with the rank of colonel, twelve deputy surgeons-general with the rank of lieutenants-colonel, sixty surgeons with the rank of major, and two hundred and forty assistant surgeons with the rank of captain and first lieutenants mounted. A Nurse Corps (female), and a corps of dental contract surgeons were also added to the department.

[1] For a note containing the statutory history of the Corps of Engineers see end of chapter.

[2] Section 22 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754), contained the requirement that "vacancies remaining in the grades of first and second lieutenant may be filled by transfer of officers of the Regular Army, subject to such professional examination as may be approved by the Secretary of War."

APPOINTMENTS—PROMOTIONS—EXAMINATIONS.

954. The Chief of Engineers shall be selected as now provided by law.[1] Ibid.

Chief of Engineers, appointment, Ibid.

955. Hereafter vacancies in the Corps of Engineers in all other grades above that of second lieutenant shall be filled, as far as possible, by promotion according to seniority from the Corps of Engineers. Ibid.

957. When any lieutenant of the Corps of Engineers or Ordnance Corps has served fourteen years' continuous service as lieutenant, he shall be promoted to the rank of captain on passing the examination provided by the preceding section,[2] but such promotion shall not authorize an appointment to fill any vacancy, when such appointment would increase the whole number of officers in the corps beyond the number fixed by law; nor shall any officer be promoted before officers of the same grade who rank him in his corps.

THE BATTALION OF ENGINEERS.

1. One company of bombardiers, sappers, and miners was authorized by the act of April 29, 1812 (2 Stat. L., 720), to be officered from the Corps of Engineers; this company was disbanded at the general reduction of 1821, act of March 2, 1821 (2 ibid., 615). A similar company, to be officered in the same manner, was authorized by the act of May 15, 1846 (9 ibid., 12); three additional companies were provided for in section 4 of the act of August 6, 1861 (10 ibid., 317). A sergeant-major, quartermaster-sergeant, and commissary-sergeant were authorized by section 4 of the act of June 20, 1864 (11 ibid., 144). By section 20 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 335), the enlisted establishment of the Corps of Engineers was fixed at five companies, with the battalion sergeant-major and quartermaster-sergeant already authorized by law. The grade of battalion commissary-sergeant was discontinued by section 10 of the act of July 15, 1870 (15 ibid., 318). Section 7 of the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 979), contained the requirement that the battalion of engineers and the officers serving therewith should constitute a part of the line of the Army; this provision was reenacted in section 22 of the act of February 1, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754); by section 11 of the same enactment the enlisted force of the Engineer Corps was increased to three battalions of engineer troops and a band.
2. For the organization of the infantry band, see paragraph 964, anté.

970. The enlisted men of the engineer battalion shall be instructed in and perform the duties of sappers, miners, and pontoniers, and shall aid in giving practical instruction in those branches at the Military Academy. They may be detailed by the Chief of Engineers to oversee and aid laborers upon fortifications and other works in charge of the Engineer Corps, and, as fort keepers, to protect and repair finished fortifications.

care and superintendence of the Capitol, including lighting, and shall submit through the Secretary of the Interior, annually, estimates thereof."

The officer in charge of the public buildings and grounds shall have the rank, pay, and emolument of a colonel. Act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat. L., 535). Funds for the execution of this statute have been provided in subsequent acts of appropriation.

The act of June 30, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 533) contained a requirement directing an investigation to be made as to the feasibility of filtering the water supply of the city of Washington, and the Chief of Engineers was required to be associated, as consulting engineer, with the officer charged with the conduct of the investigation and the preparation of the report.

By the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat L., 1120), the Chief of Engineers was charged with the direction of the construction of the new building for the use of the Government Printing Office.

By the act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 532), the Chief of Engineers was made, ex officio, a member of a commission to determine upon a plan for highways within the District of Columbia.

secure their enforcement; and also to make and enforce rules and regulations in regard to building and repairing wharves, the rental thereof, and the rate of wharfage.[1] All rents so collected shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States, one-half to be placed to the credit of the United States and one-half to the credit of the District of Columbia. No lease made under the provisions of this act shall extend beyond the period of ten years.[2]

That the Secretary of War is authorized to grant permission to the Department of Agriculture for the temporary occupation of such area or areas of Potomac Park, not exceeding a total of seventy-five acres in extent, as may not be needed in any one season for the reclamation or park improvement, the said areas to be used by the Department of Agriculture as testing grounds: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to change the essential character of the lands so used, which lands shall continue to be a public park, as provided in the act of Congress approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven: And provided further, That said area or areas shall be vacated by the Department of Agriculture at the close of any season upon the request of the Secretary of War: And provided further, That the entire park shall remain under the charge of the Secretary of War.

Aug. 30, 1890, v. 26, p. 371.

983. The officer in charge of public buildings and grounds may authorize the temporary use of a portion of the Monument Grounds, or grounds south of the Executive Mansion or other reservations in the District of Columbia, for a children's playground, under regulations to be prescribed by him. Act of August 30, 1890 (26, Stat. L., 371).

Watchmen to have police power.
Ag. 5, 1882. v. 2u2, p. 257

984. Hereafter all watchmen provided for by the United States Government for service in any of the public squares and reservations in the District of Columbia shall have and perform the same powers and duties as the Metropolitan police of the said District.[3] Act of August 5, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 257).

Ailanthus trees.
Mar. 3, 1853, v. 10, p. 207.
Sec. 1830, R.S.

985. No more ailanthus trees shall be purchased for or planted in the public grounds.

Sec. 1812, R.S.

987. The Chief of Engineers shall, as superintendent of public buildings and grounds, and as superintendent of the Washington Aqueduct, annually submit the following reports to the Secretary of War in time to accompany the annual message of the President to Congress, namely:

First. A report of his operations for the preceding year, with an account of the manner in which all appropriations for public buildings and grounds have been applied, including a statement of the number of public lots sold, or remaining unsold each year, of the condition of the public buildings and grounds, and of the measures necessary to be taken for the care and preservation of all public property under his charge.

Sec. 1829, R.S.

988. All furniture purchased for the use of the President's House shall be, as far as practicable, of domestic manufacture.

Inventory of property in Executive Mansion.
April 17, 1900, v. 31, p. 97.

989. Hereafter a complete inventory, in proper books, shall be made annually by the steward, under the direction of the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds, of all the public property in and belonging to the Executive Mansion, showing when purchased, use to which applied, cost, condition, and final disposition, to be submitted to Congress with annual report of the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds.[1] Act of April 17, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 97).

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

Washington Monument, care and maintenance.
To be under Secretary of War.
Oct. 2, 1888, v. 25, p. 533.

990. For the care and maintenance of the Washington Monument and the operation of the elevator and machinery connected therewith, namely: For one custodian, at one hundred dollars per month, one steam engineer, at eighty dollars per month; one assistant steam engineer, at sixty dollars per month; one fireman, at fifty dollars per month; one assistant fireman, at forty-five dollars per month; one conductor of car, at seventy-five dollars per month; one attendant on floor, at forty-five dollars per month; one attendant on top, at forty-five dollars per month; three night and day watchmen, at sixty dollars each per month; * * * to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, who is hereby and hereafter charged with the custody, care, and protection of the monument. Act of October 2, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 533).

[1] In view of the requirements of the acts of August 14, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 147), and March 3, 1877 (ibid., 298, note to paragraph 978, ante), which operated to define and restrict the jurisdiction of the Architect of the Capitol, it may be doubted whether the provision of section 1832, Revised Statutes, requiring a report to be made to that officer is now operative. The acts above referred to, taken in connection with section 1797 of the Revised Statutes, would seem to vest jurisdiction over public buildings outside the Capitol grounds in the Chief of Engineers and the officer charged, under his direction, with their immediate superintendence and control.

Joint commission dissolved. Ibid.

991. The joint commission created by the act of August second, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, for the completion of the Washington Monument, having completed the work intrusted to it, is, at its own request, dissolved, and the unexpended balances of appropriations for this work, as well as the amount herein appropriated, shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War. Ibid.

Washington National Monument Society continued.

992. The Washington National Monument Society is hereby continued with the same powers as provided in the act of August second, eighteen hundred and seventy-six, creating the joint commission aforesaid; and the Secretary of War is hereby directed to set apart a room for the deposit of the archives of the Washington National Monument Society (as also for the records of the joint commission dissolved) and for the continuous use of said society in the building now being erected by the said society with funds collected by it for its use and for the public comfort. Ibid.

Extra pay prohibited.
July 12, 1870, c. 251, s. 4, v. 16, p. 250.
Sec. 1835, R.S.

993. No pay or compensation other than is fixed by this title shall be allowed to any officer, employee, or laborer embraced within the provisions thereof.[1]

Regulations for use of aqueduct bridge.
Mar., 3, 1875, v. 18, p. 393.

994. The Chief Engineer is hereby directed to notify the Washington and Georgetown Railway Company to remove their railway track from the Washington aqueduct bridge over Rock Creek, within one year from the date of said notice; and said company shall make such removal within the year aforesaid, and have the right to lay their tracks along Twenty-sixth street from Pennsylvania avenue to M street north, and thence along M street into Georgetown, to connect with their tracks on Bridge street; and said Chief Engineer may establish and publish regulations prohibiting the passage of heavily loaded wagons and carriages over said bridge. Act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 393).

Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Engineer Commissioner.
June 11, 1878, s. 2, v. 20, p. 103.

1011. Within twenty days after the approval of this act the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, is hereby authorized to appoint two persons, who, with an officer of the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army, whose lineal rank shall be above that of captain, shall be Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and who, from and after July first, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, shall exercise all the powers and authority now vested in the Commissioners of said District, except as are hereinafter limited or provided, and shall be subject to all restrictions and limitations and duties which are now imposed upon said Commissioners. The Commissioner who shall be an officer detailed, from time to time, from the Corps of Engineers, by the President, for this duty, shall not be required to perform any other, nor shall he receive any other compensation than his regular pay and allowances as an officer of the Army.[1] Sec. 2, act of June 11, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 103).

Civil Commissioners; appointment. Ibid.

1012. The two persons appointed from civil life shall, at the time of their appointment, be citizens of the United States, and shall have been actual residents of the District of Columbia for three years next before their appointment, and have, during that period, claimed residence nowhere else, and one of said three Commissioners shall be chosen president of the Board of Commissioners at their first meeting, and annually and whenever a vacancy shall occur thereafter; and said Commissioners shall each of them, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, take an oath or affirmation to support the Constitution of the United States, and to faithfully discharge the duties imposed upon him by law. Ibid.

Salary. Ibid.

1013. Said Commissioners appointed from civil life shall each receive for his services a compensation at the rate of five thousand dollars per annum, and shall, before entering upon the duties of the office, each give bond in the sum of fifty thousand dollars, with surety as is required by existing law. The official term of said Commissioners appointed from civil life shall be three years, and until their successors are appointed and qualified; but the first appointment shall be one Commissioner for one year and one for two years, and at the expiration of their respective terms their successors shall be appointed for three years. Neither of said Commissioners, nor any officer whatsoever of the District of Columbia, shall be accepted as surety upon any bond required to be given to the District of Columbia; nor shall any contractor be accepted as surety for any officer or other contractor in said District. Ibid.

Compensation of Engineer Commissioner. Mar. 3, 1881, v. 21, p. 460.

1014. Hereafter the Engineer Commissioner shall be entitled to receive such compensation, in addition to his army pay and allowances, as will make his compensation equal to five thousand dollars per annum, and a sum sufficient to pay said additional compensation is hereby appropriated. Act of March 3, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 460).

[1] Repealed as to the salary of the Engineer Commissioner by the act of March 3, 1881, par. 1014, post, which fixes his compensation at five thousand dollars per annum. The act of June 11, 1878, repealed the requirement of the act of June 20, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 117), which authorized the detail of an officer of the Corps of Engineers to act as engineer of the District of Columbia.

May be appointed from captains. J. R. No. 7, Dec. 24, 1890, v. 26, p. 1113.

1015. Hereafter such Engineer Commissioner may, in the discretion of the President of the United States, be detailed from among the captains or officers of higher grade having served at least fifteen years in the Corps of Engineers of the Army of the United States. Joint resolution No. 7, December 24, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 1113).

Three assistants authorized. Aug. 7, 1894, v. 28, p. 246.

1016. The President of the United States may detail from the Engineer Corps of the Army not more than three officers, juniors to the engineer officer belonging to the Board of Commissioners of said District, to act as assistants to said Engineer Commissioner in the discharge of the special duties imposed upon him by the provisions of this act.[1] Act of August 7, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 246).

Estimates. June 11, 1878, v. 20, p. 104.

1017. The said Commissioners shall submit to the Secretary of the Treasury for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and annually thereafter, for his examination and approval, a statement showing in detail the work proposed to be undertaken by them during the fiscal year next ensuing, and the estimated cost thereof; also the cost of constructing, repairing, and maintaining all bridges authorized by law across the Potomac River within the District of Columbia, and also all other streams in said District; the cost of maintaining all public institutions of charity, reformatories, and prisons belonging to or controlled wholly or in part by the District of Columbia, and which are now by law supported wholly or in part by the United States or District of Columbia; and also the expenses of the Washington Aqueduct and its appurtenances; and also an itemized statement and estimate of the amount necessary to defray the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the next fiscal year: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as transferring from the United States authorities any of the public works within the District of Columbia now in the control or supervision of said authorities. Act of June 11, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 104).

Powers of District Commissioners. Limitation. June 10, 1879, v. 21, p. 9.

Control of wharf property, etc.

March 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1377.

1019. With the exceptions hereinafter provided, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall have the exclusive charge and control of all wharf property belonging to the United States or to the District of Columbia within said District, including all the wharves, piers, bulkheads, and structures thereon and waters adjacent thereto within the pier lines, and all slips, basins, docks, water fronts, land under water, and structures thereon, and the appurtenances, easements, uses, reversions, and rights belonging thereto, which are now owned or possessed by the United States or the District of Columbia, or to which they or either of them is or may become entitled, or which they or either of them may acquire under the provisions hereof or otherwise; and said Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall have exclusive charge and control of the repairing, building, rebuilding, maintaining, altering, strengthening, leasing, and protecting said property and every part thereof, and all the cleaning, dredging, and deepening necessary in and about the same within the pier lines. Said Commissioners are also hereby authorized and empowered to make all needful rules and regulations for the government and control of all wharves, piers, bulkheads, and structures thereon, and waters adjacent thereto within the pier lines, and all the basins, slips, and docks, with the land under water, in said District not owned by the United States or the District of Columbia: Provided, That the following-described property shall be placed under the immediate jurisdiction and control of the Chief of Engineers of the United States: The banks of the Potomac River from the north line of the Arsenal Grounds to the southern curb line of N street south; also five hundred linear feet of shore line in the Flushing Reservoir at the foot of Seventeenth street west, and west from the western curb of said street, including a levee one hundred feet wide.[2] Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1377).

[1] For statutes defining the jurisdiction and functions of the Light-House Board, see sections 4653–4680 of the Revised Statutes, and the act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 221).

The commissioners appointed from the Engineer Corps of the Army and the Coast and Geodetic Survey shall receive no other pay or compensation than is now allowed them by law, and the other three commissioners shall receive as pay and compensation for their services each the sum of three thousand dollars per annum; and the commissioners appointed under this act shall remain in office subject to removal by the President of the United States. Sec. 2, ibid.

Headquarters and general offices, location.
Feb, 18, 1901, v. 31, p. 792.

1031. The headquarters and general offices of said commission shall be located at some city or town on the Mississippi River, to be designated by the Secretary of War, and the meetings of the commission, except such as are held on Government boats during the time of the semiannual inspection trips of the commission, shall be held at said headquarters and general offices, the times of said meetings to be fixed by the president of the commission, who shall cause due notice of such meetings to be given members of the commission and the public. Act of February 18, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 792).

To direct surveys.
Sec. 3, ibid.

1032. It shall be the duty of said commission to direct and complete such surveys of said river, between the Head of the Passes near its mouth to its head waters, as may be in progress, and to make such additional surveys, examinations, and investigations, topographical, hydrographical, and hydrometrical, of said river, and its tributaries, as may be deemed necessary by said commission to carry out the objects of this act. And to enable said commission to complete such surveys, examinations, and investigations, the Secretary of War shall, when requested by said commission, detail from the Engineer Corps of the Army such officers and men as may be necessary, and shall place in the charge and for the use of said commission such vessel or vessels and such machinery and instruments as may be under his control and may be deemed necessary. And the Secretary of the Treasury shall, when requested by said commission, in like manner detail from the Coast and Geodetic Survey such officers and men as may be necessary, and shall place in the charge and for the use of said commission such vessel or vessels and such machinery and instruments as may be under his control and may be deemed necessary. And the said commission may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, employ such additional force and assistants, and provide, by purchase or otherwise, such vessels or boats and such instruments and means as may be deemed necessary. Sec. 3, act of June 28, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 37).

1033. It shall be the duty of said commission to take into consideration and mature such plan or plans and estimates as will correct, permanently locate, and deepen the channel and protect the banks of the Mississippi River; improve and give safety and ease to the navigation thereof; prevent destructive floods; promote and facilitate commerce, trade, and the postal service; and when so prepared and matured, to submit to the Secretary of War a full and detailed report of their proceedings and actions, and of such plans, with estimates of the cost thereof, for the purposes aforesaid, to be by him transmitted to Congress: Provided, That the commission shall report in full upon the practicability, feasibility, and probable cost of the various plans known as the jetty system, the levee system, and the outlet system, as well as upon such others as they may deem necessary.[1] Sec. 4, ibid.

Report.

[1] The duties, under the law, of the Missouri River Commission, composed partly of civilians, relate exclusively to certain work quite other than the establishing of harbor lines. It is therefore not, as a body, subject to the directions of the Secretary of War in the matter of establishing harbor lines, nor are the civilian members subject individually to his orders. Thus, while they may consent to establish such lines, it is preferable for the Secretary to cause such work to be done through engineer officers of the Army. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2272.

Held, that the Mississippi River Commission derived no authority, from the statutes relating to its functions, to make allotments of the moneys appropriated by Congress for the improvements proposed. Its province is to indicate to Congress what improvements are needed and how much should be appropriated therefor. It has no authority to disburse money appropriated. An allotment made by it is to be treated by the Secretary of War as a recommendation only. The Secretary may adopt the recommendation, but in the disbursement should not omit any of the works specially designated by Congress in the appropriation act. Ibid., par. 2270.

Held, that the maps prepared by the Mississippi Commission, under appropriations by Congress, may legally be disposed of at the discretion of the commission, it being evidently intended by Congress that the information therein contained should be made public and circulated for the public use and benefit. Ibid., par. 2269.

Held (January, 1891), that the allowances for the traveling expenses of the civilian members of the Mississippi and Missouri River commissions were not regulated by any order of the War Department regulating the allowances of civil employees of the military establishment, but were such as are fixed by statute. They are not thus necessarily $4 per diem, since the statute law provides for the reimbursement of their actual necessary outlay, which may be more or less than this allowance. Ibid., par. 2271.

The salaries and traveling expenses of the members of the Mississippi River Commission who are appointed from civil life (Congress having failed to make a specific appropriation therefor) can not lawfully be defrayed out of the fund for the Mississippi River improvement. The application of such fund to that object would be inconsistent with section 3678, Revised Statutes. XVIII Opin. Att. Gen. 463.

The traveling expenses of the three civilian members of the Mississippi River Commission and of the member appointed from the Coast and Geodetic Survey include their actual traveling expenses only for all authorized travel on public duty. 3 Dig. Compt. Dec., 219.

In making appropriations for the improvement of the Mississippi River, Congress evidently contemplates that there shall be provided at public expense, on the vessel transporting the members of the Mississippi River Commission on their trips of

When an appropriation is available for the payment of accounts for "salaries and traveling expenses of the Mississippi River Commission, and for salaries and traveling expenses of assistant engineers, and for office expenses and contingencies," the following expenses are properly payable therefrom under existing laws: (1) The salaries of the three members of the commission appointed from civil life, at the rate of $3,000 each per annum, and of those only, the salaries of the other members being otherwise provided for; (2) the salaries of all civilian assistant engineers employed under the commission, but not that of the secretary of the commission or of any other assistant engineer detailed from the Corps of Engineers; (3) the actual traveling expenses only, for all authorized travel on public duty, of the three civilian members of the commission and of the member appointed from the Coast and Geodetic Survey; (4) the actual traveling expenses only, for all authorized travel on public duty, of all civilian assistant engineers employed under the commission; (5) the mileage of the three members of the commission appointed from the Engineer Corps of the Army, at the rate of 8 cents per mile, only under circumstances when mileage is authorized by law, for all travel required of them by the commission pertinent to the objects for which it was constituted, travel so required being travel under orders within the meaning of section 2 of the act of July 24, 1876, chapter 226; (6) the mileage of the secretary of the commission and of any other assistant engineer detailed from the Corps of Engineers and employed under the commission, at the rate of 8 cents per mile, only when mileage is authorized by law, for all travel required of them by the commission pertinent to the objects for which it was constituted; (7) the office expenses of the commission; (8) the contingent expenses of the commission. Ibid., p. 217.

The salaries accruing to the civilian members of the Mississippi River Commission, during a period when the regular appropriation for their payment is not available, can not legally be paid from funds appropriated for the improvement of the Mississippi River, unless provision is specifically made therefor in the act appropriating such funds. Ibid., p. 218. See, also, XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., p. 463.

And in case any pier or crib constructed under authority of this section shall at any time and for any cause be found to obstruct the navigation of the river the Government expressly reserves the right to remove or direct the removal of it at the cost and expense of the owners thereof.

Surveys at South Pass, Mississippi River. Sec. 4, Aug. 11, 1888, v. 25, p. 424. Appropriation made permanent.

1040. For the purpose of securing the uninterrupted examinations and surveys at the South Pass of the Mississippi River, as provided for in the act of March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-five,[1] the Secretary of War, upon the application of the Chief of Engineers, is hereby authorized to draw his warrant or requisition from time to time upon the Secretary of the Treasury for such sums as may be necessary to do such work, not to exceed in the aggregate for each year the amount appropriated in this act for such purpose: Provided, however, That an itemized statement of said expenditures shall accompany the Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers.[2] Sec. 4, act of August 11, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 424).

Regulations for navigation of South Pass, Mississippi River. Sec. 5, Aug. 11, 1888, v. 25, p. 424. Sec. 3, Sept. 19, 1890, v. 26, p. 452.

1041. The Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized to make such rules and regulations for the navigation of the South Pass of the Mississippi River as to him shall seem necessary or expedient for the purpose of preventing any obstruction to the channel through said South Pass and any injury to the works therein constructed. Sec. 5, act of August 11, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 424).

South Pass. Penalty for violation. Ibid.

1042. The term "South Pass," as herein employed, shall be construed as embracing the entire extent of channel between the upper ends of the works at the head of the Pass and the outer or sea end of the jetties at the entrance from the Gulf of Mexico; and any willful violation of any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of this act shall be deemed a misdemeanor, for which the owner or owners, agent or agents, master or pilot of the vessel so offending shall be separately or collectively responsible, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding three months, at the discretion of the court.[3] Ibid.

Snag boats, Upper Mississippi River.
Sec. 7, Aug. 11, 1888, v. 25, p. 424.
Appropriation for, made permanent.

1043. For the purpose of securing the uninterrupted work of operating snag boats on the Upper Mississippi River, and of removing snags, wrecks, and other obstructions in the Mississippi River, the Secretary of War, upon the application of the Chief of Engineers, is hereby authorized to draw his warrant or requisition from time to time upon the Secretary of the Treasury for such sums as may be necessary to do such work, not to exceed in the aggregate for each year the amounts appropriated in this act for such purposes: Provided, however, That an itemized statement of said expenses shall accompany the Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers. Sec. 4, act of August 11, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 424).

Creation.

1044. A commission to be called the Missouri River Commission is hereby created, to consist of five members.

Composition.
July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 144.
Ibid.

1045. The President shall nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint five commissioners, three of whom shall be selected from the Corps of Engineers of the Army and two from civil life, one of whom at least shall be a civil engineer; and he shall in like manner fill any vacancy in said commission; and he shall designate one of the commissioners appointed from the Corps of Engineers to be president of the commission. The commissioners appointed from the Corps of Engineers shall receive no other pay or compensation than is allowed them by law, and the other two commissioners shall each receive for their services pay at the rate of two thousand five hundred dollars per annum, out of any money appropriated for the Missouri River; and all said commissioners shall remain in office subject to removal by the President of the United States.[1] Ibid.

Duties. Ibid.

1046. It shall be the duty of said commission to superintend and direct such improvement of said river and to carry into execution such plans for the improvement of the navigation of said river from its mouth to its head waters as may now be devised and in progress, and to continue and complete such surveys as may now be in progress, and to make such additional surveys, examinations, and investigations, topographical, hydrographical, and hydrometrical, and to consider, devise, and mature such additional plan or plans, and all such estimates as may be deemed necessary and best, to obtain and maintain a channel and depth of water in said river sufficient for the purposes of commerce and navigation and to accomplish the objects of this act; and to enable the commission to perform the duties assigned them the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to transfer to and place under the control and superintendence of said commission all such vessels, barges, machinery, and instruments, and such plant as may now be provided, devised, or in use on said river, from appropriations heretofore made for said river, or other sources, and when thereto requested by said commission to detail from the Corps of Engineers such officers and men as may be necessary, and to place in the charge of said commission any such vessels, machinery, and instruments under his control as may be deemed necessary. And said commission may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, employ such additional force and assistants, and provide, by purchase or otherwise, such additional vessels, boats, machinery, instruments, and means as may be deemed necessary; to be paid for by appropriations made or to be made for said river. Ibid.

California Débris Commission. Mar. 1, 1892, v. 27, p. 507.

1049. A commission is hereby created, to be known as the California Débris Commission, consisting of three members. The President of the United States shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint the commission from officers of the Corps of Engineers, United States Army. Vacancies occurring therein shall be filled in like manner. It shall have the authority and exercise the powers hereinafter set forth, under the supervision of the Chief of Engineers and direction of the Secretary of War.[1] Act of March 1, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 507).

[1] The duties, under the law, of the Missouri River Commission, composed partly of civilians, relate exclusively to certain work quite other than the establishing of harbor lines. It is therefore not, as a body, subject to the directions of the Secretary of War in the matter of establishing harbor lines, nor are the civilian members subject individually to his orders. Thus, while they may consent to establish such lines, it is preferable for the Secretary to cause such work to be done through engineer officers of the Army. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 684, par. 2272.

Organization; compensation.

1050. Said commission shall organize within thirty days after its appointment by the selection of such officers as may be required in the performance of its duties, the same to be selected from the members thereof. The members of said commission shall receive no greater compensation than is now allowed by law to each, respectively, as an officer of said Corps of Engineers. It shall also adopt rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, to govern its deliberations and prescribe the method of procedure under the provisions of this act. Sec. 2, ibid.

Regulations. Sec. 2, ibid.

Jurisdiction.

1051. The jurisdiction of said commission, in so far as the same affects mining carried on by the hydraulic process, shall extend to all such mining in the territory drained by the Sacramento and San Joaquin river systems in the State of California. Hydraulic mining, as defined in section eight hereof, directly or indirectly injuring the navigability of said river systems, carried on in said territory other than as permitted under the provisions of this act is hereby prohibited and declared unlawful. Sec. 3, ibid.

Injurious hydraulic mining prohibited. Sec. 3, ibid.

1052. It shall be the duty of said commission to mature and adopt such plan or plans, from examinations and surveys already made and from such additional examinations and surveys as it may deem necessary, as will improve the navigability of all the rivers comprising said systems, deepen their channels, and protect their banks. Such plan or plans shall be matured with a view of making the same effective as against the encroachment of and damage from débris resulting from mining operations, natural erosion, or other causes, with a view of restoring, as near as practicable and the necessities of commerce and navigation demand, the navigability of said rivers to the condition existing in eighteen hundred and sixty, and permitting mining by the hydraulic process, as the term is understood in said State, to be carried on, provided the same can be accomplished without injury to the navigability of said rivers or the lands adjacent thereto. Sec. 4, ibid.

[1] The act of June 14, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 196), required the Secretary of War to cause such surveys, etc., to be made as would enable a scheme to be devised to prevent further injury to the navigable waters of California, due to the deposit in the same of débris from the mines.

The members of the California Débris Commission do not hold civil office within the meaning of section 1222 of the Revised Statutes, nor does section 1224 of the Revised Statutes necessitate their withdrawal from the Engineer Corps. XX Opin. Att. Gen., 604.

Surveys of storage sites, for débris, reservoirs, etc. Sec. 5, ibid.

1053. It shall further examine, survey, and determine the utility and practicability, for the purposes hereinafter indicated, of storage sites in the tributaries of said rivers and in the respective branches of said tributaries, or in the plains, basins, sloughs, and tule and swamp lands adjacent to or along the course of said rivers, for the storage of débris or water or as settling reservoirs, with the object of using the same by either or all of these methods to aid in the improvement and protection of said navigable rivers by preventing deposits therein of débris resulting from mining operations, natural erosion, or other causes, or for affording relief thereto in flood time and providing sufficient water to maintain scouring force therein in the summer season; and in connection therewith to investigate such hydraulic and other mines as are now or may have been worked by methods intended to restrain the débris and material moved in operating such mines by impounding dams, settling reservoirs, or otherwise, and in general to make such study of and researches in the hydraulic mining industry as science, experience, and engineering skill may suggest as practicable and useful in devising a method or methods whereby such mining may be carried on as aforesaid. Sec. 5, ibid.

Inspection of hydraulic and other mines, etc.

Noting condition of navigable channels. Sec. 6, ibid.

1054. The said commission shall from time to time note the conditions of the navigable channels of said river systems, by cross-section surveys or otherwise, in order to ascertain the effect therein of such hydraulic mining operations as may be permitted by its orders and such as is caused by erosion, natural or otherwise. Sec. 6, ibid.

Annual report. Sec. 7, ibid.

1055. Said commission shall submit to the Chief of Engineers, for the information of the Secretary of War, on or before the fifteenth day of November of each year, a report of its labors and transactions, with plans for the construction, completion, and preservation of the public works outlined in this act, together with estimates of the cost thereof, stating what amounts can be profitably expended thereon each year. The Secretary of War shall thereupon submit same to Congress on or before the meeting thereof. Sec. 7, ibid.

"Hydraulic mining" and "mining by the hydraulic process" defined.

1056. For the purposes of this act "hydraulic mining" and "mining by the hydraulic process," are hereby declared to have the meaning and application given to said terms in said State. Sec. 8, ibid.

Hydraulic miners must file petition with commission.

1057. The individual proprietor or proprietors, or in case of a corporation its manager or agent appointed for that purpose, owning mining ground in the territory in the State of California mentioned in section three hereof, which it is desired to work by the hydraulic process, must file with said commission a verified petition, setting forth such facts as will comply with law and the rules prescribed by said commission. Sec. 9, ibid.

Joint petition by mining claim owners requiring a common dumping ground, etc.

Contents of petition.

1058. Said petition shall be accompanied by an instrument duly executed and acknowledged, as required by the law of the said State, whereby the owner or owners of such mine or mines surrender to the United States the right and privilege to regulate by law, as provided in this act, or any law that may hereafter be enacted, or by such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by virtue thereof, the manner and method in which the débris resulting from the working of said mine or mines shall be restrained, and what amount shall be produced therefrom; it being understood that the surrender aforesaid shall not be construed as in any way affecting the right of such owner or owners to operate said mine or mines by any other process or method now in use in said State: Provided, That they shall not interfere with the navigability of the aforesaid rivers. Sec. 10, ibid.

1059. The owners of several mining claims situated so as to require a common dumping ground or dam or other restraining works for the débris issuing therefrom in one or more sites may file a joint petition setting forth such facts in addition to the requirements of section nine hereof; and where the owner of a hydraulic mine or owners of several such mines have and use common dumping sites for impounding débris or as settling reservoirs, which sites are located below the mine of an applicant not entitled to use same, such fact shall also be stated in said petition. Thereupon the same proceedings shall be had as provided for herein. Sec. 11, ibid.

Notice of petition, etc., to be published.

1060. A notice, specifying briefly the contents of said petition and fixing a time previous to which all proofs are to be submitted, shall be published by said commission in some newspaper or newspapers of general circulation in the communities interested in the matter set forth therein. If published in a daily paper such publication shall continue for at least ten days; if in a weekly paper, in at least three issues of the same. Pending publication thereof said commission or a committee thereof shall examine the mine and premises described in such petition. On or before the time so fixed all parties interested, either as petitioners or contestants, whether miners or agriculturists, may file affidavits, plans, and maps in support of their respective claims. Further hearings, upon notice to all parties of record, may be granted by the commission when necessary. Sec. 12, ibid.

Examination of mine.

Affidavits, plans, etc., may be filed.

Hearings.

1061. In case a majority of the members of said commission, within thirty days after the time so fixed, concur in a decision in favor of the petitioner or petitioners, the said commission shall thereupon make an order directing the methods and specifying, in detail, the manner in which operations shall proceed in such mine or mines; what restraining or impounding works, if facilities therefor can be found, shall be built and maintained; how and of what material; where to be located; and, in general, set forth such further requirements and safeguards as will protect the public interests and prevent injury to the said navigable rivers and the lands adjacent thereto, with such further conditions and limitations as will observe all the provisions of this act in relation to the working thereof and the payment of taxes on the gross proceeds of the same: Provided, That all expense incurred in complying with said order shall be borne by the owner or owners of such mine or mines. Sec. 13, ibid.

Favorable decisions within thirty days. Sec. 13, ibid.

1062. Such petitioner or petitioners must, within a reasonable time, present plans and specifications of all works required to be built in pursuance of said order for examination, correction, and approval by said commission; and thereupon work may immediately commence thereon under the supervision of said commission or representative thereof attached thereto from said Corps of Engineers, who shall inspect same from time to time. Upon completion thereof, if found in every respect to meet the requirements of the said order and said approved plans and specifications, permission shall thereupon be granted to the owner or owners of such mine or mines to commence mining operations, subject to the conditions of said order and the provisions of this act. Sec. 14, ibid.

Plans, etc., to be submitted to commission. Sec. 14, ibid.

Commencement of works. Supervision.

Completion.

Permission to commence mining.

1063. No permission granted to a mine owner or owners under this act shall take effect, so far as regards the working of a mine, until all impounding dams or other restraining works, if any are prescribed by the order granting such permission, have been completed, and until the impounding dams or other restraining works or settling reservoirs provided by said commission have reached such a stage as, in the opinion of said commission, it is safe to use the same: Provided, however, That if said commission shall be of the opinion that the restraining and other works already constructed at the mine or mines shall be sufficient to protect the navigable rivers of said systems and the work of said commission, then the owner or owners of such mine or mines may be permitted to commence operations.[1] Sec. 15, ibid.

Navigation, etc., sufficiently protected.

Allotment of expenses for constructing common dumps, etc. Ante, p. 508. Sec. 16, ibid.

1064. In case the joint petition referred to in section eleven hereof is granted, the commission shall fix the respective amounts to be paid by each owner of such mines toward providing and building necessary impounding dams or other restraining works. In the event of a petition being filed after the entry of such order, or in case the impounding dam or dams or other restraining works have already been constructed and accepted by said commission, the commission shall fix such amount as may be reasonable for the privilege of dumping therein, which amount shall be divided between the original owners of such impounding dams or other restraining works in proportion to the amount respectively paid by each party owning same. The expense of maintaining and protecting such joint dams or works shall be divided among mine owners using the same is such proportion as the commission shall determine. In all cases where it is practicable, restraining and impounding works are to be provided, constructed, and maintained by mine owners near or below the mine or mines before reaching the main tributaries of said navigable waters. Sec. 16, ibid.

Subsequent petitioners to pay for dumping privilege.

Apportionment of such payment to original owners.

Maintenance, etc.

Location.

Limit of débris washed away. Sec. 17, ibid.

1065. At no time shall any more débris be permitted to be washed away from any hydraulic mine or mines situated on the tributaries of said rivers and the respective branches of each, worked under the provisions of this act, than can be impounded within the restraining works erected. Sec. 17, ibid.

Modifications, etc., of orders. Sec. 18, ibid.

1066. The said commission may at any time, when the condition of the navigable rivers or when the capacities of all impounding and settling facilities erected by mine owners or such as may be provided by Government authority require same, modify the order granting the privilege to mine by the hydraulic mining process so as to reduce amount thereof to meet the capacities of the facilities then in use, or if actually required in order to protect the navigable rivers from damage, may revoke same until the further notice of the commission. Sec. 18, ibid.

[1] The act of March 1, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 507), requiring certain conditions precedent to be performed by persons desiring to engage in hydraulic mining in the territory comprised in the Sacramento and San Joaquin river systems, is to be construed as entirely prohibiting hydraulic mining in said territory until application has been made and permission given in accordance with the terms of the act. U. S. v. North Bloomfield Gravel Mining Co., 81 Fed. Rep., 243.

Forfeiture for violating conditions.

1067. An intentional violation on the part of a mine owner or owners, company or corporation, or the agents or employees of either, of the conditions of the order granted pursuant to section thirteen, or such modifications thereof as may have been made by said commission, shall work a forfeiture of the privileges thereby conferred, and upon notice being served by the order of said commission upon such owner or owners, company or corporation, or agent in charge, work shall immediately cease. Said commission shall take necessary steps to enforce its orders in case of the failure, neglect, or refusal of such owner or owners, company or corporation, or agents thereof, to comply therewith, or in the event of any person or persons, company or corporation working by said process in said territory contrary to law. Sec. 19, ibid.

Enforcement of orders, etc.

Visiting and inspection of mines.
Sec. 20, ibid.

1068. Said commission, or a committee therefrom, or officer of said corps assigned to duty under its orders, shall, whenever deemed necessary, visit said territory and all mines operating under the provisions of this act. A report of such examination shall be placed on file. Sec. 20, ibid.

Use of public lands and material.

1069. The said commission is hereby granted the right to use any of the public lands of the United States, or any rock, stone, timber, trees, brush, or material thereon or therein for any of the purposes of this act; and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and requested, after notice has been filed with the Commissioner of the General Land Office by said commission, setting forth what public lands are required by it under the authority of this section, that such land or lands shall be withdrawn from sale and entry under the laws of the United States. Sec. 21, ibid.

Willful injury to works a misdemeanor.

1070. Any person or persons who willfully or maliciously injure, damage, or destroy, or attempt to injure, damage, or destroy any dam or other work erected under the provisions of this act for restraining, impounding, or settling purposes, or for use in connection therewith, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not to exceed the sum of five thousand dollars or be imprisoned not to exceed five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. Sec. 22, ibid.

Violation of this act a misdemeanor. Ibid.

1071. And any person or persons, company or corporation, their agents or employees, who shall mine by the hydraulic process directly or indirectly injuring the navigable waters of the United States, in violation of the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court: Provided, That this section shall take effect on the first day of May, eighteen hundred and ninety-three. Ibid.

Penalty.

1072. Upon the construction by the said commission of dams or other works for the detention of débris from hydraulic mines and the issuing of the order provided for by this act to any individual, company, or corporation to work any mine or mines by hydraulic process, the individual, company, or corporation operating thereunder working any mine or mines by hydraulic process, the débris from which flows into or is in whole or in part restrained by such dams or other works erected by said commission, shall pay a tax of three per centum on the gross proceeds of his, their, or its mine so worked; which tax of three per centum shall be ascertained and paid in accordance with regulations to be adopted by the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized to receive the same. Sec. 23, ibid.

A "débris fund" created. Expenditures from same by the commission. Ibid.

1073. All sums of money paid into the Treasury under this section shall be set apart and credited to a fund to be known as the "Débris fund," and shall be expended by said commission under the supervision of the Chief of Engineers and direction of the Secretary of War, in addition to the appropriations made by law, in the construction and maintenance of such restraining works and settling reservoirs as may be proper and necessary: Provided, That said commission is hereby authorized to receive and pay into the Treasury from the owner or owners of mines worked by the hydraulic process, to whom permission may have been granted so to work under the provisions hereof, such money advances as may be offered to aid in the construction of such impounding dams or other restraining works, or settling reservoirs, or sites therefor, as may be deemed necessary by said commission to protect the navigable channels of said river systems, on condition that all moneys so advanced shall be refunded as the said tax is paid into the said débris fund: And provided further, That in no event shall the Government of the United States be held liable to refund same except as directed by this section. Ibid.

Commission may consult with State commission of engineers. Sec. 24, ibid.

Appropriations from débris fund to be expended in restraining works, etc., above head of navigation, etc. Sec. 25, ibid.

1075. Said commission, in order that such material as is now or may hereafter be lodged in the tributaries of the Sacramento and San Joaquin river systems, resulting from mining operations, natural erosion, or other causes, shall be prevented from injuring the said navigable rivers or such of the tributaries of either as may be navigable and the land adjacent thereto, is hereby directed and empowered, when appropriations are made therefor by law, or sufficient money is deposited for that purpose in said débris fund, to build at such points above the head of navigation in said rivers and on the main tributaries thereof, or branches of such tributaries, or at any place adjacent to the same which, in the judgment of said commission will effect said object (the same to be of such material as will insure safety and permanency), such restraining or impounding dams and settling reservoirs, with such canals, locks, or other works adapted and required to complete same. Sec. 25, ibid.

Recommendations adopted and made the basis of operations. Ibid.

1076. The recommendations contained in Executive Document Numbered Two hundred and sixty-seven, Fifty-first Congress, second session, and Executive Document Numbered Ninety-eight, Forty-seventh Congress, first session, Appropriations.

as far as they refer to impounding dams, or other restraining works, are hereby adopted, and the same are directed to be made the basis of operations. The sum of fifteen thousand dollars is hereby appropriated, from moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available, to defray the expenses of said commission. Ibid.

Treasurer of the United States to receive funds appropriated by the State of California.

June 3, 1896, v. 29, p. 232.

1077. The Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized to receive from the State of California, through the débris commission of said State, or other officer thereunto duly authorized, any and all sums of money that have been, or may hereafter be, appropriated by said State for the purposes herein set forth. And said sums when so received are hereby appropriated for the purposes above named, to be expended in the manner above provided. Act of June 3, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 232).

Receipt and use of State appropriations.

1078. For the purpose of carrying out the following provision of the river and harbor act of eighteen hundred and ninety-six: "For the construction of restraining barriers for the protection of the Sacramento and Feather rivers in California, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, such restraining barriers to be constructed under the direction of the Secretary of War in accordance with the recommendations of the California Débris Commission, pursuant to the provisions of and for the purposes set forth in section twenty-five of the act of the Congress of the United States entitled, 'An act to create the California Débris Commission and regulate hydraulic mining in the State of California,' approved March first, eighteen hundred and ninety-three: Provided, That the Treasurer of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to receive from the State of California, through the débris commission of said State, or other officer thereunto duly authorized, any and all sums of money that have been or may hereafter be appropriated by said State for the purposes herein set forth. And said sums when so received and hereby appropriated for the purposes above named, to be expended in the manner above provided," and for the further purpose of making available to the United States the appropriation, or any part thereof, made by the provisions of an act of the legislature of the State of California, approved March seventeenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment, duties, and compensation of a débris commissioner, and to make appropriation to be expended under his directions in the discharge of his duties as such commissioner, approved March twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three,'" and of said amended act, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized, in the preparation for and construction of the proposed works authorized and appropriated for by the aforesaid provisions, to enter into an agreement that the contractor shall look solely to the State of California for one-half of such expense, to be paid out of said State appropriation, and the United States shall in no manner be liable for said one-half. Act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 631).

Agreement that contractor shall look solely to State for half expenses, etc.

1079. The provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, and for other purposes," approved July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, authorizing the Secretary of War, in expending certain specified appropriations in the preparation for and construction of certain works for the restraining or impounding of mining débris in the State of California, to enter into a contract or contracts wherein the contractor or contractors shall look solely to that State for one-half of such expense, and that the United States shall in no wise be liable for said one-half, are hereby extended to any appropriations, when made, that may hereafter be made for said purposes.[1] Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1148).

Contractor to look to State of California for one-half of cost of works. Mar. 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1148.

1080. The Secretary of War, in carrying out the provisions of any act of Congress providing for the restraining or impounding of mining débris in California, may, in his discretion, when in his judgment the aggregate of appropriations already made by said State and Congress and available therefor are sufficient to complete the same, undertake the works necessary thereto by hired labor and by purchase of supplies and materials therefor, and may accept payments on account thereof as the work progresses under and according to the provisions of the acts of the legislature of said State for such purposes. Ibid.

Work may be done by hired labor. Ibid.

1081. Officers of the commission traveling on duty in connection with the commission's work may be paid their actual traveling expenses in lieu of mileage allowed by law, and shall hereafter receive no mileage. Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1109).

Actual expenses allowed for travel. Mileage prohibited. Ibid.

THE ISTHMIAN CANAL COMMISSION.

Commission. Duties. Mar. 3, 1899, s. 3, v. 30, p. 1150.

1082. The President of the United States of America be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to make full and complete investigation of the Isthmus of Panama with a view to the construction of a canal by the United States across the same to connect the Atlantic and Pacific oceans; that the President is authorized to make investigation of any and all practicable routes for a canal across said Isthmus of Panama, and particularly to investigate the two routes known respectively as the Nicaraguan route and the Panama route, with a view to determining the most practicable and feasible route for such canal, together with the proximate and probable cost of constructing a canal at each of two or more of said routes. And the President is further authorized to investigate and ascertain what rights, privileges and franchises, if any, may be held and owned by any corporations, associations, or individuals, and what work, if any, has been done by such corporations, associations, or individuals in the construction of a canal at either or any of said routes, and particularly at the so-called Nicaraguan and Panama routes, respectively; and likewise to ascertain the cost of purchasing all of the rights, privileges, and franchises held and owned by any such corporations, associations, and individuals in any and all of such routes, particularly the said Nicaraguan route and the said Panama route; and likewise to ascertain the probable or proximate cost of constructing a suitable harbor at each of the termini of said canal, with the probable annual cost of maintenance of said harbors, respectively. And generally the President is authorized to make such full and complete investigation as to determine the most feasible and practicable route across said Isthmus for a canal, together with the cost of constructing the same and placing the same under the control, management, and ownership of the United States. Sec. 3, act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1150).

Compensation, employees, etc. Sec. 4, ibid.

1083. To enable the President to make the investigations and ascertainments herein provided for he is hereby authorized to employ in said service any of the engineers of the United States Army, at his discretion, and, likewise, to employ any engineer in civil life, at his discretion, and any other persons necessary to make such investigation, and to fix the compensation of any and all of such engineers and other persons. Sec. 4, ibid.

Funds for support of commission. Sec. 5, ibid.

1084. For the purpose of defraying the expenses necessary to be incurred in making the investigations herein provided for there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one million dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be disbursed by order of the President. Sec. 5, ibid.

Report. Sec. 6, ibid.

1085. The President is hereby requested to report to Congress the results of such investigations, together with his recommendations in the premises. Sec. 6, ibid.

The act of February 10, 1875, contained the following provision: "For torpedoes for harbor defenses and the preservation of the same, and for torpedo experiments in their application to harbor and land defense, and for instruction of engineer battalion in their preparation and application, fifty thousand dollars: Provided, That the money herein appropriated for torpedoes shall only be used in the establishment and maintenance of torpedoes to be operated from shore stations for the destruction of an enemy's vessel approaching the shore or entering the channels and fairways of harbors," which was repeated in the acts of February 10, 1875, June 20, 1876, March 3, 1877, March 23, 1878, March 3, 1879, May 4, 1880, March 3, 1881, and May 19, 1882. The act of March 3, 1883, contained the requirement that "one-half of the money herein appropriated may be used in the purchase of torpedoes of the latest improvement."

If, in the opinion of the Chief of Engineers, a contemplated building will be an appliance necessary in the operation of submarine mines for the defense of harbors, or will, when completed, be used in operating such mines, or in such a way as to render their operation possible for the defense of harbors, the cost of its erection is chargeable to the appropriation for torpedoes for harbor defense. 3 Compt. [2] A proceeding to condemn lands for the use of the United States under this statute is properly brought in a district court of the United States. In such proceeding the practice should be in substantial conformity with that pursued in the courts of the State in which the lands are situated, when similar proceedings are there instituted. U. The manner in which the power of eminent domain of the United States shall be exercised is a matter of legislative discretion, and Congress, by the act of August 1, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 357), has vested in the United States circuit and district courts of the district in which land is situated jurisdiction of proceedings authorized to be instituted by any public officer to condemn such land for public purposes. By the act of August 18, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 316), the Secretary of War is authorized to cause proceedings to be instituted for the condemnation of land for military purposes "in any court having jurisdiction of such proceedings." Held, that said acts are in pari materia, and upon an application by the Secretary of War, under the latter act, the Attorney-General may, at his election, cause proceedings to be instituted for the condemnation of land for military purposes in either the State or Federal courts. Par. 1691, A. R., 1901.

[1] The doctrine of the common law as to the navigability of waters has no application in this country. Here the ebb and flow of the tide do not constitute the usual test, as in England, or any test at all of the navigability of waters. The test by which to determine the navigability of waters in our rivers is found in their navigable capacity. Those rivers are navigable rivers in law which are navigable in fact. Rivers are navigable in fact when they are used, or are susceptible of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce, on which trade and travel are, or may be conducted, in the customary modes of trade and travel on waters; and they constitute navigable waters of the United States, within the meaning of the acts of Congress, in contradistinction from the navigable waters of the States, when they form, in their ordinary condition, by themselves, or by uniting with other waters, a continued highway over which commerce may be carried on with other States or foreign countries in the customary modes in which such commerce is conducted by water. The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall., 557; The Montello, 11 Wall., 411; Ex parte Boyer, 109 U. S., 629.

If a river is not of itself a highway for commerce with other States or foreign countries, or does not form such highway by its connecton with other waters, and is only navigable between different places within the State, it is not a navigable water of the United States, but only a navigable water of a State. The Montello, 11 Wall., 411.

The right to regulate commerce includes the right to regulate navigation, and hence to regulate and improve navigable rivers and ports on such rivers. So. Car. v. Ga., 93 U. S., 4; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall., 713.

In the case of the Willamette Bridge Co. v. Hatch (125 U. S., 1), it was held that clauses similar to that contained in the ordinance of 1787 (1 Stat. L., 52, note) to the effect that "the navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and the St. Lawrence, and the carrying places between them, shall be common highways and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said territory as to the citizens of the United States and those of any other States that may be admitted into the Confederacy, without any tax, impost, or duty therefor" (see also act of February 14, 1859, 11 Stat. L., 383), do not refer to physical obstructions, but to political regulations which would hamper the freedom of commerce, * * * and can not be regarded as establishing the police power of the United States over such river, or as giving the Federal courts jurisdiction to hear and determine, according to Federal law, every complaint that may be made of an impediment in, or an encroachment upon, the navigation of these rivers. * * * Nor does the expenditure of money in improving navigation of such rivers import an assumption of police power.

When Congress, in the exercise of its exclusive power to direct how the public money shall be employed, has appropriated a certain sum to be devoted, without exceptions or provisos, to a certain specific internal improvement, it devolves upon the Executive Department of the Government, charged as it is with the execution of the laws enacted by the Legislature, to proceed with the work under the appropriation, without entertaining any question as to the expediency of the expenditure. Thus where Congress had made in general terms an appropriation of a specific amount for improving a certain river, advised that it was for the officer charged with the improvement simply to do the work, without delaying, to raise or consider questions or claims of title to the land, etc., to be affected by the improvement; such matters being quite beyond the province of an executive official under the circumstances. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1487.

The United States is not the owner of the soil of the beds of navigable waters [see the definition of the term "navigable waters of the United States," in The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall., 557; Ex parte Boyer, 109 U. S., 629], nor of the shores of tide waters below high-water mark, nor of the shores of waters not affected by the tide below the ordinary water line of the same, except as it may have become grantee of such soil from the State or from individuals. The property and jurisdiction in and over the beds and shores of navigable waters is in general in the State, or in the individual riparian owner [Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How., 212; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S., 337; Gilman v. Philad., 3 Wall., 713; South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S., 4; VI Opin. Att. Gen., 172; VII ibid., 314; XVI ibid., 479]. But under the power to regulate commerce Congress may assume, as it has recently assumed, the power so to regulate navigation over navigable waters within the States as to prohibit its obstruction and to cause the removal of obstructions thereto, and such power when exercised is "conclusive of any right to the contrary asserted under State authority. [Wisconsin v. Duluth, 96 U. S., 379]. In exercising this power it can not divest rights of title or occupation in a State or individuals, but these rights are left to be enjoyed as before, subject, however, to the paramount public right of freeing navigation from obstruction possessed and exercised by the United States through Congress. In the execution of the laws relating to obstructions to navigation the Secretary of War has no general authority, but only such as may have been vested in him by legislation of Congress, especially in the river and harbor appropriation acts. Ibid., par. 1773.

As between the United States and a State, the soil of the bed of navigable waters and of the shores of tide waters below high-water mark, or—on rivers not reached by the tide—the soil of the shores below the ordinary water line (as not affected by freshet or unusual drought) belongs to the State. But natural accretions to land owned by private individuals belong to the owners of the land. Thus, held, that the accretions to Hog Island, in the mouth of the Missouri River, belonged, not to the United States or to the State of Missouri, but to the owner of the island. Ibid., pars. 1559, 1711 and 1712.

Where the title to tide lands along the shores of a State is vested in such State by virtue of its sovereignty, and tide lands along the shores of any Territory are held in trust by the General Government for the future State, nevertheless the rule now is that, during the Territorial period, the United States holds the permanent title to tide lands and may make grants thereof. Carroll v. Prince, 81 Fed. Rep., 138; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S., 1; Mann v. Land Co., 153, ibid., 273.

Held, that it was doubtful whether "floatable" streams, i. e., streams capable only of being used for floating saw logs, timber, etc., not being navigable in a general sense, were included in the term "navigable waters of the United States," as employed in statutes providing that dams shall not be constructed in such waters without the permission of the Secretary of War. But held, that it was clearly competent for Congress, under the commerce clause of the Constitution, to exercise legislation over such streams as highways of interstate commerce. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1793. See also Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet., 367; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How., 212; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 13 How., 518; Den v. Jersey Co., 15 How., 426.

POWER OF THE STATES.

Until the dormant power of the Constitution is awakened and made effective by appropriate legislation the reserved power of the State is plenary, and its exercise in good faith can not be made the subject of review by this court. Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall., 713. The power to construct work of rivers and harbor improvement in the navigable waters of the United States, as an incident of the power to regulate commerce "covering as it does a wide field, and embracing a great variety of subjects, some of which will call for uniform rules and national legislation, while others can best be regulated by rules suggested by the varying circumstances of differing places, and limited in their operation to such places respectively; and to the extent required by these last cases, the power to regulate commerce may be exercised by the States." Ibid. However, Congress may interpose whenever it shall be deemed necessary, by either general or special laws. It may regulate all bridges over navigable waters, remove offending bridges, and punish those who shall thereafter erect them. Ibid. It is for Congress to determine when its full power shall be brought into activity, and as to the regulations and sanctions which shall be provided. U. S. v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Woodbury and Minot, 420, 421; U. S. v. Cornet, 12 Pet., 72; N. Y. v. Milne, 11 Pet., 102, 155; The Wheeling Bridge Cases, 13 How., 518; 18 ibid., 521.

A State has power to change the channels of rivers within the State for purposes of internal improvement. Withers v. Buckley, 20 How., 84; So. Car. v. Ga., 93 U. S., 4. In the absence of legislation by Congress, a State statute authorizing the erection of a dam across a navigable river which is wholly within its limits is not unconstitutional. Wilson v. Blackbird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet., 245; Pound v. Turck, 95 U. S., 459.

Acts of Congress merely making appropriations for the improvement of a river lying within a State do not operate as an inhibition against State legislation authorizing the construction of booms, dams, piers, etc., so as to make unlawful such structures when erected under State authority. U. S. v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co., 81 Fed. Rep., 658. To bring obstructions and nuisances in navigable waters lying within a State within the cognizance of the Federal courts, there must be some statute of the United States directly applicable to such streams. The authority conferred upon the Secretary of War by the act of June 29, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 209), does not extend to the waters of the Hudson River as far distant as Troy, Albany, and New Baltimore. The term "tributary waters," as used in that act, covers only such parts of the river as, in a broad sense, can be regarded as connected with that harbor. XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 317.

The waters of the East River comprise navigable waters of the United States lying wholly within the limits of a State. XX Opin. Att. Gen., 479.

The Chicago River is navigable and under control of Congress; but until that body acts the State of Illinois has authority, and may vest in the city of Chicago jurisdiction over the construction of a bridge within the city limits. Escanaba Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S., 678. The State of Michigan authorized the improvement of a river wholly within that State, and the exaction of the tolls for the use of the river so improved. Held, that the statute did not impair the contract contained in the ordinance of 1787, giving the people the right to use the waters leading into the St. Lawrence free of duty, tax, or impost. The title to tide lands along the shores of a State is vested in such State by virtue of its sovereignty, and tide lands along the shores of any Territory are held in trust by the General Government for the future State; nevertheless, the rule now is that during the Territorial period the United States holds the permanent title to tide lands, and may make grants thereof. Carroll v. Price, 81 Fed. Rep., 137; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S., 1; Mann v. Land Co., 153 U. S., 273.

Marshes and mud shoals on the sides of harbors and streams within the influence of the tides may be granted by the State to private parties when this can be done without interfering with the public rights of navigation in the streams and harbors themselves, and in South Carolina marsh lands of this character have always been treated as subject to grant. But as to public navigable streams themselves, the sovereign holds them in trust for the public use, and can make no valid grant thereof, such as would hinder or impede the rights of the public therein. The royal charters granted by the English Crown to the founders of the Atlantic colonies conveyed to the grantees both the territory described and the powers of government; and, under such charters, the dominion or property in the navigable waters and in the soil under them passed as a part of the prerogative rights annexed to the political powers conferred on the patentees, and in their hands were intended to be a trust for the common use and benefit of the new communities, and not as private property which could be parceled out and sold; and, on the Revolution, such rights became vested in the several States for like purposes, where such as were not surrendered by the Constitution to the Federal Government remain. Morris v. U. S., 174 U. S., 196.

Taking of lands for public use.—When the Government, for the purpose of improving the navigation of a river, takes possession of submerged land which is in the use and possession of a citizen under a right derived from the State, it takes private property for a public use, and must compensate the owner therefor. Brown v. U. S., 81 Fed. Rep., 55.

Acts done in the proper exercise of governmental powers, and not directly encroaching upon private property, although their consequences may impair its use, are not a taking within the meaning of the constitutional provision which forbids the taking of such property for public use without just compensation therefor. Transportation Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S., 635; XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 64. The United States may occupy and use soil within the bed of a river for the improvement of the navigation of such river, such occupation and use not giving rise to a question under the law of eminent domain, the soil being held by its owners subject to the higher right of the United States in respect to the navigation of the river. The report above required was furnished to Congress by the Chief of Engineers on May 13, 1898. Document No. 482, H. R., 55th Congress, 2d session.

Section 2 of the act of June 3, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 234), contained the requirement that "The Secretary of War is directed to cause to be prepared a compilation of all general laws that have been enacted from time to time by Congress for the maintenance, protection, and preservation of the navigable waters of the United States which are now in force, and to submit the same to Congress at its session in December next, together with such recommendation as to revision, emendation, or enlargement of the said laws as, in his judgment, will be advantageous to the public interest."

[1] The appropriation of money for the improvement of a harbor on a navigable river confers discretionary power upon the Secretary of War as to the means by which such improvement shall be effected. So. Car. v. Ga., 93 U. S., 4. The operations of the Government in this regard have been conducted by the Bureau of Engineering, as part of the War Department, to which Congress has confided the execution of its wishes in all those matters. * * * It can not be necessary to say that, when a public work of this character has been inaugurated or adopted by Congress and its management placed in control of its officers, there exists no right in any other branch of the Government to forbid the work or to require the undoing of what has been done or to prescribe the manner in which it shall be conducted. Wisconsin v. Duluth, 96 U. S., 379. For these purposes Congress possesses all the powers which existed in the States before the adoption of the Constitution, and which have always existed in the Parliament of England. Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall., 713.

Where an officer or agent, charged under the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers with the duty of making purchases out of the appropriations for river and harbor improvements, certifies that the prices paid were the lowest market rates and the mode of expenditure adopted the most economical and advantageous to the Government, and the Chief of Engineers approves his account so far as relates to the necessity and expediency of the expenditures and the prices paid, it is not within the province of the accounting officers to call in question the degree of wisdom or skill which may have accompanied the exercise of administrative discretion. 3 Compt., Dec. 22. It is the duty of the proper officers of the War Department to determine when such an emergency exists requiring immediate delivery of property necessary for river and harbor improvements as will authorize its purchase in open market without advertisement. Discretionary power in this respect is vested by law in the War Department, and the exercise of such discretion is not properly reviewable by the accounting officers. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt., Dec., par. 1116.

The continuous-contract system.—By the act of June 3, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 207), the construction of works of river and harbor improvement by the continuous-contract system was authorized by Congress. The practice has been followed in subsequent acts of appropriation. The application of this system to a particular work involves the establishment of a limit of cost in the act authorizing it to be undertaken, and the authorization of the execution of contracts for the whole or a part of the work of construction, subject to the restriction that the amount expended in any fiscal year shall not exceed the sum specifically appropriated by Congress, such sum being in general a certain per cent of the entire estimated cost of construction.

[1] For general provisions in respect to the acquisition of land by the United States, see the act of August 1, 1888, and the chapters entitled THE PUBLIC LANDS and THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE. The acts of June 14, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 193), and March 3, 1881 (ibid., 482), authorized the expenditure of funds in the acquisition of sites for river and harbor improvements, by voluntary purchase or condemnation, under the direction of the Secretary of War, with the proviso "that if the owners of such lands shall refuse to sell them at reasonable prices, then the prices to be paid shall be determined and the title and jurisdiction procured in the manner prescribed by the laws of the State in which such lands or sites are situated."

In a suit brought in a United States court to condemn land for use in connection with the work of improving a river, the expenses of taking the jury to view the land are payable from the appropriation of the Department of Justice made for the expenses of the United States courts, and not from the War Department appropriation for the improvement in connection with which the land is needed. [1] Held (April, 1887), that under the acts appropriating money for the improvement of the Columbia River, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, the Secretary, while authorized to make regulations for the prosecution and protection of the works of improvement, was not empowered to require, by such regulations, the removal of fish-traps and pound nets as obstructions to navigation; that it was not within the province of the Secretary of War to determine what is or what may become an obstruction to navigation, and cause to be removed the one or prohibited the other by a mere order or regulation, in the absence of authority given by specific legislation of Congress. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1781.

A fish weir, so constructed as in a measure to obstruct the navigation of navigable waters, can not legally be placed in such waters without the authority of the Secretary of War, who, by section 7, act of September 19, 1890, is empowered to grant permission for the purpose. And so of a boom desired to be placed in a navigable river. Ibid., par. 1784.

[2] The mileage allowance of officers of the Corps of Engineers when traveling on duty connected with river and harbor improvements, being an expense necessarily incidental to and incurred on account of such work, is properly payable from the appropriations therefor and not from the appropriation "Pay of the Army," at the special rates prescribed by army acts for mileage payable from said appropriation. 3 Dig. 2d Compt. Dec., par. 290.

Officers of the Corps of Engineers, or those on engineer duty, traveling on service connected with fortifications or works of public improvement, will be paid their travel allowances from the special appropriations for the work. When traveling on any other duty, the mileage will be paid by that branch of the service intrusted with such payments for the Army. Par. 1693, A. R., 1901.

The provision in the act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 321), that "the maximum sum to be allowed and paid to any officer of the Army shall be seven cents per mile," applies to all officers of the Army, including officers of the Corps of Engineers. 4 Compt. Dec., 711. An officer of the Army traveling under orders and using a conveyance upon which transportation and subsistence are furnished or paid for by the Government is not entitled to mileage. Ibid., 429.

The movements of an army officer assigned to duty requiring him to move from place to place within the area of the district where his duties lie, for which he is furnished Government transportation, do not constitute "travel" within the meaning of the law allowing mileage for travel under orders. Ibid., 86.

Regulations to be posted.

1113. Such rules and regulations shall be posted, in conspicuous and appropriate places, for the information of the public; and every person and every corporation which shall knowingly and willfully violate such rules and regulations shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof in any district court in the United States within whose territorial jurisdiction such offense may have been committed, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding six months, in the discretion of the court.[1] *Sec. 4, act of August 17, 1894 (28 Stat. [1] The indefinite appropriation made by section 4 of the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 147), is not applicable to river and harbor improvements generally, but only to a particular class of public works, such as canals, locks, etc., in the use of which both operating expenses and expenses for repairs are necessarily incurred. XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 188.

The effect of this statute is to repeal so much of sections 5245, 5247, 5249, and 5255, Revised Statutes, as authorizes the imposition of tolls or other charges for the use of canals or other works of river and harbor improvement erected at the expense of the United States. Section 5255 vested the management of the Louisville and Portland Canal in the Secretary of the Treasury at reduced rates of toll. The tolls were still further reduced by the act of May 11, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 43), and the control of the canal transferred to the Secretary of War, who, by the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 148), was given authority to make, post, and enforce regulations for the use of the canal, and this legislation was repeated in the act of September 30, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 497). The acts of May 18, 1880 (21 Stat. L., 141), and August 2, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 209), contained a provision that no tolls or operating charges should be levied upon or collected from vessels, dredges, or other water craft passing through any canal or other improvement of navigation belonging to the United States.

[2] Section 7 of the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 148), authorized the Secretary of War to prescribe rules and regulations for the use and administration of the Des Moines Rapids Canal, the Saint Marys Falls Canal, and the Louisville and Portland Canal. Section 14 of the act of September 19, 1890 (27 Stat. L., 455), provides that the dry dock constructed at the Des Moines Rapids Canal shall constitute an integrant part of the said canal, and makes the provisions of section 7, above cited, applicable to the same. [1] In view of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of the United States v. Eaton (144 U. S., 677), it may be doubted whether regulations prepared in conformity to this statute can have the penal character which it undertakes to confer. It was held in that case that "regulations prescribed by the President and by heads of Departments, under authority of Congress, may be regulations prescribed by law so as to lawfully support acts done under them and in accordance with them; but it does not follow that a thing required by them is a thing so required by law as to make a neglect to do the thing a criminal offense in a citizen, where a statute does not distinctly make the neglect in question a criminal offense." U. S. v. Eaton, 144 U. S., 88; Caha v. U. S., 152 U. S., 212, 220. It is a principle of the criminal law that an offense which may be the subject of criminal procedure is an act "committed or omitted in violation of a public law, either forbidding or commanding it." U. S. v. Eaton, 144 U. S., 87; IV American and English Cyclcpedia of Law, 642; IV Blackstone Com., 5. In Morrill v. Jones (106 U. S., 466), it was held that the Secretary of the Treasury could not alter or amend a statute by executive regulation; "much more does this principle apply to a case where it is sought substantially to prescribe a criminal offense by the regulation of a Department." That Congress can not delegate legislative power to the President is a principle universally recognized as vital to the integrity and maintenance of the system of government. Field v. Clark, 143 U. S., 649. The enforcement of the law may be made to depend upon a condition to be ascertained by an executive officer, but such an exception to the uniform operation of the laws is not a grant of legislative power. [1] For enforcement clause see section 17, act of March 3, 1899, paragraph 1132, post. The power of Congress to legislate for the prevention and removal of physical obstructions to navigation in public rivers in general, (a) having been allowed to lie dormant for nearly a century, began to be exercised in section 8 of the act of July 5, 1884, followed by the more explicit legislation on the subject of sections 9 and 10 of the act of August 11, 1888; such power having been previously left to be exercised by the States. (b) But these acts, in providing for the removal of obstructions to navigation caused by bridges, by requiring their alteration, etc., do not empower the Secretary of War to resort to military force to effect the purpose. They leave the execution of their provisions to the law officers and the courts. They make it the duty of the Secretary of War, whenever the owners or responsible parties, after having been notified to do so, neglect to so alter a bridge as to abate the obstruction, to apprize the Attorney-General, who is thereupon required to initiate the proceedings specified in the statute. (c) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 613.

The power thus assumed by Congress is more fully exercised in sections 4, 5, and 7 of the act of September 19, 1890.

A distinctive feature of this act is that it in effect precludes States from authorizing the construction of bridges over navigable waters which are not wholly within their territorial limits, and provides that it shall not be lawful to commence the construction of a bridge over navigable water of the United States under any act of a State legislature "until the location and plan of such bridge" has "been submitted to and approved by the Chief of Engineers and by the Secretary of War." Held, under this provision, that the authority of a State for the erection ot a bridge over navigable water within the State must be shown as a condition precedent to the approval by the Secretary of War. Ibid.

Section 7 of the act of September 19, 1890 (reenacted in section 3, act of July 13, 1892), clearly shows that Congress did not intend to vest the Secretary of War with discretion to approve the plans of any bridge proposed to be constructed by State authority, except where such bridge was to be over navigable water lying wholly within the State. And held that the fact that the title to the soil under the water was vested in a municipality of the State did not affect the power of the State to grant the necessary authority. The title is distinct from the right of conservation. Though the title be vested in a town, there exists in the State, by reason of its sovereignty, "a jus publicum of passage and repassage, with consequent power of conservation," under (d) which it may concede the authority required by the statute. Ibid., p. 199, par. 3.

Section 7 of the act of 1890, in leaving the matter of the authorization and construction of bridges over navigable waters wholly within States entirely to the jurisdiction of the State, except in so far as to require the approval by the Chief of Engineers and by the Secretary of War of the location and plan of the bridge, indicates that Congress did not desire to exercise any further control over the subject. So, upon an application for the approval by the Secretary of War of the plans of a bridge over the Harlem River which is wholly within the State of New York, held that the fact of the unusual importance of this stream, and of its immediate connections with great interstate waterways and the sea, did not except it from the jurisdiction of the State under the statute or make necessary any special or additional legislation by Congress for the authorization or control of its system of bridges. Ibid., par. 616.

It is to be regretted that this, being a criminal case, could not have been appealed to the Supreme Court.

any of the navigable waterways of the United States is an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of such waters on account of insufficient height, width of span, or otherwise, or where there is difficulty in passing the draw opening or the draw span of such bridge by rafts, steamboats, or other water craft, it shall be the duty of the said Secretary, first giving the parties reasonable opportunity to be heard, to give notice to the persons or corporations owning or controlling such bridge so to alter the same as to render navigation through or under it reasonably free, easy, and unobstructed; and in giving such notice he shall specify the changes recommended by the Chief of Engineers that are required to be made, and shall prescribe in each case a reasonable time in which to make them. If at the end of such time the alteration has not been made, the Secretary of War shall forthwith notify the United States district attorney for the district in which such bridge is situated, to the end that the criminal proceedings hereinafter mentioned may be taken. If the persons, corporation, or association owning or controlling any railroad or other bridge shall, after receiving notice to that effect, as hereinbefore required, from the Secretary of War, and within the time prescribed by him, willfully fail or refuse to remove the same or to comply with the lawful order of the Secretary of War in the premises, such persons, corporation, or association shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and every month such persons, corporation, or association shall remain in default in respect to the removal or alteration of such bridge shall be deemed a new offense, and subject the persons, corporation, or association so offending to the penalties above prescribed: Provided, That in any case arising under the provisions of this section an appeal or writ of error may be taken from the district courts or from the existing circuit courts direct to the Supreme Court either by the United States or by the defendants.[1] *Sec. 18, act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. The power of Congress to regulate bridges over navigable waters is paramount, and where it comes into conflict with that of a State, the latter necessarily becomes ineffective. Every such person who shall willfully fail or refuse to open, or cause to be opened, the draw of any such bridge for the passage of a boat or boats, or who shall unreasonably delay the opening of said draw after reasonable signal shall have been given, as provided in such regulations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than two thousand dollars nor less than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) for not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That the proper action to enforce the provisions of this section may be commenced before any commissioner, judge, or court of the United States, and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States.[1] *Sec. 5, act of August 17, 1894 (28 Stat. By the act of February 19, 1869 (15 Stat. L., 272), the construction of a drawbridge over the Connecticut River at Middletown, Conn., was authorized by Congress. The State statute authorizing the construction of the bridge, of which the act above referred to was in the nature of a confirmation and approval by Congress, required draws "not less than 130 feet in width in the clear," and the bridge was to be located and constructed in such manner and according to such plans as should be approved by a board of engineers to be appointed by the superior court. The bridge was built accordingly under the supervision and with the approval of a board of engineers of which two of the members were Generals McClellan and Gillmore. The draw space was 130 feet wide in the clear between the abutments down to the level of low water; below that, the riprap, sloping outward from the piers, diminished the clear space toward the bottom of the river. Held, that the contemporaneous construction of the act as requiring the full width down to the level of low water only, the projection of the riprap foundation below being approved by the board of engineers and confirmed by the court, was neither unreasonable nor so plainly contrary to the requirements of the act or the public needs as to render the bridge, approved as above, an unlawful structure. assuming control of the river, may require the construction of a draw in the bridge upon the happening of such a contingency, without providing for compensation to the bridge owners. U. S. v. City of Moline, 82 Fed. Rep., 592. As every bridge constructed over the navigable waters of the United States constitutes an obstruction to the free navigation thereof, and as the Congress is, by the Constitution, made the exclusive judge of the extent and amount of the obstruction that shall be authorized in any case, that body reserves to itself the right to authorize the construction of bridges over such waters. The nearest approach to general legislation on this subject will be found in the act of February 14, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 414), authorizing the construction of bridges across the Ohio River.

S., it was decided by the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit, in February, 1899, that the replaced section of the act of July 13, 1892, was constitutional, and that a State had no authority, under its police power, to close any navigable water of the United States, though located wholly within the limits of the State, for the purpose of reclamation of swamp lands, without the consent of the Federal Government. Leovy v. U. S., 92 Fed. Rep., 344. When Congress has assumed jurisdiction over a navigable river lying wholly within one State, Congress has power to order obstructions to navigation removed, even though their construction was authorized by the State. U. S. v. City of Moline, 82 Fed. Rep., 592. But the right of Congress to remove the obstruction does not, of itself, exempt the Government of the United States from the duty of making just compensation for such property rights as are taken. Wharves are a peculiar kind of property, which, though standing on terra firma, are so far marine in their uses and purposes as to come within admiralty jurisdiction. In England it is generally held that they extend to the low-water mark. In this country, with the extending of admiralty jurisdiction to our inland seas and navigable rivers, it has been held that they may extend to the point of navigability. The owner has not an unlimited property in them. If the wharf be not reserved for his actual use, or of some one acquiring the right under him, it is open to the public, and any vessel may make fast to and use it. Neither can the owner charge an unreasonable price for wharfage. Clifford v. U. [1] This section replaces section 3 of the act of August 14, 1876 (19 ibid., 132, 139), and section 9 of the act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 426). Section 9 of the act of March 3, 1899, contained a provision directing the Secretary of War "to cause to be prepared and reported to Congress a list of all piers, wharves, and other structures or property pertaining to river and harbor works belonging to the Government of the United States now occupied by private corporations or persons, together with the terms upon which such piers, wharves, or other property are occupied, and the date of the agreement or permission to occupy the same, and shall make such recommendations as he may deem desirable in connection therewith."

[2] The construction, without the authority of the Secretary of War, of weirs in a harbor, which is navigable water of the United States, outside of established harbor lines (or where there are no harbor lines established), is, under section 7, act of September 19, 1890, unlawful when the same will be detrimental to navigation. And whether or not the persons who constructed such weirs had any license from the town is immaterial. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1783.

The United States may avail itself of the remedy by injunction to protect from injury improvements in navigable waters made under the authority of Congress. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 279; U. S. v. Duluth, 4 Dillon, 469.

Floating loose timber, logs, etc. May 9, 1900, v. 31, p. 172.

1128. The prohibition contained in section fifteen[2] of the river and harbor act approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, against floating loose timber and logs, or sack rafts, so called, of timber and logs in streams or channels actually navigated by steamboats, shall not apply to any navigable river or waterway of the United States or any part thereof whereon the floating of loose timber and logs and sack rafts of timber and logs is the principal method of navigation. But such method of navigation on such river or waterway or part thereof shall be subject to the rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War as hereinafter provided. Act of May 9, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 172).

[1] This section replaces section 10 of the act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 454).

Regulations for floating logs, rafts, etc., to be made by Secretary of War.

1129. The Secretary of War shall have power, and he is hereby authorized and directed, within the shortest practicable time after the passage hereof, to prescribe rules and regulations, which he may at any time modify, to govern and regulate the floating of loose timber and logs, and sack rafts (so called) of timber and logs and other methods of navigation on the streams and waterways, or any thereof, of the character, as to navigation, in section one hereof described. The said rules and regulations shall be so framed as to equitably adjust conflicting interests between the different methods or forms of navigation; and the said rules and regulations shall be published at least once in such newspaper or newspapers of general circulation as in the opinion of the Secretary of War shall be best adapted to give notice of said rules and regulations to persons affected thereby and locally interested therein. And all modifications of said rules and regulations shall be similarly published. And such rules and regulations, when so prescribed and published as to any such stream or waterway, shall have the force of law, and any violation thereof shall be a misdemeanor, and every person convicted of such violation shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding two thousand five hundred dollars nor less than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in case of a natural person) for not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That the proper action to enforce the provisions of this section may be commenced before any commissioner, judge, or court of the United States, and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in the case of crimes or misdemeanors committed against the United States. Sec. 2, ibid.

Amendment.

1130. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act at any time is hereby reserved. Sec. 3, ibid.

Civil actions not affected.
Sec. 4, ibid.

1131. This act shall not, nor shall any rules or regulations prescribed thereunder, in any manner affect any civil action or actions heretofore commenced and now pending to recover damages claimed to have been sustained by reason of the violation of any of the terms of said section fifteen, as originally enacted, or in violation of any other law.[1] Sec. 4, ibid.

[1] The act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1155), contains a similar requirement.

Department of Justice to conduct legal proceedings.
Mar. 3, 1899, s. 17, v. 30, p. 1153.

1132. The Department of Justice shall conduct the legal proceedings necessary to enforce the foregoing provisions of sections nine to sixteen, inclusive, of this act; and it shall be the duty of district attorneys of the United States to vigorously prosecute all offenders against the same whenever requested to do so by the Secretary of War or by any of the officials hereinafter designated, and it shall furthermore be the duty of said district attorneys to report to the Attorney-General of the United States the action taken by him against offenders so reported, and a transscript of such reports shall be transmitted to the Secretary of War by the Attorney-General; and for the better enforcement of the said provisions and to facilitate the detection and bringing to punishment of such offenders, the officers and agents of the United States in charge of river and harbor improvements, and the assistant engineers and inspectors employed under them by authority of the Secretary of War, and the United States collectors of customs and other revenue officers, shall have power and authority to swear out process and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by the aforesaid sections of this act, or who may violate any of the provisions of the same: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of some one of the aforesaid officials: And provided further, That whenever any arrest is made under the provisions of this act, the person so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States. Sec. 17. act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1153).

OBSTRUCTION OF NAVIGATION BY SUNKEN VESSELS, ETC.

Par.	Par.
1132a. Sunken vessels, removal.	1133. Removal of wrecks, etc.; sale.

Sunken vessels, etc.
Mar. 3, 1899, s. 19, v. 30, p. 1154.

1132a. Whenever the navigation of any river, lake, harbor, sound, bay, canal, or other navigable waters of the United States shall be obstructed or endangered by any sunken vessel, boat, water craft, raft, or other similar obstruction, and such obstruction has existed for a longer period than thirty days, or whenever the abandonment of such obstruction can be legally established in a less space of time, the sunken vessel, boat, water craft, raft, or other obstruction shall be subject to be broken up, removed, sold, or otherwise disposed of by the Secretary of War at his discretion, without liability for any damage to the owners of the same: Provided, That in his discretion, the Secretary of War may cause reasonable notice of such obstruction of not less than thirty days, unless the legal abandonment of the obstruction can be established in a less time, to be given by publication, addressed "To whom it may concern," in a newspaper published nearest to the locality of the obstruction, requiring the removal thereof: And provided also, That the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, at or after the time of giving such notice, cause sealed proposals to be solicited by public advertisement, giving reasonable notice of not less than ten days, for the removal of such obstruction as soon as possible after the expiration of the above specified thirty days' notice, in case it has not in the meantime been so removed, these proposals and contracts, at his discretion, to be conditioned that such vessel, boat, water craft, raft, or other obstruction, and all cargo and property contained therein, shall become the property of the contractor, and the contract shall be awarded to the bidder making the proposition most advantageous to the United States: Provided, That such bidder shall give satisfactory security to execute the work: Provided further, That any money received from the sale of any such wreck, or from any contractor for the removal of wrecks, under this paragraph shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.[1] Sec. 19, act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1154).

Removal of wrecks, etc. Sec. 20, ibid.

1133. Under emergency, in the case of any vessel, boat, water craft, or raft, or other similar obstruction, sinking or grounding, or being unnecessarily delayed in any Government canal or lock, or in any navigable waters mentioned in section nineteen, in such manner as to stop, seriously interfere with, or specially endanger navigation, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, or any agent of the United States to whom the Secretary may delegate proper authority, the Secretary of War or any such agent shall have the right to take immediate possession of such boat, vessel, or other water craft, or raft, so far as to remove or to destroy it and to clear immediately the canal, lock, or navigable waters aforesaid of the obstruction thereby caused, using his best judgment to prevent any unnecessary injury; and no one shall interfere with or prevent such removal or destruction: Provided, That the officer or agent charged with the removal or destruction of an obstruction under this section may in his discretion give notice in writing to the owners of any such obstruction requiring them to remove it: And provided further, That the expense of removing any such obstruction as aforesaid shall be a charge against such craft and cargo; and if the owners thereof fail or refuse to reimburse the United States for such expense within thirty days after notification, then the officer or agent aforesaid may sell the craft or cargo, or any part thereof that may not have been destroyed in removal, and the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States. Sec. 20, ibid.

[1] Owners of a vessel who scuttle and sink her in a harbor while on fire, for the purpose of saving her rigging and spars, and abandoning her to the underwriters, may be compelled to remove the hull, as an obstruction to navigation, under section 10 of the act of September, 19, 1890. U. S. v. Hall, 63, Fed. Rep., 472.

Such sum of money as may be necessary to execute this section and the preceding section of this act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid out on the requisition of the Secretary of War.

All laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the foregoing sections ten to twenty, inclusive, of this act are hereby repealed: Provided, That no action begun, or right of action accrued, prior to the passage of this act shall be affected by this repeal. Sec. 20, ibid.

DEPOSITS IN NEW YORK HARBOR.

Par.
1134. Deposits in New York Harbor forbidden; penalty.

1137. Penalty for discharging elsewhere.
1138. Boats to carry name painted on stern.

Par.
1139. Inspectors.
1140. Bribery; penalty.
1141. Return of permits; penalty.
1142. Disposal of matter dredged.
1143. Supervisor of harbor.
1144. Fishing in ship channels forbidden.
1145. Penalties.
1146. Arrests.

New York Harbor; injurious deposits in, forbidden; penalty.
Sec. 3, Aug. 5, 1886, v. 24, p. 329; sec. 1, June 29, 1888, v. 25, p. 209.

1134. The placing, discharging, or depositing, by any process or in any manner, of refuse, dirt, ashes, cinders, mud, sand, dredgings, sludge, acid, or any other matter of any kind, other than that flowing from streets, sewers, and passing therefrom in a liquid state, in the tidal waters of the harbor of New York, or its adjacent or tributary waters, or in those of Long Island Sound, within the limits which shall be prescribed by the supervisor of the harbor, is hereby strictly forbidden, and every such act is made a misdemeanor, and every person engaged in or who shall aid, abet, authorize, or instigate a violation of this section, shall, upon conviction, be punishable by a fine or imprisonment, or both, such fine to be not less than two hundred and fifty dollars nor more than two thousand five hundred dollars, and the imprisonment to be not less than thirty days nor more than one year, either or both united, as the judge before whom conviction is obtained shall decide, one half of said fine to be paid to the person or persons giving information which shall lead to conviction of this misdemeanor.[1] Sec. 1, act of June 29, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 209).

Punishment of officer of boat.
Sec. 2, June 29, 1888, v. 25, p. 209.

1135. Any and every master and engineer, or person or persons acting in such capacity, respectively, on board of any boat or vessel, who shall knowingly engage in towing any scow, boat, or vessel loaded with any such prohibited matter to any point or place of deposit, or discharge in the waters of the harbor of New York, or in its adjacent or tributary waters, or in those of Long Island Sound, or to any point or place elsewhere than within the limits defined and permitted by the supervisor of the harbor hereinafter mentioned, shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this act, and shall, upon conviction, be punishable as hereinbefore provided for offenses in violation of section one of this act, and shall also have his license revoked or suspended for a term to be fixed by the judge before whom tried and convicted.[2] Sec. 2, act of June 29, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 209).

Supervisor to designate place of deposit.
Sec. 3, June 29, 1888, v. 25, p. 209; sec. 3, Aug. 17, 1894, v. 28, p. 360.

1136. In all cases of receiving on board of any scows or boats such forbidden matter or substance as herein described, the owner or master, or person acting in such capacity on board of such scows or boats, before proceeding to take or tow the same to the place of deposit, shall apply for and obtain from the supervisor of the harbor appointed hereunder a permit defining the precise limits within which the discharge of such scows or boats may be made; and it shall not be lawful for the owner or master, or person acting in such capacity, of any tug or towboat, to tow or move any scow or boat so loaded with such forbidden matter until such permit shall have been obtained; and every person violating the foregoing provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand nor less than five hundred dollars, and in addition thereto the master of any tug or towboat so offending shall have his license revoked or suspended for a term to be fixed by the judge before whom tried and convicted. Sec. 3, act of August 17, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 360).

[1] The Erie and Atlantic basins, in New York Harbor, are private property, but they are also navigable waters of the United States, and the owners of the soil under the water hold the title subject to the rights of the public to navigate such waters, and are therefore not empowered to fill in the basins and deprive the public of their use. Moreover they are waters over which the United States has expressly assumed jurisdiction, in prohibiting, by the act of June 29, 1888, the dumping of deposits "in the tidal waters of the harbor of New York, or its adjacent or tributary waters, within the limits which shall be prescribed by the supervisor of the harbor." Held, that the subsequent establishment, under section 12, of the act of August 11, 1888, of harbor lines in that harbor outside these basins did not oust this jurisdiction, but that the act of June 29, 1888, was still in force. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1786.

Held, that the prohibition, by section 6, act of September 19, 1890, of the dumping of ballast, could not legally be enforced in New York Harbor beyond the three-mile limit. Ibid., par. 1787. See also XX Opin. Att. Gen., 293.

[2] The act of June 29, 1888, 25 Stat. L., 209, as amended by the act of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 360), prohibiting the deposit of refuse in New York Harbor without a permit from the supervisor of the harbor, is a valid exercise of the police powers of Congress over navigation and commerce. U. S. v. Romard, 89 Fed. Rep., 156.

Permits.

Penalty.

Penalty for discharging elsewhere. Ibid.

1137. And any deviation from such dumping or discharging place specified in such permit shall be a misdemeanor, and the owner and master, or person acting in the capacity of master, of any scows or boats dumping or discharging such forbidden matter in any place other than that specified in such permit shall be liable to punishment therefor, as provided in section one of the said act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight; and the owner and master, or person acting in the capacity of master, of any tug or towboat towing such scows or boats shall be liable to equal punishment with the owner and master, or person acting in the capacity of master, of the scows or boats; and, further, every scowman or other employee on board of both scows and towboats shall be deemed to have knowledge of the place of dumping specified in such permit, and the owners and masters, or persons acting in the capacity of masters, shall be liable to punishment, as aforesaid, for any unlawful dumping, within the meaning of this act or of the said act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, which may be caused by the negligence or ignorance of such scowman or other employee; and, further, neither defect in machinery nor avoidable accidents to scows or towboats, nor unfavorable weather, nor improper handling or moving of scows or boats of any kind whatsoever, shall operate to release the owners and masters and employees of scows and towboats from the penalties hereinbefore mentioned. Ibid.

Boats to carry name, etc., painted. Ibid.

1138. Every scow or boat engaged in the transportation of dredgings, earth, sand, mud, cellar dirt, garbage, or other offensive material of any description shall have its name or number and owner's name painted in letters and numbers at least fourteen inches long on both sides of the scow or boat; these names and numbers shall be kept distinctly legible at all times, and no scow or boat not so marked shall be used to transport or dump any such material. Ibid.

Inspectors.

Ibid.

1139. The supervisor of the harbor of New York, designated as provided in section five of the said act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, is authorized and directed to appoint inspectors and deputy inspectors, and, for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this act and of the act aforesaid, and of detecting and bringing to punishment offenders against the same, the said supervisor of the harbor, and the inspectors and deputy inspectors so appointed by him, shall have power and authority:

Duties. Arrests.

First. To arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by this section and by the act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, aforesaid, or who may violate any of the provisions of the same: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of the supervisor or his inspectors or deputy inspectors, or either of them: And provided further, That whenever any such arrest is made the person or persons so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States.

Seizure of boats.

Second. To go on board of any scow or towboat engaged in unlawful dumping of prohibited material, or in moving the same without a permit as required in this section of this act, and to seize and hold said boats until they are discharged by action of the commissioner, judge, or court of the United States before whom the offending persons are brought.

Custody of witness.

Third. To arrest and take into custody any witness or witnesses to such unlawful dumping of prohibited material, the said witnesses to be released under proper bonds.

Accompanying towboats.

Fourth. To go on board of any towboat having in tow scows or boats loaded with such prohibited material, and accompany the same to the place of dumping, whenever such action appears to be necessary to secure compliance with the requirements of this act and of the act aforesaid.

Inspecting gas, etc., works.

Fifth. To enter gas and oil works and all other manufacturing works for the purpose of discovering the disposition made of sludge, acid, or other injurious material, whenever there is good reason to believe that such sludge, acid, or other injurious material is allowed to run into the tidal waters of the harbor in violation of section one of the aforesaid act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight. Ibid.

1140. Every person who, directly or indirectly, gives any sum of money or other bribe, present, or reward, or makes any offer of the same to any inspector, deputy inspector, or other employee of the office of the supervisor of the harbor with intent to influence such inspector, deputy inspector, or other employee to permit or overlook any violation of the provisions of this section or of the said act of June twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and be imprisoned not less than six months nor more than one year. Ibid.

Return of permits. Ibid.

1141. Every permit issued in accordance with the provisions of this section of this act which may not be taken up by an inspector or deputy inspector shall be returned within forty-eight hours after issuance to the office of the supervisor of the harbor; such permit shall bear an indorsement by the master of the towboat, or the person acting in such capacity, stating whether the permit has been used, and if so, the time and place of dumping. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be liable to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars nor less than one hundred dollars. Ibid.

Penalty.

Disposal of matter dredged. Sec. 4, June 29, 1888, v. 25, p. 210.

1142. All mud, dirt, sand, dredgings, and material of every kind and description whatever taken, dredged, or excavated from any slip, basin, or shoal in the harbor of New York, or the waters adjacent or tributary thereto, and placed on any boat, scow, or vessel for the purpose of being taken or towed upon the waters of the harbor of New York to a place of deposit, shall be deposited and discharged at such place or within such limits as shall be defined and specified by the supervisor of the harbor, as in the third section of this act prescribed, and not otherwise. Every person, firm, or corporation being the owner of any slip, basin, or shoal, from which such mud, dirt, sand, dredgings, and material shall be taken, dredged, or excavated, and every person, firm, or corporation in any manner engaged in the work of dredging or excavating any such slip, basin, or shoal, or of removing such mud, dirt, sand, or dredgings therefrom, shall severally be responsible for the deposit and discharge of all such mud, dirt, sand, or dredgings at such place or within such limits so defined and prescribed by said supervisor of the harbor; and for every violation of the provisions of this section the person offending shall be guilty of an offense against this act, and shall be punished by a fine equal to the sum of five dollars for every cubic yard of mud, dirt, sand, dredgings, or material not deposited or discharged as required by this section. Any boat or vessel used or employed in violating any provision of this act shall be liable to the pecuniary penalties imposed thereby, and may be proceeded against summarily by way of libel in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof.[1] Sec. 4, act of June 29, 1888, (25 Stat. L., 210).

Supervisor of the harbor.

1143. A line officer of the Navy shall be designated by the President of the United States as supervisor of the harbor, to act under the direction of the Secretary of War in enforcing the provisions of this act, and in detecting offenders against the same. This officer shall receive the sea pay of his grade, and shall have personal charge and supervision under the Secretary of War, and shall direct the patrol boats and other means to detect and bring to punishment offenders against the provisions of this act. Sec. 5, ibid.

Fishing, etc., in ship channels forbidden.
Sec. 2, Aug. 17, 1894, v. 28, p. 360.

1144. It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to engage in fishing or dredging for shell fish in any of the channels leading to and from the harbor of New York, or to interfere in any way with the safe navigation of those channels by ocean steamships and ships of deep draft.

Penalties.
Ibid.

1145. Any person or persons violating the foregoing provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, such fine to be not more than two hundred and fifty dollars nor less than fifty dollars, and the imprisonment to be not more than six months nor less than thirty days, either or both united, as the judge before whom conviction is obtained shall decide. Ibid.

HARBOR REGULATIONS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Par.
1147. District Commissioners to prepare regulations.
1148. Unlawful deposits forbidden.
1149. Penalty.
1150. Limitation.

Harbor regulations for the District of Columbia. May 19, 1896, v. 29, p. 126.

1147. It shall be unlawful for any owner or occupant of any wharf or dock, any master or captain of any vessel, or any person or persons to cast, throw, drop, or deposit any ballast, dirt, oyster shells, or ashes in the water in any part of the Potomac River or its tributaries in the District of Columbia, or on the shores of said river below high-water mark, unless for the purpose of making a wharf, after permission has been obtained from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for that purpose, which wharf shall be sufficiently inclosed and secured so as to prevent injury to navigation. Act of May 19, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 126).

Unlawful deposits forbidden. Sec. 2, ibid.

1148. It shall be unlawful for any owner or occupant of any wharf or dock, any captain or master of any vessel, or any other person or persons to cast, throw, deposit, or drop in any dock or in the waters of the Potomac River or its tributaries in the District of Columbia any dead fish, fish offal, dead animals of any kind, condemned oysters in the shell, watermelons, cantaloupes, vegetables, fruits, shavings, hay, straw, ice, snow, filth, or trash of any kind whatsoever. Sec. 2, ibid.

Penalty. Sec. 3, ibid.

1149. Any person or persons violating any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof in the police court of the District of Columbia shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both such punishments, in the discretion of the court. Sec. 3, ibid.

1150. Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to interfere with the work of improvement in or along the said river and harbor, under the supervision of the United States Government. Sec. 4, ibid.

Historical Note.—Legislative provision for the services of engineer officers with the Revolutionary armies was made at a relatively early stage in the progress of the war by a resolution of Congress of June 16, 1775, which authorized the employment of engineer officers at the headquarters of the Army and in the several departments. Col. R. Gridley was appointed Chief Engineer by General Washington, and his services were recognized and continued in that capacity by a resolution of Congress dated January 16, 1776. The difficulty of obtaining trained engineers in the Continental establishment made it necessary to secure such services abroad, and the action of the American commissioners in Paris, in employing several members of the French corps of engineers, was approved by Congress in a resolution dated July 8, 1777. A corps of engineers was subsequently established by the resolution of March 11, 1779, and M. Duportail, an officer of the Royal Engineers of France, was placed at its head, with the rank of brigadier-general. This corps continued in service until the close of the war, not having been disbanded until November, 1783.

A Corps of Artillerists and Engineers was established by the act of May 9, 1784 (1 Stat. L., 366). This organization was required to be "completed" by the act of March 3, 1795 (ibid., 430), and an additional regiment of artillerists and engineers was added to the establishment by the act of April 27, 1798 (ibid., 552). The seventeenth and eighteenth sections of the act of March 3, 1799 (ibid., 755), passed in contemplation of war with France, authorized the appointment of two engineers "distinct from the corps of artillerists and engineers," with the rank and pay of lieutenant-colonels, and conferred power upon the President, in his discretion, to appoint an inspector of fortifications, who was to have the rank of major and was to be selected from the artillerists and engineers, or from civil life. If he was appointed from the existing corps he was to retain his office and was to rise "therein in the same manner as if he had never been appointed to the said office of inspector."

The functions of the artillerists and engineers were dissociated by the act of March 6, 1802 (2 ibid., 132), which created a regiment of artillery and authorized the President to organize and establish a Corps of Engineers to consist of one major, two captains, two first lieutenants, two second lieutenants, and ten cadets; provision was made in the same enactment for the gradual expansion of the corps by a clause conferring authority upon the President to make promotions "without regard to rank" until the corps should consist of one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, four captains, four first lieutenants, and four second lieutenants. By the act of April 29, 1812 (2 ibid., 720), two captains, two first lieutenants, two second lieutenants, "to be taken from the subaltern officer of engineers," and one paymaster and a company of bombardiers, sappers, and miners were added to the existing establishment. The composition of this corps was not changed by the acts of March 3, 1815 (3 ibid., 224), and April 4, 1818 (ibid., 426), for the reduction and reorganization of the staff, nor was its organization modified at the general reduction of March 2, 1821 (ibid., 615).

By section 2 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 Stat. L., 256), a Corps of Topographical Engineers was established, and the President was authorized to increase the Corps of Engineers by the addition of one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, six captains, six first lieutenants, and six second lieutenants, and the pay of engineer officers was fixed at the rates established by law for officers of dragoons. By section 3 of the act of July 5, 1838, the paymaster authorized by the act of April 12, 1808, was transferred to the Pay Department. A second company of engineer soldiers was added to the corps by section 4 of the act of May 15 1846 (9 ibid., 12). By the act of March 3, 1851 (ibid., 62), the President was authorized to employ officers of engineers on lighthouse duty, and by section 8 of the act of August 31, 1852 (10 ibid., 119), officers of the corps were required to be attached to the Light-House Board as member and engineer secretary, respectively. By section 9 of the act of March 3, 1853 (ibid., 119), lieutenants of engineers, after fourteen years' continuous service, were to be entitled to the pay and allowances of captains. By section 3 of the act of August 5, 1861 (12 ibid., 287), three first lieutenants and three second lieutenants were added, and the organization of three additional companies of engineer soldiers was authorized by the act of August 6, 1861 (ibid., 317); two lieutenant-colonels and four majors were added to the strength of the corps, "by regular promotion." The Corps of Topographical Engineers was discontinued by the act of March 3, 1863 (ibid., 743), and its officers were merged in the Corps of Engineers. Examinations were also required, in all grades below that of field officer, as a condition precedent to promotion. The composition of the corps was fixed, by the same enactment, at one brigadier-general, four colonels, ten lieutenant-colonels, twenty majors, thirty captains, thirty first lieutenants, and ten second lieutenants. By section 19 of the act of July 28, 1866 (4 ibid., 333), the strength of the corps was fixed at one brigadier-general, six colonels, twelve lieutenant-colonels, twenty-four majors, thirty captains, twenty-six first lieutenants, and ten second lieutenants. By section 6, of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), appointments and promotions in the several departments of the staff were suspended until otherwise directed by Congress. This requirement was removed, however, as to all officers below the grade of brigadier-general by the act of June 10, 1872 (17 ibid., 382), and repealed as to the Chief of Engineers by the act of June 30, 1879 (21 ibid., 45). By the act of July 5, 1898 (30 ibid., 652), the strength of the Corps of Engineers was fixed at one brigadier-general, seven colonels, fourteen lieutenant colonels, twenty-eight majors, thirty-five captains, thirty first lieutenants, and twelve second lieutenants.

By section 22 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754), the permanent strength of the department was fixed at one Chief of Engineers with the rank of brigadier-general, seven colonels, fourteen lieutenant-colonels, twenty-eight majors, forty captains, forty first lieutenants, and thirty second lieutenants. The enlisted force was also increased by the addition of two battalions of engineer troops. It was also provided that the troops of the three engineer battalions and the officers of Engineers assigned to duty therewith should constitute a part of the line of the Army.

THE CORPS OF TOPOGRAPHICAL ENGINEERS.

The act of March 3, 1813 (2 Stat. L., 819), authorized the appointment of eight topographical engineers with the rank of major of cavalry and eight assistants with the rank of captain of infantry; but this force was reduced to two majors by the act of March 3, 1815 (ibid., 224). By the act of April 24, 1816 (ibid., 297), three majors and two assistants with the rank of captain were authorized for each division of the Army. On July 2, 1818, these officers were merged, by general orders, in the Corps of Engineers. In August, 1818, a topographical bureau was established in the War Department, the duties of the bureau being performed by officers detailed from the line. By the act of April 30, 1824 (4 ibid., 22), civil assistants were authorized to be employed, and on June 21, 1831, the Topographical Bureau was formally constituted, in general orders, as a separate office of the War Department.

The Corps of Topographical Engineers eo nomine was established by section 4 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 Stat. L., 256), to consist of one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, four majors, ten captains, ten first lieutenants, and ten second lieutenants, who were to be appointed by selection from the Corps of Engineers, from the line of the Army, and from the civil engineers authorized by the act of April 30, 1824. The corps as thus constituted was increased by section 2 of the act of August 5, 1861 (12 ibid., 287), by the addition of three first lieutenants and three second lieutenants, and, by the act of August 6, 1861 (ibid., 317), by the addition of two lieutenant-colonels, four majors, and one company of engineer soldiers. The corps was discontinued by the act of March 3, 1863 (9 Stat. L., 743), its officers being merged in the Corps of Engineers.

1156. All officers so detailed shall serve for a period of four years, at the end of which time they shall return to duty with the line, and officers below the rank of lieutenant-colonel shall not again be eligible for selection in any staff department until they have served two years with the line. Ibid.

MISCELLANEOUS REQUIREMENTS.

Pay of principal assistant to Chief of Ordnance. Feb. 27, 1877, v. 19, p. 243. Sec. 1279, R. S.

1157. The principal assistant in the Ordnance Bureau shall receive a compensation, including pay and emoluments, not exceeding that of a major of ordnance.

Rank of ordnance storekeepers.

1158. The ordnance storekeeper at Springfield armory shall have the rank of major of cavalry, and the ordnance storekeeper now on duty in Washington as disbursing officer and assistant to the Chief of Ordnance, United States Army, shall hereafter have the rank of major. All other ordnance storekeepers shall have the rank of captain of cavalry. Act of June 6, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 260.)[1]

---

[1] The system of examinations above prescribed now applies to such officers only as held commissions in the department on February 2, 1901; vacancies which may hereafter occur are required to be filled in accordance with the system of details prescribed in section 26 of the act of February 2, 1901. See, in this connection, the title Details to the Staff in the chapter entitled The Staff Departments.

Examinations for promotions in this department are now regulated by the acts of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 245), October 1, 1890 (26 ibid., 562), and July 27, 1892 (27 ibid., 276).

Vacancies in the lowest grade in the Ordnance Department are filled by the appointment of officers from the line of the Army who have passed a satisfactory examination of the kind prescribed in this section. The conditions of appointment and examination are set forth in paragraphs 1489 and 1490 of the Army Regulations of 1895.

1171. Material for cartridge bags.

General purchases. Mar. 3, 1901, v. 31, p. 905.

Purchases of steel. Feb. 24, 1891, v. 26, p. 769.

1170. No contract for the expenditure of any portion of the money herein provided, or that may be hereafter provided for the purchase of steel shall be made until the same shall have been submitted to public competition by the Department by advertisement. Act of February 24, 1891[2] (26 Stat. L., 769).

Material for cartridge bags. Mar. 15, 1898, v. 30, p. 326.

1171. When, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, it is necessary to purchase material abroad for the manufacture of sacks for artillery cartridges, it shall be admitted free of duty. Act of March 15, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 326).

$60,000 by the acts of June 30, 1886, February 9, 1887, September 22, 1888, March 2, 1889, June 13, 1890, February 24, 1891, July 16, 1892, February 27, 1893, August 6, 1894, February 12, 1895, March 16, 1896, March 2, 1897, and March 15, 1898. This restriction is suspended, during the existing war with Spain, by the act of June 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 434), and subsequent enactments of similar character.

[1] This enactment replaces the act of August 6, 1891 (28 Stat. L., 242), authorizing open-market purchases, not exceeding two hundred dollars in amount, in the manner common among business men. For general provisions respecting the procurement of supplies and services, see the chapters entitled CONTRACTS AND PURCHASES.

The act of June 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 434), contained the requirement that "during the existing war the Bureau of Ordnance of the War Department is authorized to purchase without advertisement such ordnance and ordnance stores as are needed for immediate use, and when such ordnance and ordnance stores are to be manufactured then to make contracts without advertisement for such stores to be delivered as rapidly as manufactured." By section 3 of the act of February 24, 1900 (31 Stat. L. 33), this authority was extended to June 30, 1901.

[2] The act of May 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 401), contains the requirement "that no contract for oil-tempered and annealed steel for high-power coast-defense guns and mortars shall be made at a price exceeding twenty-three cents per pound." The same statute confers authority upon the Secretary of War, at his discretion, to expend a portion of the money appropriated for oil-tempered and annealed steel for the purchase of material for steel-wire seacoast guns. The acts of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1251), and May 25, 1900 (31 ibid., 184), contain similar requirements; those of March 3, 1899, and May 25, 1900, restricted the price to be paid for steel to twenty-two cents per pound.

1174. The Chief of Ordnance, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, is hereby authorized and directed to draw up and enforce in his department a system of rules and regulations for the government of the Ordnance Department, and of all persons in said department, and for the safe-keeping and preservation of all ordnance property of every kind, and to direct and prescribe the time, number, and forms of all returns and reports, and to enforce compliance therewith.[1] Ibid.

[1] For statutory provisions on the subject of property returns, see the act of March 29, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 42); see also the chapter entitled THE PUBLIC PROPERTY.

It is required, in general and comprehensive terms by section 1167, Revised Statutes, that all officers, persons, etc., who may be entrusted with any ordnance stores or supplies shall make certain regular returns to the Chief of Ordnance of such property in their possession or charge, according to certain forms and regulations to be prescribed by that officer with the approval of the Secretary of War. The act of March 3, 1879, authorizes and directs the Secretary of War, at the request of the head of any department, to issue arms and ammunition, when required for the protection of the public money and property, "to be delivered to any officer" of such department as may be designated by the head of the same, and to be accounted for to the Secretary of War. Held that the provision of section 1167 might properly be regarded as applying to the class of officers indicated in this act, who therefore would properly be required to furnish the returns prescribed by that section. MISCELLANEOUS PURCHASES.

Contract for breech-loading steel guns of large caliber authorized. Sec. 2, Aug. 18, 1890, v. 26, p. 319.

1189. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to purchase under contract, after due advertisement inviting proposals, and at prices which the Board of Ordnance and Fortification shall adjudge to be fair to the manufacturer and for the interest of the United States, twenty-five eight-inch, fifty ten-inch, and twenty-five twelve-inch guns, all of which guns shall be breech-loading single-charge steel guns, and of weight and dimensions to be prescribed by the Board, and shall fulfill the conditions hereinafter provided: Provided, That if two or more persons, citizens of the United States, submit proposals to furnish said guns, either in part or in whole, at prices not materially different from each other, contracts may be awarded, in such proportion, among the citizens submitting such proposals as the Secretary of War may direct. One type gun of each of the above-mentioned caliber, with the proper supply of ammunition therefor, shall be presented for test at such place and within such time as the contract shall provide, and shall be subjected to such tests in respect to accuracy, range, power, endurance, and general efficiency as the Board of Ordnance and Fortification shall have prescribed. All the other guns of each caliber, with the proper supply of ammunition, shall be delivered at such place and within such times as the contract shall provide, and shall be subjected to the ordinary service test of ten rounds with the full charge and weight of projectile, which shall develop the standard power prescribed for the gun. If the type gun sustains the prescribed test to the satisfaction of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, it and each of the other guns which sustains the ordinary service test, and the ammunition expended in such tests, shall be accepted under the contract. All guns manufactured under these contracts, including the type guns, shall be subjected to inspection at all stages of manufacture, and no change whatever shall be made in the material, mode of manufacture, or dimensions of the guns for service from those employed in the type gun without the approval of the Secretary of War. Payment for each gun and ammunition for testing same, including cost of transportation, shall be made upon the satisfactory completion of the prescribed test for that gun. All tests of guns shall be made in the presence of the Board and of the person presenting the gun, or his authorized agent, and due regard shall be paid to suggestions offered by him which respect the mode of making such test.

[1] Where a skilled mechanic in the Government employment, in the ordinary course of his employment, with the aids furnished by the Government and the suggestion and advice of his superior officer, produces a device upon which a patent is issued, he can not recover for its use by the Government. Eager v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cls., 556; Solomon's Case, 21 ibid., 479; Gill's Case, 22 ibid., 335; 25 ibid., 415.

[2] Where claimants seek to recover a royalty for the use of a patented device, they must show a contract, express or implied. Where on a claim for royalty it appears that the Government at no time recognized a right in the patentees or acknowledged a responsibility, it must be held that no contract exists. Russell and Livermore v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cls., 154. A contract to pay is implied whenever the Government, acting through a competent agent, takes or uses individual property, acknowledging explicitly or tacitly that the property is individual property. Section 1694 of the Revised Statutes contained the requirement that "no royalty shall be paid by the United States to any of its officers or employees for the use of any patent for the system, or any part thereof, mentioned in the preceding section (section 1674, Revised Statutes), nor for any such patent in which said officers or employees may be directly or indirectly interested."

[3] By section 1673, Revised Statutes, it was provided that "the breech-loading system for muskets and carbines adopted by the Secretary of War, known as 'the Springfield breech-loading system,' is the only system to be used by the Ordnance Department in the manufacture of muskets and carbines for the military service." Under authority conferred by the act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 480), a system of magazine small arms was adopted by the Secretary of War on the recommendation of a board of officers convened for that purpose in pursuance of General Orders, No. 136, A. G. O., of 1890; the magazine arm thus adopted is officially known as the United States magazine rifle, model of 1896. The above requirement was repeated in the acts of February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 682), March 16, 1896 (29 ibid., 68), March 2, 1897, (ibid., 617), and March 15, 1898 (30 ibid., 326).

Replacing ordnance, etc.
Mar. 3, 1899, v 30, p. 1073.

1203. On application of the governor of any State or Territory the Secretary of War is authorized to replace the ordnance and ordnance stores which the volunteers from said State or Territory carried into the service of the United States Army during the recent war with Spain and which have been retained by the United States. Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1073).

ISSUES OF ARMS, ETC., TO EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

Issue of arms to the several Executive Departments.
Mar. 3, 1879, v. 20, p. 410.

1204. Upon the request of the head of any Department, the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to issue arms and ammunition whenever they may be required for the protection of the public money and property, and they may be delivered to any officer of the Department designated by the head of such Department, to be accounted for to the Secretary of War, and to be returned when the necessity for their use has expired. Arms and ammunition heretofore furnished to any Department by the War Department, for which the War Department has not been reimbursed, may be receipted for under the provisions of this act.[1] Act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L., 410).

THE UNITED STATES TESTING MACHINE.

No member to be interested in device, etc., before Board.
Feb. 18, 1893, v. 27, p. 461.

1214. Hereafter no person shall be a member of or serve on said Board who has been or is in any manner interested in any invention, device, or patent which, or anything similar to which, has been considered or may be considered by or come before said Board for test or adoption; or who is connected with or in the employ of any manufacturer who has or shall have contracts with the United States for any ordnance materials. *Act of February 18, 1893 (27 Stat. May 25, 1900, v. 31, p. 186.

1215. The Board is authorized to make all needful and proper purchases, investigations, experiments, and tests, to ascertain, with a view to their utilization by the Government, the most effective guns, small arms, cartridges, projectiles, fuzes, explosives, torpedoes, armor plates, and other implements and engines of war; and to purchase or cause to be manufactured, under authority of the Secretary of War, such guns, carriages, armor plates, and other war material as may, in the judgment of said Board, be necessary in the proper discharge of the duty herein devolved upon it by the act approved September twenty-second, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight.[1] Act of May 25, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 186).

Right to use inventions.

[1] The act of September 22, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 489), restricts the expenditures of the Board in respect to the investigations, tests, experiments, etc., which may be carried on under its direction under that statute, by the requirement that "the amount expended and liabilities incurred in such purchases, investigations, experiments, and tests shall not exceed five hundred thousand dollars, which sum is hereby appropriated"; and that "said Board shall test, and if found satisfactory, shall purchase two breech-loading field guns of three and two tenths inch bore of aluminum bronze."

By several acts of appropriation the powers of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification have been reduced and defined. By the act of February 24, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 767), the appropriations of the Engineer Department, for gun and mortar batteries and for sites of fortifications, have been withdrawn from the supervision of the Board; by the act of July 23, 1892 (27 Stat. L.,260), all regular appropriations of the Ordnance Department for the armament of fortifications were similarly withdrawn from its supervision. See, also, the acts of February 18, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 461), August 1, 1894 (28 Ibid., 215), March 2, 1895 (Ibid., 706), and June 6, 1896 (29 Ibid., 259), for similar provisions of statutes in which the Board is specially charged with the supervision of stated funds and with the general expenditure of funds appropriated for experimental purposes.

The act of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 833), conferred authority upon the Board of Ordnance and Fortification "to examine and report upon a site or sites for ordnance testing and proving ground to be used in the testing and proving of heavy ordnance, having in view in the selection of said site or sites their accessibility by land and water, means of transportation, and suitability for the purpose intended, and also the actual and reasonable cost, and value of the land embraced in said site or sites and the least sum for which the same can be procured. Said Board shall report thereon to the Secretary of War, to be submitted to Congress at its next session; and in case the said Board shall select a site or sites and recommend their pur-implements under the supervision of the said Board, the Board shall be satisfied, after due inquiry, that the Government of the United States has a lawful right to use the inventions involved in the construction of such gun, gun carriage, ammunition, or implements, or that the construction or test is made at the request of a person either having such lawful right or authorized to convey the same to the Government. *Act of August 1, 1894 (28 Stat. chase, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to secure written proposals for the sale of the land so recommended, until such time as Congress may act upon the recommendation of said Board and of the Secretary of War."

To enable the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to purchase the land adjoining the Government reservation at Sandy Hook, New Jersey, now belonging to the grantees of the Highland Beach Association of New Jersey, together with the right of way from said land to the main line of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, together with the rails, ties, switches, and all the railroad equipment on said lands, twenty-five thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary. Act of July 23, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 259).

That the President is hereby authorized to appoint a board, to consist of three officers of the Army and three officers of the Navy, who shall examine and report to the Secretary of War, for transmission to Congress for its consideration, what, in their opinion, is the most suitable site on the Pacific coast, or on the rivers or other waters thereof, for the erection of a plant for finishing and assembling the parts of heavy guns and other ordnance for the use of the Army and Navy. That for the payment of the necessary expenses of the board to be appointed under the foregoing provisions the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Act of July 23, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 258).

[1] For a similar provision see the acts of February 24, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 768); July 23, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 259); February 18, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 460); March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 706), and June 6, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 259). The several acts of appropriation since that of July 23, 1892, contain provisions for similar allowances to each officer detailed to serve on the Board of Ordnance and Fortification when on duty away from his permanent station. The acts of appropriation since that of August 4, 1894, contain provisions for the necessary traveling expenses of the civilian member of the board when traveling on duty as contemplated in the act of February 24, 1891.

This provision has appeared in all subsequent acts of appropriation. An officer who is authorized to receive compensation "while necessarily employed" only, must produce satisfactory evidence of his employment, and of the necessity therefor, during the period for which he claims compensation. IV Comp. Dec., 424. The Auditor is authorized, and it is his duty, to require the production of satisfactory evidence of the time of actual employment of an officer who is paid a per diem compensation or allowance. Ibid., 479.

The mileage of officers of the Army traveling on duty connected with the Board of Ordnance and Fortification is payable from the appropriation made for the Board as a part of the necessary expenses incident to the performance of the work. III Ibid., 332. Officers of the Army connected with the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, when traveling on duty, should be furnished with transportation in kind by the Quartermaster's Department, in accordance with War Department Circular No. 8, of 1897, but whether the requests for transportation addressed to the railroad companies should be issued by the officers of the Quartermaster's Department exclusively is to be determined by the Secretary of War. Ibid., 590.

HISTORICAL NOTE.—The duties in connection with the procurement, manufacture, and supply of cannon, small arms, and military stores, now performed by the Ordnance Department, seem to have been vested during the Revolutionary period in a purveyor of public supplies, an office created by Congress, which ceased to exist at the close of the war. With a view to secure proper accountability and a more efficient administration in this branch of the military service, President Washington, on January 7, 1794, recommended to Congress that the office of Purveyor of Public Supplies be created and charged "with the duties of receiving, safe-keeping, and distributing the public supplies." The office thus recommended was established by the act of February 23, 1795 (1 Stat. L., 419), and continued to exist until May 31, 1812, when, its duties having been transferred to the several departments of the staff, it was abolished. Sec. 9, act of March 28, 1812 (2 ibid, 696).

The Ordnance Department, eo nomine, was established by the act of May 14, 1812 (ibid., 732), and was to consist of one Commissary-General of Ordnance, an assistant commissary-general, four deputy commissaries, and as many assistant deputy commissaries, not exceeding eight, as the President might deem necessary. The Commissary-General of Ordnance was to have the rank and pay of colonel, the assistant commissary-general that of lieutenant-colonel, the deputy-commissaries that of major, and the assistant deputy commissaries that of captain. By the act of February 8, 1815 (3 ibid., 203), the Department was reorganized, its duties were defined, and its strength fixed at one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, ten captains, ten first lieutenants, and as many enlisted men, to serve as armorers, blacksmiths, wheelwrights, artificers, etc., as the Secretary of War might deem necessary; by the same enactment the supervision of the several armories, magazines, and arsenals was vested in the Ordnance Department.

By section 4 of the act of March 2, 1821 (3 ibid., 283), the Ordnance Department was merged in the artillery, one captain being added to each regiment of artillery for ordnance duty. Although the Department ceased to exist, for the time, as a separate establishment, the duties pertaining to the ordnance service seem to have continued to be performed by officers of artillery detailed for the purpose. By the act of April 5, 1830 (4 ibid., 504), the Ordnance Department was reconstituted, with the following commissioned strength: One colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, ten captains, with the pay and allowances of artillery officers of corresponding grades, and as many enlisted men as might be required, not to exceed 250. By section 2 of the act of April 5, 1830, the grade of ordnance-sergeant was established, the number authorized to be appointed being restricted to one for each military post. By section 13 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 ibid., 256), the President was authorized to add two majors to the department "when he may deem it expedient to increase the same;" he was also authorized to transfer ten first lieutenants and ten second lieutenants to the department from the artillery; by the act of July 7, 1838 (ibid., 308), the number of lieutenants thus authorized to be transferred was reduced to twelve. The act of July 5, 1838, placed officers of ordnance on the same footing in respect to pay and allowances as officers of dragoons. By section 16 of the act of March 3, 1847 (9 ibid., 184), the President was authorized to add to the department, under the conditions set forth in the statute last cited, two captains and six first lieutenants. By section 3 of the act of August 3, 1861 (12 ibid., 287), a chief of ordnance, with the rank and pay of Quartermaster-General (brigadier-general), one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, and six second lieutenants were added to the establishment. By section 4 of the act of March 3, 1863 (ibid., 743), one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, eight captains, and eight first lieutenants were added; the appointments to be made by promotion "as far as the present Ordnance Corps will permit, and the residue to be appointed by transfer from other regiments and corps of the Army;" by this statute examinations were required in all grades below that of field officer as a condition precedent to promotion.

By section 21 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 335), the peace strength of the department was fixed at one brigadier-general, three colonels, four lieutenant-colonels, ten majors, twenty captains, sixteen first lieutenants, and ten second lieutenants; sixteen ordnance storekeepers were also added to the establishment. Section 6 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 ibid., 318), contained the requirement that there should be no promotions or appointments in the several staff corps until otherwise directed by law; but this restriction was removed as to the Ordnance Department by the act of June 23, 1874 (18 ibid., 244), which reorganized the department with an authorized strength of one brigadier-general, three colonels, four lieutenant-colonels, ten majors, twenty captains, and sixteen first lieutenants, and provided that all vacancies in the grade of first lieutenant should be filled by transfer from the line of the Army, subject to the examination therein prescribed. The examination for promotion, first required by the act of March 3, 1863, was extended in its scope by the act of June 23, 1874, so as to require that "no appointment or promotion is said department shall hereafter be made until the officer so appointed or promoted shall have passed a satisfactory examination before a board of ordnance officers senior to himself." By the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 720), the composition of the Ordnance Department was fixed at one brigadier-general, four colonels, five lieutenant-colonels. twelve majors, twenty-four captains, and twenty first lieutenants.

By section 23 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754), the permanent strength of the Ordnance Department was fixed at one chief of ordnance with the rank of brigadier-general, four colonels, six lieutenant-colonels, twelve majors, twenty-four captains,, and twenty-four first lieutenants, together with the enlisted men, including ordnance-sergeants, already authorized by law. A system of details was also provided by the operation of which the permanent commissioned personnel of the Department will be gradually replaced, as vacancies occur, by officers detailed from the line of the Army for duty in the Ordnance Department.

Promotions.

Feb. 2, 1901, s. 26, v. 31, p. 755.

1220. So long as there remain any officers holding permanent appointments in the * * * Signal Corps, including those appointed to original vacancies in the grades of captain and first lieutenant as provided in sections sixteen, seventeen, twenty-one, and twenty-four of this act, they shall be promoted according to seniority in the several grades, as now provided by law, and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to apply to vacancies which can be filled by such promotions or to the periods for which the officers so promoted shall hold their appointments. Sec. 26, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 755).

---

[1] For note containing the statutory history of the Signal Corps see end of chapter.

[2] Section 24 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754,) contains a proviso to the effect that "vacancies created or caused by this section shall be filled by promotion of officers of the Signal Corps according to seniority, as now provided by law. Vacancies remaining after such promotions may be filled by appointment of persons who have served in the Volunteer Signal Corps since April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight."

[3] The pay of a first-class sergeant of the Signal Corps was fixed at that of a hospital steward by section 8, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653). The pay of first-class privates was made the same as that of privates of corresponding grade in the engineer battalion by section 3, act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364).

Appointments, promotions, etc.
Sec. 7, Oct. 1, 1890, v. 26, p. 653; R. S., secs. 1206, 1207, p. 214, amended.

1221. All appointments and promotions in the Signal Corps * * * shall be made after examination and approval under sections twelve hundred and six and twelve hundred and seven of the Revised Statutes,[1] which are hereby amended so as to be applicable to and to provide for the promotion of the lieutenants of the Signal Corps in the same manner as they now apply to the Corps of Engineers and the Ordnance Corps.[2] Sec. 7, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653).

Details.

[1] The act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653), contained the requirement that "the civilian duties now performed by the Signal Corps of the Army shall hereafter devolve upon a bureau to be known as the Weather Bureau, which, on and after July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, shall be established in and attached to the Department of Agriculture, and the Signal Corps of the Army shall remain a part of the Military Establishment under the direction of the Secretary of War, and all estimates for its support shall be included with other estimates for the support of the Military Establishment." Section 4 of this enactment, which authorized the detail of officers of the Signal Corps in the Weather Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, was repealed by Joint Resolution No. 57, of July 8, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 752). This enactment finally severed the statutory connection of this corps with the Weather Bureau.

[1] The act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653, par. 1227, ante), which places the Chief Signal Officer in charge of "the construction, repair, and operation of military telegraph lines," repealed the act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 319), which vested the supervision of the construction and operation of military telegraph lines in department commanders.

Injury to telegraph lines, etc., of United States, interference with working, obstruction, etc.; penalty.

1234. Any person or persons who shall willfully or maliciously injure or destroy any of the works or propery or material of any telegraphic line constructed and owned, or in process of construction, by the United States, or that may be hereafter constructed and owned or occupied and controlled by the United States, or who shall willfully or maliciously interfere in any way with the working or use of any such telegraphic line, or who shall willfully or maliciously obstruct, hinder, or delay the transmission of any communication over any such telegraphic line, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction of the same shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or with both, in the discretion of the court. Act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L., 250).

Historical Note.—The office of Signal Officer of the Army, with the rank of major of cavalry, was established by the act of June 21, 1860 (12 Stat. L., 66). By section 17 of the act of March 3, 1863 (ibid., 753), a signal corps was created to consist of a Chief Signal Officer with the rank of colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, two majors who were to be inspectors, and, for each army corps or military department, one captain and as many lieutenants, not exceeding eight, as the President might deem necessary. The officers thus provided for were to receive the mounted pay of their grades, and were to continue in service during the pendency of the existing rebellion. For each officer authorized by the act of March 3, 1863, one sergeant and six privates were to be detailed from the volunteer armies, who were to receive the pay and allowances of enlisted men of engineers. Eligibility for appointment and detail were to be determined, in part, by prior faithful service in the acting signal corps, and were conditioned in all cases, upon the successful passage of a preliminary examination.

A permanent signal corps was added to the military establishment by section 22 of the act of July 28, 1866 (12 Stat. L., 335) (which was embodied in the Revised Statutes as sections 1165, 1166, and 1167). It was to consist of a Chief Signal Officer, with the rank of colonel of cavalry, and of six officers of the line, detailed for signal duty, and one hundred enlisted men, detailed from the battalion of engineers; these details were to be conditioned upon the successful passage of a preliminary examination, and the officers, while so detailed, were to receive mounted pay. By the act of March 3, 1871 (16 ibid., 520), certain duties in connection with the observation and report of storms were assigned to the department. By the act of June 18, 1878

[1] The act of March 3, 1875, contained a provision authorizing the Secretary of War "to pay the expenses of operating and keeping in repair the said telegraph lines out of any money received for dispatches sent over said lines; any balance remaining after the payment of such expenses to be covered into the Treasury as a miscellaneous receipt; the money received in any one fiscal year to be used only in payment for the expenses of that year. And a full report of the receipts and expenditures in connection with the said telegraph lines shall be made quarterly to the Secretary of War, through the Chief Signal Officer. And the Chief Signal Officer shall have the charge and control of said lines of telegraph in the construction, repair, and operation of the same."

(20 ibid., 146), the number of enlisted men, hitherto fixed by Executive regulation, was established at four hundred and fifty, and by the act of June 20, 1878 (ibid., 219), the enlisted force of the department was fixed at one hundred and fifty sergeants, thirty corporals, and two hundred and seventy privates, who were to receive the pay and allowances of enlisted men of corresponding grades in the battalion of engineers. By this enactment extra-duty pay was prohibited, and the commissioned force of the department was increased by the annual appointment of two second lieutenants, who were to be selected from the grade of sergeant. By the act of June 16, 1880 (21 ibid., 267), the rank of brigadier-general was conferred upon the Chief Signal Officer, and the number of privates was increased to three hundred and twenty; by the act of August 4, 1886 (24 ibid., 247), the number of second lieutenants was limited to sixteen, the school of instruction at Fort Myer, Va., was abolished, and the Secretary of War was authorized to detail five commissioned officers of the Army for signal duty, this number to be in addition to the second lieutenants already authorized by law; this requirement was repeated in the acts of October 2, 1888 (26 ibid., 537), and March 2, 1889 (ibid., 969), by which enactments the number of second lieutenants was reduced to fourteen.

By the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 653), the Weather Service was transferred to the Department of Agriculture and the strength of the Signal Corps was established at one Chief Signal Officer (brigadier-general), one major, four captains, and four first lieutenants mounted, and fifty sergeants who were to have the pay and allowances of hospital stewards. The second lieutenants not selected for appointment as first lieutenants were to be transferred to the line of the Army. By the act of August 6, 1894, the department was reorganized, the reorganization to take effect upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the office of Chief Signal Officer, when the corps was to consist of one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, one major, three captains, and three first lieutenants; by the act of March 2, 1897 (29 ibid., 611), the promotions provided for in the act of August 6, 1894, were authorized to be made. By section 2 of the act of May 18, 1898 (30 ibid., 417), and joint resolution No. 53, of July 8, 1898 (ibid., 749), a volunteer Signal Corps was authorized, to consist of one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, one major, as disbursing officer, and such other officers and men as might be required, not exceeding one lieutenant-colonel for each army corps, and two captains, two first lieutenants, five first-class sergeants, ten sergeants, ten corporals, and thirty first-class privates to each organized division of troops, a certain proportion of whom were to be skilled electricians or telegraph operators.

By section 24 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 754), the permanent strength of the Signal Corps was fixed at one Chief Signal Officer with the rank of brigadier-general, one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, four majors, fourteen captains, fourteen first lieutenants, eighty first-class sergeants, one hundred and twenty sergeants, one hundred and fifty corporals, two hundred and fifty first-class privates, one hundred and fifty second-class privates, and ten cooks; and a system of details was established by the operation of which the permanent commissioned personnel of the department will be gradually replaced, as vacancies occur, by officers detailed from the line of the Army for duty in the Signal Department.

REMOVAL OF THE CHARGE OF DESERTION.

Charges of desertion removed from record of certain volunteers.
Sec. 1, Mar. 2, 1889, v. 25, p. 869.
May 9, 1892, v. 27, p. 27.

1241. The charge of desertion now standing on the rolls and records in the Record and Pension Office of the War Department against any soldier who served in the late war in the volunteer service shall be removed in all cases where it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War, from such rolls and records, or from other satisfactory testimony, that such soldier served faithfully until the expiration of his term of enlistment, or until the first day of May, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-five, having previously served six months or more, and, by reason of absence from his command at the time the same was mustered out, failed to be mustered out and to receive an honorable discharge, or that such soldier absented himself from his command, or from hospital while suffering from wounds, injuries, or disease received or contracted in the line of duty and was prevented from completing his term of enlistment by reason of such wounds, injuries, or disease. Acts of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 869); May 9, 1892 (27 ibid., 27).

[1] The act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 275), had contained the requirement that "the military records of the American Revolution and of the war of eighteen hundred and twelve, now preserved in the Treasury and Interior Departments, be transferred to the War Department, to be preserved in the Record and Pension Division of that Department, and that they shall be properly indexed and arranged for use."

The acts of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 788), and May 28, 1896 (29 ibid., 161), authorizing the Secretary of War, upon the application of the governor of a State, to furnish to such governor a transcript of the military history of any regiment or company furnished by his State, under such regulations as might be prescribed by the Secretary of War, the expense of preparing such transcript to be borne by the State requesting it.

[2] Subsequent acts of appropriation since that of July 16, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 92), have contained the same restriction.

Applications for removal.
Sec. 2, ibid.

1242. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to remove the charge of desertion from the record of any regular or volunteer soldier in the late war upon proper application therefor, and satisfactory proof in the following cases:

Return to duty

First. That such soldier, after such charge of desertion was made, and within a reasonable time thereafter, voluntarily returned to his command and served faithfully to the end of his term of service, or until discharged.

Absence while sick or wounded.

Second. That such soldier absented himself from his command or from hospital while suffering from wounds, injuries, or disease, received or contracted in the line of duty, and upon recovery voluntarily returned to his command and served faithfully thereafter, or died from such wounds, injuries, or disease while so absent, and before the date of muster out of his command or expiration of his term of service, or was prevented from so returning by reason of such wounds, injuries, or diseases before such muster out or expiration of service.

Minors discharged by order of court.
Mar. 2, 1891, v. 26, p. 824.

Third. That such soldier was a minor, and was enlisted without the consent of his parent or guardian, and was released or discharged from such service by the order or decree of any State or United States court on habeas corpus or other judicial proceedings; and in such case such soldier shall not be entitled to any bounty or allowance or pay for any time such soldier was not in the performance of military duty. Sec. 2, ibid. Act of March 2, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 824).

Removal of charge where soldier reenlisted.
Mar. 2, 1889, s. 3, v. 25, p. 869.
May 9, 1892, v. 27, p. 27.

1244. The charge of desertion now standing on the rolls and records in the office of the Adjutant-General of the Army [or the Record and Pension Office of the War Department][1] against any regular or volunteer soldier who served in the late war of the rebellion by reason of his having enlisted in any regiment, troop, or company, or in the United States Navy or Marine Corps, without having first received a discharge from the regiment, troop, or company in which he had previously served shall be removed in all cases wherein it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War, from such rolls and records, or from other satisfactory testimony, that such reenlistment was not made for the purpose of securing bounty or other gratuity that he would not have been entitled to had he remained under his original term of enlistment; that the absence from the service did not exceed four months, and that such soldier served faithfully under his reenlistment. Sec. 3, acts of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 869); May 9, 1892, (27 ibid, 27).

[1] Act of May 9, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 27).

Limitation.

1245. Whenever it shall appear from the official records in the office of the Adjutant-General, United States Army [or the Record and Pension Office of the War Department[1]], that any regular or volunteer soldier of the late war was formally restored to duty from desertion by the commander competent to order his trial for the offense, or, having deserted and being charged with desertion, was, on return to the service, suffered, without such formal restoration, to resume his place in the ranks of his command, serving faithfully thereafter until the expiration of his term, such soldier shall not be deemed to rest under any disability because of such desertion in the prosecution of any claim for pension, on account of disease contracted or wounds or injuries received in the line of his duty as a soldier. Sec. 4, ibid.

Return to duty without trial, etc.

1246. When the charge of desertion shall be removed under the provisions of this act from the record of any soldier, such soldier, or, in case of his death, the heirs or legal representatives of such soldier, shall receive the pay and bounty due to such soldier. Sec. 5, ibid.

Pay and bounty.

1247. This act shall not be so construed as to give to any such soldier, or, in case of his death, to the heirs or legal representatives of any such soldier, any pay, bounty, or allowance for any time during which such soldier was absent from his command without proper authority, nor shall it be so construed as to give any pay, bounty, or allowance to any soldier, his heirs or legal representatives, who served in the Army a period of less than six months.[2] Sec. 5, ibid.

Not entitled to pay, etc., while absent without leave.

[1] Act of May 9, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 27).

[2] The persons from whose military record there may be a removal of the charge of desertion, under the act of March 2, 1889, chapter 390, are those against whom such a charge is "now standing." Deserters, therefore, whose cases had, at the date of Mexican war soldiers. Application for removal of charge of desertion. Sec. 6, ibid.

1248. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to amend the military record of any soldier who enlisted for the war with Mexico, upon proper application, where the rolls and records of the Adjutant-General's Office show the charge of desertion against him, when such rolls and records show the facts set out in the following cases:

Length of service.

First. That said soldier served faithfully the full term of his enlistment, or having served faithfully for six months or more, and until the fourth day of July anno Domini eighteen hundred and forty-eight, left his command without having received a discharge.

Voluntary return.

Second. That such soldier, after said charge of desertion was entered on the rolls, voluntarily returned to his command within a reasonable time, and served faithfully until discharge. Sec. 6, ibid.

Cases excepted. Sec. 7, ibid.

1249. The provisions of this act shall not be so construed as to relieve any soldier from the charge of desertion who left his command from disaffection or disloyalty to the Government, or to evade the dangers and hardships of the service, or whilst in the presence of the enemy (not being sick or wounded), or while in arrest or under charges for breach of military duty, or in case of a soldier of the Mexican war who did not actually reach the seat of war. Sec. 7, ibid.

the act, been judicially duly disposed of—by trial, conviction, and sentence by court-martial—are not within the purview of the statute. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1103.

Held, that a soldier had "served faithfully" in the sense of section 1 of the last-named act when, having been sentenced to reduction and confinement on conviction of desertion, his sentence had been duly executed, and he had thereupon returned to duty and served for a considerable further period in a status of honor. Ibid., par. 1104.

The act of 1889 provides that the charge of desertion shall be removed if the soldier has "served faithfully until * * * May 1, 1865, having previously served six months or more" * * * Held, that the six months of service need not have been continuous, provided they were actually served before May 1, 1865, and the soldier was in service at that date. Ibid., par. 1105.

Held, that a soldier was not within the description of the third division, section 2, of the act of 1889, of having been "discharged" from service by a court of "competent jurisdiction," who had, as a minor, enlisted without consent, been discharged upon habeas corpus by a State court. Ibid., par. 1107.

A pardon does not operate retroactively, and can not therefore "remove a charge" of desertion. It does not wipe out the fact that the party did desert, nor can it make the record say that he did not desert. It can not change facts of history. Ibid., par. 1117.

The restoration of a deserter to duty without trial under par. 132, A. R. [1895], does not operate as an acquittal, or relieve the deserter from the forfeitures of pay (including retained pay) incurred by operation of law under paragraphs 1380 and 1381, A. R. 1895. Ibid., 351, par. 48.

Military record corrected and honorable discharge to issue.

1250. When such charge of desertion is removed under the provisions of this act, the soldier shall be restored to a status of honorable service, his military record shall be corrected as the facts may require, and an honorable discharge shall be issued in those cases where the soldier has received none; and he shall be restored to all his rights as to pension, pay, or allowances as if the charge of desertion had never been made; and in case of the death of said soldier, his widow or other legal heir shall be entitled to the same rights as in case of other deceased honorably discharged soldiers. Sec. 8, ibid.

Pension, etc., claims.

No pay while absent.

1251. This act shall not be construed to give to any soldier, or his legal representatives or heir, any pay or allowance for any period of time he was absent without leave and not in the performance of military duty. Ibid.

Claims to be filed within three years from July 1, 1889.
Secs. 9 and 10, ibid.

1252. All applications for relief under this act shall be made to and filed with the Secretary of War within the period of three years from and after July first, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, and all applications not so made and filed within said term of three years shall be forever barred, and shall not be received or considered.[1] Sec. 9, ibid.

Time extended for applications.
Mar. 2, 1895, v. 28, p. 814.

1253. Section nine of the act for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico, approved March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, is hereby so amended as to remove the limitation of time within which applications for relief may be received and acted upon under the provisions of said act. Act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 814).

REMUSTER OF OFFICERS OF VOLUNTEERS.

Remuster cases.
Feb. 24, 1897, v. 29, p. 593.

1254. Any person who was duly appointed or commissioned to be an officer of the volunteer service during the war of the rebellion, and who was subject to the mustering regulations at the time applied to members of the volunteer service, shall be held and considered to have been mustered into the service of the United States in the grade named in his appointment or commission from the date from which he was to take rank under and by the terms of his said appointment or commission, whether the same was actually received by him or not, and shall be entitled to pay, emoluments, and pension as if actually mustered at that date: Provided, That at the date from which he was to take rank by the terms of his said appointment or commission there was a vacancy to which he could be so appointed or commissioned, and his command had either been recruited to the minimum number required by law and the regulations of the War Department, or had been assigned to duty in the field, and that he was actually performing the duties of the grade to which he was so appointed or commissioned; or if not so performing such duties, then he shall be held and considered to have been mustered into service and to be entitled to the benefits of such muster from such time after the date of rank given in his commission as he may have actually entered upon such duties: Provided further, That any person held as a prisoner of war, or who may have been absent by reason of wounds, or in hospital by reason of disability received in the service in the line of duty, at the date of issue of his appointment or commission, if a vacancy existed for him in the grade to which so appointed or commissioned, shall be entitled to all the benefits to which he would have been entitled under this act if he had been actually performing the duties of the grade to which he was appointed or commissioned at said date: Provided further, That this act shall be construed to apply only in those cases where the commission bears date prior to June twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, or after that date when the commands of the persons appointed or commissioned were not below the minimum number required by then existing laws and regulations: And provided further, That the pay and allowances actually received for the period covered by the recognition extended under this act shall be deducted from the sums otherwise to be paid thereunder. Act of February 24, 1897 (29 Stat. L., 593).

[1] The act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 278), extended the operation of this section for a period of two years from July 1, 1892. By the act of March 2, 1895 (28 ibid., 814), the limitation of time was indefinitely extended.

1255. The heirs or legal representatives of any person whose muster into service shall be recognized and established under the terms of this act shall be entitled to receive the arrears of pay and emoluments due, and the pension, if any, authorized by law, for the grade to which recognition shall be so extended. Sec. 2, ibid.

1256. The pay and allowances of any rank or grade paid to and received by any military or naval officer in good faith for services actually performed by such officer in such rank or grade during the war of the rebellion, other than as directed in the fourth proviso of the first section of this act, shall not be charged to or recovered back from such officer because of any defect in the title of such officer to the office, rank, or grade in which such services were so actually performed. Sec. 3, ibid.

CERTIFICATES OF SERVICE IN MILITARY TELEGRAPH CORPS.

1257. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to prepare a roll of all persons who served not less than ninety days in the operation of military telegraph lines during the late civil war, and to issue to each, upon application, unless it appears that his service was not creditably performed, or to the representatives of those who are dead, suitable certificates of honorable service in the military telegraph corps of the Army of the United States, stating the service rendered, the length of such service, and the dates, as near as may be, between which such service was performed: Provided, That this law shall not be construed to entitle the persons herein mentioned to any pay, pension, bounty, or rights not herein specifically provided for. Act of January 26, 1897 (29 Stat L., 497).

[1] Section 18 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 Stat. L., 259), conferred authority upon the officers composing the councils of administration, at certain posts to be designated by the Secretary of War, to employ from time to time such person as they might think proper to officiate as chaplain. The person so selected and appointed was also to perform the duties of schoolmaster at the post at which he was employed. The chaplains so appointed were to receive as compensation a sum to be determined by the council of administration, with the approval of the Secretary of War, but such sum was not to exceed forty dollars per month in any case; each chaplain was allowed four rations per day, with fuel and quarters. The number of chaplain posts, which was fixed at twenty by the act of July 5, 1838, was increased to forty by section 3 of the act of March 3, 1849 (9 Stat. L., 351). Section 7 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 Stat L., 333), recognized and continued in service the existing force of chaplains; by section 7 of the act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat. L., 423), chaplains were placed on the same footing in respect to tenure of office, retirement, pensions, and other allowances as other officers of the Army.

Under the authority conferred by the act of April 22, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 363), each regiment of volunteers is entitled to one chaplain; by the act of July 8, 1898 (Ibid., 729), it was provided that chaplains in the volunteer service should have the pay and allowances of captains mounted. The act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 977), makes no specific provision for chaplains for the force of volunteers therein authorized.

1261. No person shall be appointed as regimental or post chaplain until he shall furnish proof that he is a regularly ordained minister of some religious denomination, in good standing at the time of his appointment, together with a recommendation for such appointment from some authorized ecclesiastical body, or from not less than five accredited ministers of said denomination.

1266. It shall be the duty of commanders of regiments, hospitals, and posts to afford to chaplains, assigned to the same for duty, such facilities as may aid them in the performance of their duties.

Facilities in performance of duties.
Apr. 9, 1864, c. 53, v. 13, p. 46.
Sec. 1127, R.S.

HISTORICAL NOTE.—The office of chaplain existed in the Revolutionary armies, as is indicated by the requirement of section 1, article 4, of the Rules and Articles of War of 1776, which provides a penalty for the nonperformance of the duties appropriate to the office. The act of March 3, 1791 (1 Stat. L., 222), authorized the appointment of a chaplain in case the President might "deem such appointment necessary to the public interest." As the act contemplated a brigade organization, it would appear that the office thus conditionally created was that of a brigade rather than a regimental chaplain. The inclusion of the chaplain in the "general staff," in section 7 of the act of March 5, 1792 (ibid., 242), and March 3, 1795 (ibid., 430), would also seem to indicate the correctness of this view. No provision was made for the services of chaplains in the enactments respecting the militia—acts of May 2, 1792 (ibid., 264), and May 8, 1792 (ibid., 267)—although these statutes are still in force. The office of chaplain was discontinued on October 1, 1796, in conformity to the requirements of the act of May 30, 1796 (ibid., 483), "to ascertain and fix the military establishment of the United States." The acts authorizing the creation of a provisional army, approved May 28, 1798 (ibid., 561), made no provision for the services or compensation of chaplains, but this omission was supplied by a provision for four chaplains in the act of July 16, 1798 (ibid., 604), who were to be attached to the general staff, and were to receive the pay and allowances of majors. No provision was made for these officers, however, in the act of March 3, 1799 (ibid., 749). By the acts of February 2, 1800 (2 ibid., 7), and May 14, 1800 (ibid., 85), the operation of the foregoing enactments was suspended, and the act of March 16, 1802 (ibid., 133), contained no provision for chaplains, or for the procurement of religious services at military posts.

[1] For statutory provisions respecting post schools, see the article relating to military posts in the chapter entitled THE PUBLIC LANDS. These schools are administered in accordance with paragraphs 321, 341, 350, 351, 355, 362, 1110, 1118, 1124, 1127, 1128, and 1137 of the Army Regulations of 1901. For the duties and assignments of chaplains, see paragraphs 48–51, Army Regulations of 1901.

The act of April 12 1808 (2 Stat. L. 481, section 7), passed in contemplation of war with England, authorized the appointment of brigade chaplains, and similar provision was made in section 24 of the act of February 6, 1812 (ibid., 671), which conferred upon these officers the pay and allowances of majors of infantry, and this last-named requirement was repeated in section 16 of the act of January 20, 1813 (ibid., 791). The acts of March 3, 1815 (3 Stat. L., 224); April 24, 1816 (ibid., 297); April 14, 1818 (ibid., 420); April 20, 1818 (ibid., 460); March 2, 1821 (ibid., 615), to reduce and fix the military peace establishment, made no provision for these officers which then ceased to exist.

The office of post chaplain was established by section 18 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 Stat. L., 259), appointments thereto being vested in the councils of administration of the several military posts. Chaplains were to act as post schoolmasters, and their compensation was to be fixed by the post councils, with the approval of the Secretary of War, but was in no case to exceed forty dollars per month, with four rations per day and an established allowance of fuel and quarters. The number of chaplain posts was fixed at twenty by the act of July 7, 1838 (ibid., 308), which were to be designated by the Secretary of War, and were to be "confined to places most destitute of instruction." By section 3 of the act of March 2, 1849 (9 ibid., 357), the number of chaplain posts was increased to thirty, and by section 2 of the act of February 21, 1857 (11 ibid., 163), the monthly pay proper of chaplains was increased to a sum not exceeding sixty dollars, subject to the approval of the post council of administration.

For each of the regiments of volunteers authorized to be raised for the war with Mexico a chaplain was authorized, and power was conferred upon the President to order the existing post chaplains to the theater of active operations, and, in the event of their refusal to obey such order, their offices were to be declared vacant by the Adjutant-General of the Army; Section 7, act of February 11, 1847 (9 Stat. L., 124). During the war of the rebellion a chaplain was authorized for each regiment of volunteers, who was to have the pay and allowances of a captain of cavalry; section 9, act of July 22, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 270). By section 7 of the act of August 3, 1861 (ibid., 288), none but ministers of some Christian denomination were to be eligible for appointment. By section 2 of the act of May 30, 1862 (ibid., 404), the President was authorized to appoint a chaplain for each general hospital; by the act of July 17, 1862 (ibid., 594), their pay and allowances were fixed and the qualifications for the office were established. Rank, without command, was conferred by the act of April 9, 1862 (13 ibid., 46), in which enactment their duties were still further defined. By section 31 of the act of July 28, 1866 (14 ibid., 337), the existing force was recognized and continued, and one chaplain was authorized for each regiment of colored troops established, "whose duty shall include the instruction of the enlisted men in the common English branches of education;" by section 7 of the act of March 2, 1867 (ibid., 423), the rank of captain of infantry, without command, was conferred, and chaplains were placed upon the same footing in respect to pay, allowances, and emoluments as other officers of the Army. By section 12 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 750), the distinction between post and regimental chaplains was abolished and chaplains were thereafter required to be assigned to regiments of the line or to stations occupied by the troops of the corps of artillery.

Appointment of cadets. May 17, 1886, v. 24, p. 50.

1267. When any cadet of the United States Military Academy has gone through all its classes and received a regular diploma from the academic staff, he may be promoted and commissioned as a second lieutenant in any arm or corps of the Army in which there may be a vacancy and the duties of which he may have been judged competent to perform.[2] Act of May 17, 1886 (24 Stat. L. 50).

[1] In the absence of statutory restrictions, the power of the President to make appointments or promotions in the line or staff of the Army is plenary, being conferred by Article II, section 11, paragraph 2 of the Constitution of the United States. Congress, however, has established certain uniform rules of promotion, and in several instances has prescribed the classes from which selections must be made in appointing to original or other vacancies. See, for examples of such regulation, section 3, act of June 18, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 145); act of May 17, 1886 (24 ibid., 50); Oct. 1, 1890 (26 ibid., 562); July 30, 1892 (27 ibid., 336); March 8, 1898 (30 ibid., 261); April 26, 1898 (ibid., 364); March 2, 1899 (ibid., 977), and February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 748). The appointment of general officers is regulated by paragraph 21 of the Regulations of 1895, which contains the requirement that "appointment to the grade of general officer is made by selection from the Army."

[2] The appointment of cadets and enlisted men to the grade of second lieutenant is regulated by the acts above set forth. Section 3 of the act of June 18, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 145), contained the requirement that all vacancies occurring in the grade of second lieutenant should be filled from the graduates of the Military Academy so long as any such remained in the service unassigned, and that vacancies then remaining should be filled by the promotion of meritorious noncommissioned officers, and that any vacancies remaining after the exhaustion of the two classes above named might be filled by the appointment of persons from civil life; but this provision was expressly repealed by section 5 of the act of July 30, 1892 (27 ibid., 336). The policy of the Executive in respect to appointments to the grade of second lieutenant in the line of the Army is now regulated by the following requirements of Army Regulations:

Vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant existing on the 1st day of July each year are filled by appointment, in order, as follows: (1) From graduates of the United 1268. In case there shall not at the time be a vacancy in such arm or corps, he may, at the discretion of the President, be promoted and commissioned in it as an additional second lieutenant with the usual pay and allowances of a second lieutenant until a vacancy shall happen. Ibid.

Appointment of enlisted men. July 30, 1892, s. 3, v. 27, p. 336.

1269. The vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant heretofore filled by the promotion of meritorious non-commissioned officers of the Army under the provisions of section three of the act approved June eighteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, shall be filled by the appointment of competitors favorably recommended under this act in the order of merit established by the final examination.[1] Section 3, act of July 30, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 336).

Appointments to be to arm of service. Oct. 1, 1892, s. 2, v. 26, p. 562.

States Military Academy; (2) from enlisted men of the Army found duly qualified; (3) from civil life. Par. 26, A. R. 1901.

A civilian to be eligible for appointment must be a citizen of the United States, unmarried, between 21 and 27 years of age, must be examined and approved as to habits, moral character, mental and physical ability, education, and general fitness for the service by a board convened and constituted as provided in paragraph 25 for the final competitive examination of soldiers. Par. 31, ibid. For regulations respecting the examination of candidates from civil life for appointment to the grade of second lieutenant in the line of the Army see General Orders No. 35, A. G. O., 1898, and G. O. 156, A. G. O., 1899.

[1] See footnote (2) to section 1267.

[2] An appointment or commission, in order to take effect at all, must be accepted; but, when accepted, it takes effect as of and from its date, i. e., the date on which it is completed by the signature of the appointing power, or that as and from which it purports in terms to be operative. So much of section 1218, Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of May 13, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 21), as requires that "No person who held a commission in the Army or Navy of the United States at the beginning of the late rebellion, and afterwards served in any capacity in the military, naval, or civil service of the so-called Confederate States; or of either of the States in insurrection during the late rebellion, shall be appointed to any position in the Army or Navy of the United States," was repealed by the act of March 31, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 235). For statutory provisions regulating the appointment of officers of volunteers to the Army see section 28 of the act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 755), and the act of March 2, 1901 (ibid., p. 900), paragraph 578 ante.

PROMOTIONS.

1271. Hereafter promotions to every grade in the Army below the rank of brigadier-general, throughout each arm, corps, or department of the service, shall, subject to the examination hereinafter provided for, be made according to seniority in the next lower grade of that arm, corps, or department.[1] *Sec. 2, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. [1] The act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 562), contained the requirement that all officers above the grade of second lieutenant in the line of the Army should, "subject to such examination, be entitled to promotion in accordance with existing laws and regulations." The effect of this provision was to continue the operation of the rule of regimental promotion in respect to all officers of the line above the grade of second lieutenant. The rule of lineal promotion was made general in its application by section 2 of the act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364). Seniority of rank alone, in the military service, gives no right to promotion. Physical, mental, and moral fitness are required. Steinmetz v. U. S., 33 Ct. Cls. R., 404.

Notices of appointments and promotions are issued by the War Department, through the Adjutant-General of the Army. Par. 20, A. R., 1901.

Appointment to the grade of general officer is made by selection from the Army. Par. 21, ibid.

Promotions in established staff corps and departments to include the grade of colonel will be made by seniority, subject to the examinations required by law. Par. 23, ibid.

HISTORICAL NOTE.

The rule of promotion in the line of the Army, as stated in paragraph 22 of the Regulations of 1889, required that "promotions to the rank of captain will be made regimentally, to major, lieutenant-colonel, and colonel, according to arm of service." This rule, which was replaced by the act of October 1, 1890 (paragraph 938, supra), had its origin in an order of the Secretary of War, dated May 26, 1801, which declared that "promotions to the rank of captain shall be made regimentally, and to the rank of major and lieutenant-colonel in the lines of the artillery and infantry, respectively." This order was supplemented by another, issued on May 7, 1808, making the above rule for promotion in the infantry and artillery applicable to the cavalry and riflemen.

The earliest Congressional action on the subject of promotion in the Army is contained in the fifth section of the act of June 26, 1812 (2 Stat. L., 764), which provided that thereafter "the promotion shall be made through the lines of artillerists, light artillery, dragoons, riflemen, and infantry, respectively, according to established rule." The rule therein referred to is that which was established by the Executive order as above stated, and the effect of the statute was to give the order a legislative sanction. Subsequently, by section 12 of the act of March 30, 1814 (3 Stat. L., 113), it was provided "that from and after the passage of this act promotions may be made through the whole Army in its several lines of light artillery, light dragoons, artillery, infantry, and riflemen, respectively." Since the enactment of this last provision, which continued in force down to the revision of the statutes, promotions to the rank of captain have uniformly been made regimentally, so that the construction given thereto, in practice, has been that it made no change or modification of Hereafter the commissions of all officers under the direction and control of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of Agriculture shall be made out and recorded in the respective Departments under which they are to serve, and the Department seal affixed thereto, any laws to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, That the said seal shall not be affixed to any such commission before the same shall have been signed by the President of the United States.[1] Act of March 28, 1896 (*29 Stat. the previously existing rules. According to this construction (which was acted upon for about sixty years) the act of 1814, while it contemplated that promotions should be made in the several lines or arms through the whole Army, and that officers should be promoted only in their respective lines or arms, did not prescribe how promotions within the lines or arms should be made, whether regimentally or lineally. As thus understood—and the language of the act is susceptible of that interpretation—there was no conflict between it and the rule adverted to.

Section 1204, Revised Statutes, contains substantially a reenactment of the provision above quoted from the act of 1814. When embodying that provision in the Revised Statutes, it is reasonable to presume that Congress was familiar with the construction which had been placed thereon, and so long acted upon by the executive department, and that if it had been the intention of that body to introduce a different rule on the subject of promotion, different phraseology would have been chosen to signify such design. By adopting the language of the previous statute the fair inference is that its construction was acquiesced in, and that no change in the law of promotion was intended. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 65. See, also, paragraph 1318, post, and note 1, supra.

[1] A commission, whatever its form, is but evidence of the fact that the President has exercised his constitutional power of appointment; there is no provision of law requiring a specified form of commission to be issued to officers in the military service. O'Shea v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 392.

1275. The examination of officers appointed in the Army from civil life, or of officers who were officers of volunteers only, or were officers of the militia of the several States called into the service of the United States, or were enlisted men in the regular or volunteer service, either in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, during the war of the rebellion, shall be conducted by boards composed entirely of officers who were appointed from civil life or of officers who were officers of volunteers only during said war, and such examination shall relate to fitness for practical service and not to technical and scientific knowledge; and in case of failure of any such officer in the reexamination hereinbefore provided for, he shall be placed upon the retired list of the Army; and no act now in force shall be so construed as to limit or restrict the retirement of officers as herein provided for.[2] Sec. 3, act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 562).

Officers entitled by this section to examination by a board composed entirely of officers who were appointed from civil life, or who were officers of volunteers only during the war, may, by written waiver filed with the War Department, relinquish such right, in which case the examination of such officers shall be conducted by boards composed as shall be directed by the Secretary of War. Sec. 1, act of July 27, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 276).

Officers from civil life may waive board of similar character.

[1] Joint Resolution No. 48, of June 14, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 747), contains the requirement "that during the existing war the President may, in his discretion, waive the one-year suspension from promotion and forthwith order the reexamination provided in certain cases by the third proviso of section three of the act approved October first, eighteen hundred and ninety, entitled 'An act to provide for the examination of certain officers of the Army and to regulate promotions therein.'"

[2] Under the act of Oct. 1, 1890, the finding of the board of examination that the officer is incapacitated for duty is not per se final, but must be reported for the action of the Secretary of War and passed upon by him. Where the finding and report of the board have been approved but not yet executed by actual retirement, there may intervene contingencies which would supersede such proceeding, as the trial and dismissal of the officer by court-martial, or the arising of new causes which might make proper that the question of his disability be inquired into by a retiring board convened under Sec. 1246, Revised Statutes. But unless some such new occasion and ground of disqualification be presented the action of the Secretary of War in approving the report remains final and exhaustive, and the officer is entitled to be retired under the act of 1890, and can not legally be ordered before such retiring board. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2207.

The privilege of retirement which an officer has "with the rank to which his seniority entitled him to be promoted," given by the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 562), is limited to cases where the officer failed in his physical examination only. Steinmetz v. U. S., 33 Ct. Cls., 404.

When the exigencies of the service of any officer who would be entitled to promotion upon examination require him to remain absent from any place where an examining board could be convened, the President is hereby authorized to promote such officer, subject to examination, and the examination shall take place as soon thereafter as practicable. If upon examination the officer be found disqualified for promotion, he shall, upon the approval of the proceedings by the Secretary of War, be treated in the same manner as if he had been examined prior to promotion. *Sec. 32, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. [1] A soldier to be eligible for the position of candidate for promotion must be a citizen of the United States, unmarried, between 21 and 30 years of age on the 1st of September following his preliminary examination, and of good moral character both before and after enlistment. An applicant will not be ordered for the preliminary examination unless it is apparent that on the 1st of September next following he will have served honorably not less than two years, exclusive of technical service due to furlough or other absence from duty in his own interest; (a) nor for the final competitive examination unless he shall have so served. Applications will be made to department commanders on or before February 1 of each year, and company commanders in forwarding them will certify all furloughs had by applicants, stating under what authority they were granted. An officer of the lowest grade in any arm or corps who may be transferred, on his own application, to a vacancy in his grade in any other arm or corps will take rank next after the junior officer of the arm or corps to which he is transferred, and will be nominated for reappointment, with a new date of rank if necessary to fix his proper position, and upon confirmation will be recommissioned accordingly. These new appointments and commissions will determine the rank of transferred officers in their regiments and corps, as well as in the Army. Par. 52, A. R., 1901.

Officers in each arm of the service will be transferred from one regiment to another therein, as the interests of the service require, by orders from the War Department, without change of rank or commission. The transfer or exchange of company officers of a regiment will be made by the Commanding General of the Army. Par. 53, ibid. See also paragraph 1272, ante.

any officer so transferred has, in virtue of seniority, obtained or become entitled to a grade of his regiment equal to the grade of his commission in the staff, he shall vacate either his commission in the line or his commission in the staff.

Details to the staff.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 26, v. 31, p. 755.

1285. When any vacancy, except that of the chief of the department, shall occur (in the Adjutant-General's Department, the Inspector-General's Department, the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, the Pay Department, the Ordnance Department, and the Signal Corps) which can not be filled by promotion as provided in this section, it shall be filled by detail from the line of the Army, and no more permanent appointments shall be made in those departments or corps after the original vacancies created by this act shall have been filled. Such details shall be made from the grade in which the vacancies exist, under such system of examination as the President may, from time to time, prescribe. All officers so detailed shall serve for a period of four years, at the expiration of which time they shall return to duty with the line, and officers below the rank of lieutenant-colonel shall not again be eligible for selection in any staff department until they shall have served two years with the line.[1] Sec. 26, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 755).

Retirement for disability.
Aug. 3, 1861, c. 42, s. 16, v. 12, p. 289.
Sec. 1245, R. S.

1305. When any officer has become incapable of performing the duties of his office, he shall be either retired from active service, or wholly retired from the service, by the President, as hereinafter provided.

---

[1] The limited retired list was established by section 16, of the act of August 3, 1861, 12 Stat. L., 289, which provided that the number of officers retired in accordance with the authority conferred by the act should not, at any time, exceed 7 per cent of the whole number of offices of the Army as fixed by law. By section 5, of the act of July 15, 1870, 16 Stat. L., 317, sec. 1258, Rev. Stat., the number of officers to be borne upon the retired list was to be determined by the President, in his discretion, but was not to exceed 300. By section 7, of the act of July 17, 1878, 20 Stat. L., 150, the number of retired officers was increased to 400. By the act of February 16, 1891, 26 Stat. L., 763, the number was reduced and fixed at 350, the number now authorized by law. For statutes in relation to the retirement of officers found physically disqualified for promotion by boards of examination see paragraphs 1274 and 1275, ante.

[1] This provision does not authorize a retiring board to entertain a charge of a military offense, as such, or to try an officer. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2192. The investigation of a retiring board is not affected by any limitation as to time, as is that of a court-martial. Such a board may therefore inquire into the matter of a disability, however long since it may have originated. Ibid., par. 2193.

[2] Held that the law (secs. 1248 and 1249, Rev. Stats.) contemplated an existing and not a purely prospective and contingent incapacity; and that an inquiry into an officer's general efficiency could be pertinent only in so far as it could be regarded as going to show that his inefficiency, if found, was the result of an impairment of health. Ibid., par. 2204.

Held that the cause of incapacity intended in this section was a physical cause; that moral obliquity was not had in view; and that the matter of the financial integrity of the officer was beyond the jurisdiction or the board. Ibid., par. 2203. The incapacity may result from habitual drunkenness. Ibid., par. 2196.

him before the President for his approval or disapproval and orders in the case.[1]

Disability incident to service. Aug. 3, 1861, c. 42, s. 17, v. 12, p. 290. Sec. 1251, R.S.

1311. When a retiring board finds that an officer is incapacitated for active service, and that his incapacity is the result of an incident of service, and such decision is approved by the President, said officer shall be retired from active service and placed on the list of retired officers.

Disability not incident to service. Aug. 3, 1861, c. 42, s. 17, v. 12, p. 290. Sec. 1252, R.S.

1312. When the board finds that an officer is incapacitated for active service, and that his incapacity is not the result of any incident of service, and its decision is approved by the President,[1] the officer shall be retired from active service, or wholly retired from the service, as the President may determine. The names of officers wholly retired from the service shall be omitted from the Army Register.[2]

Officers entitled to a hearing. Aug. 3, 1861, c. 42, s. 17, v. 12, p. 290. Sec. 1253, R.S.

1313. Except in cases where an officer may be retired by the President upon his own application, or by reason of his having served forty-five years, or of his being sixty-two years old, no officer shall be retired from active service, nor shall an officer, in any case, be wholly retired from the service, without a full and fair hearing before an Army retiring board, if, upon due summons, he demands it.[3]

---

[1] The finding of a retiring board under sec. 1251 or sec. 1252, Rev. Stats., is in the nature of a recommendation, and till it is "approved by the President" no retirement can be ordered thereupon. Ibid., par. 2194.

The finding of a retiring board, approved by the President, is conclusive as to the facts. The board finds the facts and the President approves or disapproves the finding, but the law does not empower him to modify the finding or to substitute a different one. There is here a judicial power vested in the two, and not in the President acting singly, and when the power has once been fully exercised it is exhausted as to the case. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2206; U. S. v. Burchard, 125 U. S., 179; U. S. v. Miller, 19 Ct. Cls., 338.

When the President has once acted upon the findings of a retiring board his power over the case is exhausted and his subsequent orders in respect to such officer are void for want of authority. XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 202.

[2] To be "wholly retired," in accordance with the terms of this section, is to be put out of the Army and out of office. An officer wholly retired becomes a civilian, and can be readmitted to the service only by a new appointment. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 666, par. 9; Miller v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 338.

[3] The provision of this section that an officer shall not be "wholly retired from the service without a full and fair hearing before an Army retiring board if, upon due summons, he demands it," may be said to entitle him to appear before the board (with counsel, if desired), and to introduce testimony of his own, to cross-examine the witnesses examined by the board, including the medical members of the board who may have taken part in the medical examination, and have stated, or reported to the board, the result of the same. If the officer does not elect to appear before the board when summoned, he waives the right to a hearing, and can not properly take exception to a conclusion arrived at in his absence. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2197. When the President approves and acts upon the report of a retiring board he thereby determines that the officer has had a full and fair hearing. Miller v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls. 338. But see XVI Att. Gen. Opin., 20.

An officer, on being wholly retired, becomes a civilian, and can be readmitted to the service only by a new appointment. But he can not be appointed at once to the retired list. A civilian can not be appointed as a retired officer. He must first be appointed an officer on the active list, of a certain rank. None but a commissioned officer on the active list of the Army can be placed on the retired list. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 666, par. 11; XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 506.

1314. Officers hereafter retired from active service shall be retired upon the actual rank held by them at the date of retirement.

To be retired on actual rank.

1315. That all officers of the Army who have been heretofore retired by reason of disability arising from wounds received in action shall be considered as retired upon the actual rank held by them, whether in the regular or volunteer service, at the time when such wound was received, and shall be borne on the retired list and receive pay hereafter accordingly; and this section shall be taken and construed to include those now borne on the retired list placed upon it on account of wounds received in action: Provided, That no part of the foregoing act shall apply to those officers who had been in service as commissioned officers twenty-five years at the date of their retirement; nor to those retired officers who had lost an arm or leg, or has an arm or leg permanently disabled by reason of resection, on account of wounds, or both eyes by reason of wounds received in battle; and every such officer now borne on the retired list shall be continued thereon notwithstanding the provisions of section two chapter thirty-eight act of March thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight; and be it also provided, that no retired officer shall be affected by this act, who has been retired or may hereafter be retired on the rank held by him at the time of his retirement.[1] Sec. 2, act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 512).

An officer on the retired list, being as much a part of the Army as any officer on the active list, would be subject to trial by general court-martial independently of the provision, specifically so subjecting him, of section 1256, Revised Statutes. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2200.

A retired officer, upon conviction, may be sentenced similarly to an officer on the active list, except that the punishments of suspension and loss of files or relative rank are not appropriate to the status of a retired officer. Ibid., note 2.

They are in fact pensioners. The position and pay given them constitute a form of pension. They exercise no functions and receive no emoluments of office, but are pensioned for past faithful services or disabilities contracted in the line of duty. Their condition and public office have no characteristics in common. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2209. See in this connection the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. See also section 7 of the act of June 3, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 235), which contains the requirement "that section 2 of the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 205), shall not be so construed as to prevent the employment of any retired officer of the Army or Navy to do work under the direction of the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army in connection with the improvement of rivers and harbors of the United States, or the payment by the proper officer of the Treasury of any amounts agreed upon as compensation for such employment." This provision operates to exempt from the terms of the act of July 31, 1894 (sec. 1763, R. S.), all retired officers of the Army or Navy who may be employed by the Engineer Department upon works of river and harbor improvement.

Turnley v. U. S., 24 Ct. Cls., 317. It has been held by a United States court that "a civil officer has a right to resign his office at pleasure, and it is not in the power of the Executive to compel him to remain in office." In a case of a military officer, however, this right is subject to certain restrictions growing out of the military status. Thus, while in time of peace, an officer of the Army, in good standing, is in general entitled to tender and have accepted his resignation, yet in time of war, or when grave embarrassment to the service or prejudice to discipline may result from his leaving his duty, the acceptance of his resignation may properly be refused. Blake v. U. S., 13 Ct. Cls. 402.

Where an officer appointed during a recess of the Senate, after taking the oath of office, and notifying the Department of his acceptance, is ordered to return the appointment, his obeying the order is not a resignation. O'Shea v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 392.

An officer who places his conditional resignation in the hands of his commanding officer, to be forwarded by that officer upon a breach of the said condition, of which breach such commanding officer is to be the judge, and authorizes him to insert a date in such resignation and to forward it for acceptance, is held to have made a valid tender of his resignation, and, upon its acceptance by the President, such officer ceases to be an officer of the Army. XIX Opin. Att. Gen., 610.

[2] Dismissal by Executive order is quite distinct from dismissal by sentence. The latter is a punishment; the former is removal from office. The power to dismiss, which, as being an incident to the power to appoint public officers, had been regarded since 1789 as vested in the President by the Constitution, was for the first time, by section 5 of the act of July 13, 1886 (reenacted in the second clause of the present ninety-ninth article of war and in section 1229, Revised Statutes), expressly divested by Congress, in so far as respects its exercise in time of peace. By the statute it is now authorized only in time of war. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1203.

1329. The President is authorized to drop from the rolls of the Army for desertion any officer who is absent from duty three months without leave; and no officer so dropped shall be eligible for reappointment. And no officer in the military or naval service shall in time of peace be dismissed from service except upon and in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial to that effect, or in commutation thereof.[1] an officer from service at any moment and for any cause; that in time of peace he may dismiss him for cause, with the cooperation of a court-martial; or remove him without cause with the consent of the Senate. Street v. U. S., 24 Ct. Cls., 248; Blake v. U. S., 103 U. S., 227; McElrath v. U. S., 102 U. S., 426; Fletcher v. U. S., 26 Ct. Cls., 541.

The President has the power to remove an officer of the Army by the appointment of another in his place, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and such power is not withdrawn by the provisions of section 5 of the act of July 13, 1866 (section 1229, Revised Statutes), and this provision does not restrict the power of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to displace officers of the Army and Navy by the appointment of others in their places. Keyes v. U. S., 109 U. S., 336, 339; Blake v. U. S., 103 U. S., 227; McElrath v. U. S., 103 U. S. 426; Mimmack v. U. S., 97 U. S., 426; U. S. v. Corson, 114 U. S., 619; Montgomery v. U. [1] The jurisdiction to find and determine the fact of desertion, under this section, is vested in the President alone, and his decision thereon can not be reviewed by the courts. Newton v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 435. The discharge of an officer does not relieve the Government from its obligations until he is notified of the fact and actually discharged from service. Gould v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 593. A summary dismissal of an officer does not properly take effect until the order of dismissal or an official copy of the same is delivered to him, or he is otherwise officially notified of the fact of his dismissal. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1204. A dismissal of an officer by Executive order does not operate to disqualify him for reappointment to military office, or for appointment to civil office under the United States. Ibid, 370, par. 7.

[2] Dismissal by Executive order is quite distinct from dismissal by sentence. The latter is a punishment: the former is removal from office. The power to dismiss, which, as being an incident to the power to appoint public officers, had been regarded since 1789 as vested in the President by the Constitution, was, for the first time in 1866 (by the act of July 13th of that year, re-enacted in the second clause of the present 99th Article of War and in sec. 1229, Revised Statutes), expressly divested by Congress in so far as respects its exercise in time of peace. By the statute law it is now authorized only in time of war. During the late war it was exercised in a great number of cases, sometimes for the purpose of summarily ridding the service of unworthy officers, sometimes in the form of a discharge or muster out of officers whose services were simply no longer required. The distinction between this species of dismissal and dismissal by sentence is illustrated by the fact that the former has, with the sanction of legal authority, been repeatedly ordered in cases where a court-martial has previously acquitted the officer of the very offenses on account of which the summary action has been resorted to. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., par. 1203. See also VII Opin. Att. Gen., 251; Commonwealth v. Bussier, 5 Sergt. & Rawle, 461; Ex parte Hennen, 13 Peters, 258, 259; United States v. Guthrie, 17 Howard, 307; IV Opins. of Attys. Gen., 1, 609–613; VI Id., 5–6; VII Id., 251; VIII Id., 230–232; XII Id., 424–426; Sergeant's Const. Law, 373; 2 Story's Cons., § 1537, note; 1 Kent's Coms., 310; 2 Marshall's Washington, 162.

The Executive, in summarily dismissing an officer, can not at the same time deprive him of pay due. Nor can the right of an officer to his pay for any period prior to a summary dismissal ordered in his case be divested by a dating back of the order of dismissal. Such an order can not be made to relate back so as to affect the status or rights of the officer as they existed before the date of the taking effect of the dismissal. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1213.

Mar. 3, 1865, c. 79, s. 12, v. 13, p. 489; June 22, 1874, c. 392, s. 2, v. 18. p. 192. Sec. 1230, R.S.

forth, under oath, that he has been wrongfully dismissed, the President shall, as soon as the necessities of the service may permit, convene a court-martial, to try such officer on the charges on which he shall have been dismissed. And if a court-martial is not so convened within six months from the presentation of such application for trial, or if such court, being convened, does not award dismissal or death as the punishment of such officer, the order of dismissal by the President shall be void.[1]

No officer of the Army shall be employed on civil works or internal improvements, or be allowed to engage in the service of any incorporated company, or be employed as acting paymaster or disbursing agent of the Indian Department, if such extra employment requires that he shall be separated from his company, regiment, or corps, or if it shall otherwise interfere with the performance of the military duties proper. Act of February 27, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 243).

[1] This statute was held by the Attorney-General (XII Opins., 4) not to be unconstitutional, in that it was not "obnoxious to the objection that it invades or frustrates the power of the President to dismiss an officer." More serious objections to its constitutionality are believed to be: 1, that it authorizes the subjecting to military trial of a civilian; 2, that in restoring an officer to the Army it substitutes the action of a court-martial for the appointing power of the President.

The statute does not indicate within what period after the dismissal the application for a trial should be made. It can only be said that, in preferring it, due diligence should be exercised—that it should be presented within a reasonable time. Held, That a party who (without any sufficient excuse) delayed for nine years to apply for a trial under the statute might well be regarded as having waived his right thereto. [IV Opin. Att. Gen., 170; V Ibid., 384.] It could scarcely have been contemplated by Congress that a dismissed officer should be at liberty to defer his application for a trial till the evidence on which he was dismissed or a material part of the same had ceased to exist, and his restoration would thus be made certain. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1219.

Though it may be sufficient that the application made under the statute should state simply that the applicant has been "wrongfully" dismissed, the preferable form would be for the applicant to set forth in what the alleged wrong consisted. Ibid., par. 1220.

To take advantage of the benefit conferred by this section the officer must apply for trial within a reasonable time after dismissal, or acquiescence will be presumed. A delay of nine years in a particular case held to create such presumption of acquiescence. Newton v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 435; Germaine v. U. S., 26 ibid., 383.

Where the President is authorized by law to reinstate a discharged army officer, he may do so without the advice and consent of the Senate. Collins v. U. S., 15 Ct. Cls., 22. For a list of officers so reinstated see Collins Case, 14 Ct. Cls., 568, 571.

Accepting or holding civil office.
July 15, 1870, c. 294, s. 18, v. 16, p. 319.
Sec. 1222, R. S.

1332. No officer of the Army on the active list shall hold any civil office, whether by election or appointment, and every such officer who accepts or exercises the functions of a civil office shall thereby cease to be an officer of the Army, and his commission shall be thereby vacated.[1]

Army officers to be detailed as Indian agents.
July 13, 1892, v. 27, p. 120.

1333. That from and after the passage of this act the President shall detail officers of the United States Army to act as Indian agents at all agencies where vacancies from any cause may hereafter occur, who, while acting as such agents, shall be under the orders and direction of the Secretary of the Interior, except at agencies where, in the opinion of the President, the public service would be better promoted by the appointment of a civilian.[2] Act of July 13, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 120).

Supernumerary officers may, on their own request, be discharged with certain pay.
June 30, 1882, v. 22, p. 118.

1334. That any officer who is supernumerary to the permanent organization of the Army as provided by law may, at his own request, be honorably discharged from the Army, and shall thereupon receive one year's pay for each five years of his service, but no officer shall receive more than three years' pay in all. Act of June 30, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 118).

Enlisted men not to be used as servants.
Sec. 1232, R.S.

1335. No officer shall use an enlisted man as a servant in any case whatever. July 15, 1870, c. 294, s. 14, v. 16, p. 319.

[1] For statutes and regulations regulating the payment of travel allowances on discharge to officers and enlisted men see the chapter entitled THE PAY DEPARTMENT.

[2] The death of an officer, with place, cause, day, and hour, will be reported without delay by his immediate commander direct to the Adjutant-General of the Army. A duplicate of this report will be forwarded to department headquarters. When the death occurs away from the officer's station, in hospital or on leave, the medical officer, if one be present, or any officer having cognizance of the fact, will make the report. Par. 93, A. R., 1901.

Inventories of the effects of deceased officers, as required by the One hundred and twenty-fifth Article of War, will be transmitted to the Adjutant-General of the Army. If legal representatives take possession of the effects, the fact will be stated in the inventory. Par. 94, ibid.

If there be no legal representatives present to receive the effects, a list of them will be sent to the nearest relative of the deceased. At the end of two months, if not called for, they will be sold at auction and accounted for as in the case of deceased soldiers, except that swords, watches, trinkets, and similar articles will be labeled with the name, rank, regiment, and date of death of the owner, and sent through the Adjutant-General to the Auditor for the War Department for the benefit of the heirs. Par. 96, ibid.

Where an officer dies who is responsible for public property or funds, their dispotion is provided for by the following provisions of Army Regulations: "On the death of an officer in charge of public property or funds, his commanding officer will appoint a board of survey, which will inventory the same, and make the customary returns therefor, stating accurately amounts and condition. These the commanding officer will forward to the chiefs ot the bureaus to which the property or funds pertain, and he will designate an officer to take charge of such property or funds until orders in the case are received from the proper authority." Par. 97, ibid.

FUNERAL EXPENSES.

The annual acts of appropriation since that of June 12, 1858 (11 Stat. L., 333), have contained a provision for the expenses of interment "of officers killed in action or who die when on duty in the field or at military posts, or when on the frontiers, or when traveling under orders." Act of February 12, 1895, 128 Stat. L., 659. For the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1225), authorizing certain expenditures in connection with the transportation and burial of the remains of officers who die in the field or at military camps, or who are killed in action, or who die in the field at places outside the limits of the United States, see paragraph 1417 post. See, also, the acts of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 212), and March 3, 1901 (ibid., 1172).

The disposition of the remains of deceased officers and the payment of funeral expenses are provided for in the following regulation: "The remains of officers killed in action, or who die when on duty in the field or at military posts, or when traveling under orders, will be decently inclosed in coffins, and unless claimed by relatives or friends, will be transported by the Quartermaster's Department to the nearest military post or national cemetery for burial. The expense of transporting the remains is payable from the appropriation for Army transportation; other expenses of burial are limited to $75. If buried at the place of death, the fact will be reported to the Adjutant-General of the Army." Par. 85., A. R., 1895. (Par. 99, A. R., 1901.)

The expenses of burial of deceased officers other than transportation of the remains, which under the law is payable from the appropriation for "Army transportation," limited to $75 by paragraph 85 of the Regulations, and of enlisted men, limited to $35 by paragraph 162 of the Regulations, as amended by General Orders, No. 141, September 12, 1898, from this office, will be limited to the cost of the coffin and the reasonable and necessary expense of preparation of the remains for burial, and will not include such items as: For guarding remains, expense of services of clergyman or minister, music by band or choir, flowers, cost or hire of pall to be used with horse, tombstone, crape or gloves for pallbearers, and expense of grave site where the remains are sent home at the request of relatives. Decision Sec. War, April 3, 1900, Circular No. 9, A. G. O., 1900.

There is no authority of law for the payment of mileage on account of the transportation of the remains of a deceased officer of the Army. Such payment would be illegal and could not properly be allowed by the accounting officers. Under section 2, act of July 21, 1894 (19 Stat. L., 100), mileage ceased to accrue at the point where, and the time when, by reason of death, an officer ceases to be an officer of the Army. There is nothing in section 1 of the act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 456), which is in conflict with this view. 3 Compt. Dec., 209.

Held, that the regulation allowance for the expenses of the interment of an officer, as fixed by paragraph 99, Army Regulations, 1901, was not payable in the case of an officer who, at the time of his death, was on sick leave, this being not one of the cases specified in the Army appropriation acts in which such allowance is authorized to be paid. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1954. Similarly held in the case of an officer who died at the Hot Springs, Ark., when not on duty but on leave of absence. Ibid. Held, further, that, under the provisions on the subject of the Army appropriation act of February 27, 1893, such expenses could not be allowed for the interment of an officer dying at a military post unless he was on duty there at the time of his death, and therefore could not be legally allowed in the case of an officer who deceased at a post where he was staying while on sick leave of absence from his station in another military department. Ibid., par. 1955.

So held, under the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 1225), as to an officer who died on furlough. VI, Compt. Dec., 444.

Held, that the fact that an officer had been interred at the post where he died did not preclude the Secretary of War from having authorized his permanent interment elsewhere, provided the entire expenses of burial did not exceed the maximum amount of $75 allowed for such purposes by paragraph 99, Army Regulations of 1901. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1955.

Paymasters, in making prepayments of salary to officers of the Army, are liable for any portion unearned by the officer on account of death, or otherwise; also for any final indebtedness of said officer to the Government, to the extent of said prepayment. 3 Compt. Dec., 10.

Balances due from the United States to deceased persons are payable at the Treasury, and not by disbursing officers. Second Compt., sec. 676; Scott Dig., 260.

A balance due to a deceased military officer upon his pay account becomes on his death part of his personal estate, and may be set off by the accounting officers upon an indebtedness due from him to the Government. Mumford v. U. S., 31 Ct. Cls., 210. Money granted to a widow by statute cannot be set off against an indebtedness due from her husband to the Government. Ibid.

atives of such deceased officers or soldiers. And no officer so charged shall be permitted to quit the regiment or post until he has deposited in the hands of the commanding officer all the effects of such deceased officers or soldiers not so accounted for and delivered. One hundred and twenty-seventh Article of War.

Reimbursement of expense of burial.
May 26, 1900, v. 31, p. 212.

1341. In all cases where they would have been lawful claims against the Government reimbursement may be made of expenses heretofore or hereafter incurred by individuals of burial and transportation of remains of officers, including acting assistant surgeons, not to exceed what is now allowed in the cases of officers.[1] Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 212).

[1] The act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 905), contains a provision authorizing expenses of interment of "officers killed in action or who die when on duty in the field, or at military posts or on the frontiers, or when traveling under orders, and of noncommissioned officers and soldiers."

Sec. 1211, R. S.

1347. Officers may be assigned to duty or command according to their brevet rank by special assignment of the President; and brevet rank shall not entitle an officer to precedence or command except when so assigned.[1]

Assignment to duty, etc.; when made.
Mar. 3, 1883, v. 22, p. 457.

1348. Officers of the Army shall only be assigned to duty or command according to their brevet rank when actually engaged in hostilities.[2] Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L., 457).

Uniform of actual rank to be worn.
July 15, 1870, c. 294, s. 16, v. 16, p. 319.
Sec. 1212, R. S.

1349. No officer shall be entitled, on account of having been brevetted, to wear, while on duty, any uniform other than that of his actual rank.

To be addressed in orders by title of actual rank.
Ibid.

1350. No officer shall be addressed in orders or official communications by any title other than that of his actual rank.

UNIFORM OF HIGHEST VOLUNTEER RANK.

Officers may wear uniform of highest volunteer rank.
July 28, 1866, c. 299, s. 34, v. 14, p. 337.
Sec. 1226, R. S.

1351. All officers who have served during the rebellion as volunteers in the Army of the United States, and have been honorably mustered out of the volunteer service, shall be entitled to bear the official title, and, upon occasions of ceremony, to wear the uniform of the highest grade they have held, by brevet or other commissions, in the volunteer service. The highest volunteer rank which has been held by officers of the Regular Army shall be entered, with their names, respectively, upon the Army Register. But these privileges shall not entitle any officer to command, pay, or emoluments.

[1] In view of the repeal by the act of March 1, 1869 (15 Stat. L., 318), of the old sixty-first article of war (which did away also with the portion of paragraph 10 of the Army Regulations of 1863 which was derived therefrom), an officer, except where specially assigned to duty according to his brevet rank by the President, is no longer entitled to precedence on courts-martial or otherwise by reason of his brevet rank. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 609. See also XVII, Opin. Att. Gen., 39.

Under section 1211, Revised Statutes, an officer may legally be assigned to duty according to his brevet rank for a special command or duty, and in such case the assignment will not be effective generally, but only for the purposes of such command or duty and during its continuance. Thus held, that an officer assigned to duty according to his brevet rank "while in command of" a certain department, could legally exercise the authority and privileges of such rank only when holding such command, and for the purposes of the same. Ibid., par. 611.

[2] When an officer has been duly assigned to duty or command according to a certain brevet rank, that rank becomes his actual military rank for the period of the assignment. He is empowered to exercise the authority which belongs to such rank under the circumstances, to wear the uniform, and to be addressed by the title of such rank, etc. Held, however, that a colonel, assigned to command according to a brevet rank of general, was not entitled to the aids-de-camp of a general (major or brigadier), but, as indicated in paragraph 40, Army Regulations, 1901, could be "allowed" the same only "with the special sanction of the War Department"—in other words, by the authority of the Secretary of War. Ibid., par. 612.

Officers may wear uniform of highest regular rank.
Feb. 4, 1897, v. 29, p. 511.

1352. All officers who have served during the rebellion as officers of the Regular Army of the United States, and have been honorably discharged or resigned from the service, shall be entitled to wear the official title, and, upon occasions of ceremony, to wear the uniform of the highest grade they have held, by brevet or other commission, as is now authorized for officers of volunteers by section twelve hundred and twenty-six, Revised Statutes. Act of February 4, 1897 (29 Stat. L., 511).

The same. War with Spain.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 34, v. 31, p. 757.

1353. All officers who have served during the war with Spain, or since, as officers of the Regular or Volunteer Army of the United States, and have been honorably discharged from the service, by resignation or otherwise, shall be entitled to bear the official title, and, upon occasions of ceremony, to wear the uniform of the highest grade they have held by brevet or other commission in the regular or volunteer service. Sec. 34, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., p. 757.)

FOREIGN DECORATIONS.

Foreign decorations not to be worn.
Jan. 31, 1881, s. 2, v. 21, p. 80.

1354. That no decoration, or other thing the acceptance of which is authorized by this act, and no decoration heretofore accepted, or which may hereafter be accepted, by consent of Congress, by any officer of the United States, from any foreign government, shall be publicly shown or exposed upon the person of the officer so receiving the same. Sec. 2, act of January 31, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 80).

Decorations, etc., how tendered.

1355. That hereafter any present, decoration, or other thing which shall be conferred or presented by any foreign government to any officer of the United States, civil, naval, or military, shall be tendered through the Department of State, and not to the individual in person, but such present, decoration, or other thing shall not be delivered by the Department of State unless so authorized by act of Congress. Sec. 3, ibid.

1357. The Secretary of War * * * is hereby authorized to issue to any person to whom a medal of honor has been awarded, or may hereafter be awarded, under the provisions of the joint resolution approved July twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, a rosette or knot to be worn in lieu of the medal, and a ribbon to be worn with the medal; said rosette, or knot, and ribbon to be each of a pattern to be prescribed and established by the President of the United States; and any appropriation that may hereafter be available for the contingent expenses of the War Department is hereby made available for the purposes of this act: Provided, That whenever a ribbon issued under the provisions of this act shall have been lost, destroyed, or rendered unfit for use, without fault or neglect on the part of the person to whom it is issued, the Secretary of War shall cause a new ribbon to be issued to such person without charge therefor. Joint Resolution No. 51, May 2, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 473).

CERTIFICATES OF MERIT.

Certificate of merit.

1358. When any enlisted man of the Army shall have distinguished himself in the service the President may, at the recommendation of the commanding officer of the regiment or the chief of the corps to which such enlisted man belongs, grant him a certificate of merit.[1] Act of March 29, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 12).

---

[1] This provision was not embraced in the Revised Statutes. Medals of honor will be awarded by the President to officers and men who most distinguish themselves in action. (Par. 177, A. R., 1895; see also G. O. 42, A. G. O., 1897, and G. O. 135, A. G. O., 1899.)

The original enactments of 1862 and 1863, providing for the award of medals of honor, and appropriating moneys for the expenses of the same, evidently contemplated a personal presentation to the selected recipient. Such is also inferably the design of the present Army Regulations, wherein (Art. XXV) the medal of honor is assimilated to the certificate of merit, each being manifestly intended to honor and distinguish the recipient in person. Held therefore that (except by special authority of Congress) a medal of honor could not legally be awarded to the widow, or a member of the family, of a deceased officer, on account of distinguished service in action performed by the latter during his lifetime. (Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1655.)

Par. 175, A. R., 1901, like the provision upon which it is based, of the act of March 3, 1863, is deemed to contemplate, in a case of an award to an officer, that the person shall be a commissioned officer of the Army at the time of the award. A contract or acting assistant surgeon is not, and was not at any time, such a commissioned officer. Held therefore that a medal of honor could not legally be awarded to a person for alleged distinguished service rendered while serving in the field as an acting assistant surgeon in 1864, who moreover had had no connection with the Army since 1865. (Ibid., par. 1656; see also XX Opin. Att. Gen., 421.)

[1] Held, under section 1216, Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of February 9, 1891, as follows: 1. A certificate of merit may now be granted to "any enlisted man of the Army," noncommissioned officer as well as private.(a) 2. It may be granted for distinguished conduct prior to the date of the act of February 9, 1891, as well as since.(b) 3. The grantee must belong to a regiment. 4. While the recommendation of the regimental commander is necessary, this recommendation may be based upon any fact or facts deemed by him to justify it, such as the recommendation of the company commander or any other officer (whether of the regiment or not) cognizant of the circumstances of the case, or upon any other authentic information brought to his (the regimental commander's) knowledge. 5. That the declaration of paragraph 197, Army Regulations, 1901, that the recommendation "must originate with an eye witness," is an interpolation not autnorized nor called for by the original statute (sec. 1216, R. S.), or by the recent amendment of 1891, and an instance of quasi legislation unwarranted in an army regulation. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 668.

Held, under section 1216, construed in connection with section 1285, Revised Statutes, that the President was authorized to grant a certificate of merit only to a soldier belonging at the time of the grant to a regiment of the Army; that he was not empowered to grant such a certificate to a discharged soldier and civilian on account of services rendered while he was a soldier.(c) Ibid., par. 667.

a In Bell v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 462, it was held that a soldier to whom, when a member of an infantry regiment, had been granted a certificate of merit, was entitled to continue to receive the additional pay after reenlisting in the "general messenger service."

b See McNamara v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cls., 416, where it is held that the act of February 9, 1891, is retroactive, and entitles the beneficiary to the additional pay from the date of the service for which the certificate was awarded.

[1] The requirements of section 1116, Revised Statutes, in respect to the limits of age for recruits upon their original enlistment into the military service have been modified by the act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 486), which established the superior limit at thirty years in time of peace, and by section 4 of the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 978), which fixes the limits of age for original enlistments at from eighteen to thirty-five years.

Enlistment is a contract, but it is one of those contracts which changes the status, and where that is changed no breach of contract destroys the new status or relieves from the obligations which its existence imposes. * * * By enlistment the citizen becomes a soldier. His relations to the State and the public are changed. He acquires a new status, with correlative rights and duties, and although he may violate his contract obligations, his status as a soldier is unchanged. He can not of his own volition throw off the garments he has once put on, nor can he, the State not objecting, renounce his relations and destroy his status on the plea that, if he had disclosed truthfully the facts, the other party, the State, would not have entered into the new relations with him or permitted him to change his status. U. S. v. Grimley, 137 U. S., 147.

Our law not defining enlistment, nor designating what proceeding or proceedings shall or may constitute an enlistment, it may be said, in general, that any act or acts which indicate an undertaking, on the part of a person legally competent to do so, to render military service to the United States for the term required by existing law, and an acceptance of such service on the part of the Government, may ordinarily be regarded as legal evidence of a contract of enlistment between the parties and as equivalent to a formal agreement where no such agreement has been had. The forty-seventh article of war practically makes the receipt of pay by a party as a soldier evidence of an enlistment on his part, estopping him from denying his military capacity when sought to be made amenable as a deserter. The continued rendering of service which is accepted may constitute an enlistment. But enlistments in our Army are now almost invariably evidenced by a formal writing and engagement under oath. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 384, par. 1. See also In re McDonald, 1 Lowell, 100.

An enlistment is the act of making a contract to serve the Government in a subordinate capacity either in the Army or the Navy. Erichson v. Beach, 40 Conn., 283. An enlistment is not a contract only, but effects a change of status. In re Grimley, 137 U. S., 151. The statutes employ the term "enlist" only with reference to contracts with persons who enter the Army as privates, and to certain other classes of men, like Indian scouts and hospital stewards, who rank like soldiers, and voluntarily put themselves under military law. Babbitt v. U. S., 16 Ct. Cls., 214.

[1] Any male citizen of the United States, or person who has legally declared his intention to become a citizen, if above the age of twenty-one and under the age of thirty-five years, able-bodied, free from disease, of good character and temperate habits, may be enlisted under the restrictions contained in this article. In regard to age or citizenship this regulation shall not apply to soldiers who have served honestly and faithfully a previous enlistment in the Army. Par. 921, A. R., 1901. See also circular of June 3, 1898, from the Adjutant-General's Office for qualifications for volunteer recruits.

[2] Sections 1116, 1117, and 1118, Revised Statutes, providing that deserters, convicted felons, insane or intoxicated persons, and certain minors shall not be enlisted are regarded as directory only, and not as making necessarily void such enlistments, but as rendering them voidable merely, at the option of the Government. In cases of such enlistments, except of course where the party, by reason of mental derangement or drunkenness was without the legal capacity to contract, the Government may elect to hold the soldier to service, subject to any application for discharge which may be addressed by himself or his parent, etc., either to the Secretary of War or to a United

1374. Every soldier who, having been honorably discharged, reenlists within three months thereafter, shall be further entitled after five years service, including his first enlistment, to receive for the period of five years next thereafter two dollars per month in addition to the ordinary pay of his grade; and for each successive period of five years of service so long as he shall remain continuously in the Army a further sum of one dollar per month. The past continuous service of soldiers now in the Army shall be taken into account and shall entitle such soldier to additional pay according to this rule; but services rendered prior to August fourth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, shall in no case be accounted as more than one enlistment.[1]

Continuous service.

Provided, That to entitle them to the additional pay authorized by section twelve hundred and eighty-one, for men serving in the third, fourth, and fifth years, the service must have been continuous within the meaning of this section.[1] Sec. 3, act of August 1, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 216)

[1] The additional pay given to soldiers by this section does not depend upon mere length of service, but upon two other conditions—an honorable discharge and a voluntary reenlistment. Webb v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 58. It is intended, primarily, to be an inducement to the prompt reenlistment of an honorably discharged soldier, and it can be earned in no other way. Ibid.

The act of June 16, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 157), contained the provision "that the Secretary of War shall determine what misconduct shall constitute a failure to render honest and faithful service within the meaning of this act. But no soldier who has deserted at any time during the term of an enlistment shall be deemed to have served such term honestly and faithfully." Under the authority conferred by this statute the Secretary of War has decided that in the following cases there has been a failure to render honest and faithful service:

(1) Desertion.

(2) When the soldier is in confinement under a general court-martial sentence expressly imposing imprisonment until or beyond the expiration of his term; when discharged under sentence of general court-martial; when discharged by order from the War Department specifying forfeiture, or because of imprisonment by the civil authority.

(3) When the soldier is discharged for minority concealed at enlistment, or for other cause involving fraud in enlistment, or for disability caused by his misconduct.

(4) Upon the approved finding of a board of officers, called under paragraph 148, that the soldier has not served honestly and faithfully to the date of discharge.

The cause of forfeiture will be stated on the muster and pay rolls and on the final statements of the soldier.

TRANSFER OF ENLISTED MEN.[2]

1376. Any person enlisted in the military service of the United States may, on application to the Navy Department, approved by the President, be transferred to the Navy or Marine Corps, to serve therein the residue of his term of enlistment, subject to the laws and regulations for the government of the Navy. But such transfer shall not release him from any indebtedness to the Government, nor, without the consent of the President, from any penalty incurred for a breach of military law.

[1] This section repeals and replaces the requirement of the act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 486), "that hereafter, in time of peace no recruit shall be enlisted in the Army for the first time who is over 30 years of age, and no private shall be reenlisted who has served ten years or more, or who is over 35 years of age, except such as have already served as enlisted men for twenty years or upward."

[2] TRANSFER OF ENLISTED MEN.

Transfers of enlisted men will be made for cogent reasons only. They will be effected as follows:

(1) From one company to another of the same regiment, not involving change of station, by the colonel. In cases involving change, then by the colonel with the consent of the department commander if change of station is within department limits.

(2) From one regiment to another, and between companies of the same regiment serving in different military departments, by the Commanding General of the Army.

(3) In all other cases, by the Secretary of War. Par. 125, A. R., 1901.

DETACHED SOLDIERS.

Enlisted men detached from their companies will be provided with descriptive lists showing the pay due them, the condition of their clothing allowance, and all information necessary to the settlement of their accounts with the Government should they be discharged. When it can be avoided, the descriptive list will not be intrusted to the soldier, but to an officer or noncommissioned officer, under whose charge he may be serving, or it may be forwarded by mail. The immediate commanding officer will note upon the descriptive lists the date and result of the last vaccination of each soldier. Par. 115, ibid.

grant furloughs, not exceeding thirty days at one time, to five per centum of the enlisted men, for good conduct in the line of duty, but subject to the approval of the commander of the forces of which said enlisted men form a part. Every company officer of a regiment, commanding any troop, battery, or company not in the field, or commanding in any garrison, fort, post, or barrack, may, in the absence of his field officer, grant furloughs to the enlisted men, for a time not exceeding twenty days in six months, and not to more than two persons to be absent at the same time.[1] Eleventh Article of War.

[1] Furloughs in the prescribed form for periods of twenty days may be granted to enlisted men by commanding officers of posts, or by regimental commanders if the companies to which they belong are under their control. A furlough will not be granted to a soldier about to be discharged. Par. 116, A. R., 1901

Corps or department commanders may grant furloughs to enlisted men, sergeants of the post noncommissioned staff excepted, for two months, and the Commanding General of the Army for four months, or they may extend to such periods furloughs already granted. For a longer period than four months the authority of the Secretary of War is necessary. Permission to delay may be granted to enlisted men traveling under orders as authorized for furloughs. The conditions under which furloughs to soldiers on reenlistment are authorized will be announced from time to time in orders. Par. 117, ibid; G. O., 23, A. G. O., 1899.

Furloughs to sergeants of the post noncommissioned staff or to enlisted men acting as such may be granted as follows: By a post commander for seven days, in case of emergency only; by a department commander for one month. Application for furlough for a longer period will be forwarded to the Adjutant-General of the Army for the decision of the Secretary of War. Par. 119, ibid.

Furloughs will not be granted by commanding officers permitting soldiers to go beyond the limits of the next higher command. To enable them to pass such limits the sanction of higher authority must be obtained and indorsed on the furloughs. The approval of the Secretary of War must be obtained to allow an enlisted man on furlough to leave the United States. The limits prescribed will be stated in the furlough, and if exceeded it may be revoked and the soldier arrested. A company commander in forwarding an application for furlough will state previous absences on furlough and the authority therefor. Par. 120, ibid.

On the application of a soldier on furlough, made at the nearest military station and showing clearly the urgency of his case, a department commander may order transportation and subsistence to be furnished to enable him to rejoin his proper station, and the company commander will charge the cost thereof against the soldier's pay on the next muster and pay roll, in accordance with paragraphs 1203 and 1422. The date of the application will be entered on the furlough. Par. 121, ibid.

A soldier who has returned from furlough to the station from which furloughed, his company having in his absence changed station, is entitled to transportation at the expense of the Government to the new station of his company. Par. 111, ibid., 1895.

Soldiers on furlough will not take with them their arms or accouterments, and no payments will be made to them without authority from the Secretary of War. Par. 124, ibid. For orders in respect to sick furloughs to enlisted men of the volunteer forces see G. O., 114, 121, 130, 134, 139, 148, 168, 170, 173, and 175, A. G. O., 1898; Circulars 34, 39, 41, and 48, A. G. O., 1898.

Section 2 of the act of June 16, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 157), contained the requirement that "at the end of three years from the date of his enlistment every soldier whose antecedent service has been faithful shall be entitled to receive a furlough for three months, and that in time of peace he shall at the end of such furlough be entitled to receive his discharge upon his own application: Provided further, That soldiers discharged under the provisions of this section shall not be entitled to the allowances provided in section twelve hundred and ninety of the Revised Statutes." See, however, in this connection section 2 of the act of August 1, 1894 (paragraph 1370, ante), which reduced the length of the term of enlistment in time of peace to three years. Section 2 of the act of June 16, 1890, ceased to be operative as to furloughs on August 1, 1897, and as to discharges at expiration of furlough on November 1, 1897.

If said enlisted man had war service with the Army in the field, or in the Navy or Marine Corps in active service, either as volunteer or regular, during the war of the rebellion, such war service shall be computed as double time in computing the thirty years necessary to entitle him to be retired.[1] Act of September 30, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 504).

War service, etc., to be computed as double time.

Sept. 30, 1890, v. 26, p. 504.

[1] The act of February 14, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 305), which created the retired list for enlisted men, was amended by the act of September 30, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 504), by the addition of the proviso permitting war service during the war of the rebellion to be computed as double time in computing the thirty years' service necessary to entitle him to be retired.

An enlisted man on the retired list is subject to trial by court-martial, and to dishonorable discharge by sentence, if such be adjudged. But the existing law, in entitling him to be retired if he complies with its conditions, evidently contemplates that he shall remain a pensioner on the bounty of the Government during the remainder of his life, if not forfeiting his claim by serious misconduct. So, held that retired enlisted men could not legally be discharged by Executive order under the Fourth Article of War, which contemplates soldiers on the active list only. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2218.

Held, in the absence of any legislation to the contrary, that retired enlisted men, like retired officers, might legally be employed in any Department of the Government as clerks, messengers, watchmen, etc., and receive pay for such employment, while at the same time retaining their positions on the retired list and receiving retired pay. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 2219.

The act of February 14, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 305), entitles a retired enlisted man to three-fourths of his service ration. He is not entitled to commutation for things which, in active service, he enjoys only in common with others, such as medicine, medical services, fuel, and quarters. McKenna v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls, 308.

The authorized pay and allowances of retired enlisted men will be paid them monthly by the Pay Department. Their pay will be three-fourths of the monthly pay allowed them by law in the grade held when retired, including reenlisted and continuous-service pay then received. No deduction will be made except the monthly tax of 12½ cents for the support of the Soldiers' Home. They are not entitled to commutation for fuel or quarters, but will receive commutation for subsistence and clothing as follows:

For subsistence.—At the rate of 22½ cents per day.

For clothing.—Three-fourths of the average annual allowance prescribed in orders for an entire enlistment in the grade from which retired, one-twelfth of such amount to be paid monthly. The allowance of clothing to chief musicians is the same as that to quartermaster-sergeants. Par. 149, A. R., 1901.

Upon the retirement of an enlisted man from active service he is entitled to transportation in kind to the place of his enlistment or to his home. Section 1290, Revised Statutes, does not apply to enlisted men transferred to the retired list, in that they are not discharged. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., par. 874; U. S. v. Tyler, 105 U. S., 244.

[1] An enlisted man will not be discharged before the expiration of his term except:

1. By order of the President or Secretary of War.
2. By sentence of a general court-martial.
3. On certificate of disability, by direction of the commander of a territorial department or army in the field; but when the disability of a soldier is caused by disease contracted before enlistment, or by his own misconduct or bad habits, discharge will be ordered only by the Secretary of War.
4. In compliance with an order of one of the United States courts, or a justice or a judge thereof, on a writ of habeas corpus. Par. 151, A. R., 1901.

The act of March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 63), contains the requirement "that no enlisted man discharged by order of the Secretary of War for disability caused by his own misconduct shall be entitled to the travel allowances provided for in section 1290 of the Revised Statutes."

When an enlisted man is discharged, his company commander will furnish him with final statements in duplicate or a full statement in writing of the reasons why such final statements are not furnished. Final statements will not be furnished a soldier who has forfeited all pay and allowances and has no deposits due him. When the discharge is made on certificate of disability, the ascertained disability as recited in the certificate must be given in the final statements as the reason or cause for discharge. Par. 152, A. R., 1901.

When an enlisted man is discharged by expiration of service, his discharge will take effect on the last day thereof; i. e., if enlisted on the second day of the month his term will expire on the first day of the same month in the last year of his term of enlistment. Par. 154, ibid.

[1] DISHONORABLE DISCHARGE.

A dishonorable discharge from the service is a complete expulsion from the Army and covers all unexpired enlistments. Par. 168, A. R., 1901.

A dishonorable discharge is a discharge expressly imposed as a punishment by sentence. Such a discharge is held also to be involved in a sentence "to be drummed out of the service." It is only by a sentence that a dishonorable discharge can be authorized. Being a punishment, it cannot be prescribed by an Order. In a case of this discharge, the word "dishonorably" is inserted before the word "discharged" in the certificate, and it is added that the discharge is given pursuant to the sentence of a certain general court-martial, specifying it by reference to the order by which it was constituted. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 361, par. 25.

Held that an executed dishonorable discharge was an absolute expulsion from the Army, and as such did not merely terminate the particular enlistment, but covered all previous unexecuted enlistments of the soldier, if any. A soldier sentenced to a dishonorable discharge, duly approved and executed, can not be made amenable for a desertion committed under a prior enlistment. Ibid., par. 26.

The discharge of a soldier, discharged not by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment, but under a sentence of court-martial, should be dated as of the day on which the approval of the sentence is officially published, or the order promulgating such approval is received, at the post where the soldier is held. It is to that date that he is to be paid, if pay is due him. Ibid., 359, par. 16.

The formal certificate of discharge, furnished in blank by the Adjutant-General (see par. 151, A. R.), is, when duly made out and signed, legal evidence of the fact of discharge, and of the circumstances therein stated, under which it was given. The certificate is not a record, and its statements are not conclusive upon the Government when contradicted by record or other better evidence. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 358, par. 13.

The discharge furnished to the soldier, or for him, takes effect, like a deed, upon delivery. The delivery should be personal, unless, at its date, the soldier is in confinement awaiting trial or under sentence; in such case the delivery may be constructive, the certificate being committed to the commander of the company, post, etc., to be retained by him for the soldier until released from arrest or imprisonment, and then rendered to him personally. This is the recognized practice; the delivery to the commander being deemed tantamount to actual delivery. Ibid., par. 14.

A soldier should not be furnished with his formal discharge on the day of the expiration of his term if he is then awaiting sentence of court-martial. No soldier in such a status can be entitled to his discharge till the result of his trial be published. Ibid., 359, par. 15.

Any form of discharge other than such as is prescribed in the fourth Article of War is irregular and inoperative (unless indeed otherwise authorized by subsequent statute). Mere desertion does not operate as a discharge of a soldier; he may then be dropped from the rolls of his command, but he is in no sense discharged from the Army. Nor can an official publication, in orders, of a sentence of dishonorable discharge have the effect of discharging a soldier; there must still be a notice, actual, as by the delivery of the formal discharge certificate, or constructive, of the formal discharge. A soldier can not discharge himself by simply leaving the service at the

DISCHARGE BY PURCHASE.

Sec. 4, June 16, 1890, v. 26, p. 157.

1386. That in time of peace the President may, in his discretion and under such rules and upon such conditions as he shall prescribe, permit any enlisted man to purchase his discharge from the Army. The purchase money to be paid under this section shall be paid to a paymaster of the Army and be deposited to the credit of one or more of the current appropriations for the support of the Army, to be indicated by the Secretary of War, and be available for the payment of expenses incurred during the fiscal year in which the discharge is made.[1] Sec. 4, act of June 16, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 157).

expiration of his term. The final statements required by paragraph 141, A. R., to be furnished with the discharge, constitute no part of the discharge; the discharge is complete without them. Ibid., par. 17.

Discharge certificates will not be made in duplicate. Upon satisfactory proof of the loss of a discharge or of its destruction without the fault of the party entitled to it, the War Department may issue to such party a certificate of service, showing date of enlistment in and discharge from the Army and character given on discharge certificate. Discharge certificates must not be forwarded to the War Department in correspondence unless called for. Par. 155, A. R., 1901.

Blank forms for discharge and final statements will be furnished by the Adjutant-General of the Army, and will be retained in the personal custody of company commanders; those for discharge will be of three classes: For honorable and for dishonorable discharge and for discharge without honor. They will be used as follows:

(1) The parchment discharge blank, for honorable discharge only, and the word "honorably" will be interlined in the old blanks when used.

(2) The blank for dishonorable discharge, for such discharge alone.

(3) The blank for discharge without honor when a soldier is discharged:

(a) Without trial, on account of fraudulent enlistment.

(b) Without trial, on account of having become disqualified for service, physically or in character, through his own fault.

(c) On account of imprisonment under sentence of a civil court.

(d) On account of being at the expiration of his term of enlistment in confinement under the sentence of a general court-martial which does not provide for dishonorable discharge.

(e) When discharge without honor is specially ordered by the Secretary of War for any other reason. Par. 167, ibid.

An enlisted man remains in service until receipt of his discharge, or until such action is taken as will render him legally chargeable with notice thereof, notwithstanding the expiration of his term of enlistment during his absence on a furlough granted at his own request. 2 Compt. Dec., 94.

[1] Under section 4 of the act of June 16, 1890, the President may, in his discretion, permit a soldier to purchase his discharge, even if his service has not been faithful. This section does not, as do section 1 (relating to pay) and section 2 (relating to discharge and furlough), prescribe as a condition to receive its benefits that the antecedent service shall have been "faithful." Dig. Opin. J. A. G., p. 362, par. 32.

The act of June 16, 1890, section 4, leaves it to the President, "in his discretion," to determine the amount to be paid for the discharge, the time of payment, etc., and, indeed, whether the purchase shall be permitted at all. But it specifically declares that the money when paid "shall be paid to a paymaster of the Army;" and, in view of this express provision, held that payments could not legally be made to post, regimental, company, or other commanders. The paymaster, a bonded official, is appointed to receive payment in the first instance and thereupon make the deposit directed in the act. Ibid., par. 33.

Held that there was no legal authority for the refunding, by the military authorities, of money paid to purchase a discharge under the act of June 16, 1890. This clearly appears from the terms of the act, which provides that the money, when paid, "shall be deposited in the Treasury" to the credit of some current appropriation, to be designated by the Secretary of War, to be "available for the payment of expenses incurred during the fiscal year in which the discharge is made." The act moreover authorizes the President to permit such purchases "under such rules and upon such conditions as he shall prescribe," and nothing is found in the rules actually prescribed (in General Orders 81, 108 of 1890, 48 of 1891, 32 of 1892, or 17 of 1893) which contemplates or refers to the refunding of such purchase money. Ibid., par. 1174.

In time of peace a soldier serving in the second year or first six months of the third year of his first enlistment may apply to the Adjutant-General of the Army through military channels for the privilege of purchasing his discharge, but such application will not be entertained unless based on satisfactory reasons fully set forth by the applicant and verified by the officer forwarding the application, nor unless accompanied by a statement of the soldier's immediate commanding officer showing the condition of his accounts. If such application be granted the purchase price will be entered on the final statements as an item due the United States. A soldier once discharged by purchase will not be granted that favor a second time. A soldier serving in the second or any enlistment, but not receiving continuous service or reenlisted pay, is not debarred from discharge by purchase. The price of purchase in the first month of the second year will be $120, and will be $5 less in each succeeding month of the period during which purchase may be authorized. Par. 156, A. R., 1901.

Enlisted men who have served meritoriously twelve years or more, continuously or otherwise, will be classified as veteran soldiers. If it be for their material benefit, discharge may be granted them by the Secretary of War by way of favor as veterans. A soldier once discharged as a veteran will not be discharged again by way of favor. Par. 157, ibid.

Soldiers discharged as provided in paragraph 156 will not receive travel allowances. Par. 158, ibid.

A soldier who has obtained his discharge by purchase under the provisions of section 4, act of June 16, 1890, is not entitled to recover the money paid for said discharge in pursuance of law. 2 Compt. Dec., 546. The accounting officers have no authority to review the action of the War Department refusing to discharge the soldier for disability and requiring him to purchase his discharge as a condition precedent to his release from service. 2 Compt. Dec., 546. See also pars. 936 and 1547, A. R., 1901; circ. 13, A. G. O., 1895; circ. 7, A. G. O., 1896, and circs. 38 and 40, A. G. O., 1898.

DISCHARGE FOR DISABILITY.

When an enlisted man is permanently unfitted for military service because of wounds or disease, he should, if practicable, be discharged on certificate of disability before the expiration of the term of service in which the disability was incurred. Blank forms will be furnished by the Adjutant-General of the Army, and the directions thereon will be strictly complied with. Par. 171, A. R., 1901.

When physical disability does not appear to be permanent, was incurred in line of duty, and benefit may be expected from a change of climate, a report of the case will be forwarded for the action of the Commanding General of the Army. The soldier will not be transferred to another company. In cases likely to be benefited by treatment in the Army and Navy General Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., the application required by the regulations for admission thereto will be made. A

Applications for said certificates of discharge or amended orders of resignation may be made by or on behalf of persons entitled to them; but no such certificate or order shall be issued where a name was assumed to cover a crime or to avoid its consequence.[1] Act of April 14, 1890 (*26 Stat. record of cases transferred under the foregoing provisions, with a report of results, will be forwarded to the Surgeon-General at the end of each calendar year. Par. 172, ibid.

When an application for discharge is approved, the post or regimental commander will furnish to the surgeon by whom the certificate was given, or to the senior surgeon of the command to which the soldier was attached at the time of his discharge, a letter setting forth the full name and rank ot the soldier, the company and regiment to which he belonged, the date of discharge, and the cause thereof as stated in the certificate. The surgeon, having made a true copy of the letter for the completion of his own records, will forward the original to the Surgeon-General direct. Par. 173, ibid.

When there is a probable case for pension, special care will be taken to state in the certificate the degree of disability, to describe particularly the disability, wound, or disease, the extent to which it deprives the soldier of the use of any limb or faculty, or affects his health, strength, activity, constitution, or capacity to labor. Par. 174, ibid.

[1] Discharge certificates will not be made in duplicate. Upon satisfactory proof of the loss of a discharge, or of its destruction without the fault of the party entitled to it, the War Department may issue to such party a certificate of service, showing date of enlistment in and discharge from the Army and character given on discharge certificate. Discharge certificates must not be forwarded to the War Department in correspondence unless called for. Par. 155, A. R., 1901.

The dicharge certificates authorized to be issued under the provisions of these statutes is not to be confounded with the certificate denominated a "deserter's release," the issue of which is authorized in certain cases by G. O. 55, A. G. O., 1890 (26 Stat. L., 54). See note to paragraph 1411, post.

1390. In all cases where it has become necessary for any officer or enlisted man of the Army to file his evidence of honorable discharge from the military service of the United States to secure the settlement of his accounts, the accounting officer with whom it has been filed shall, upon application by said officer or enlisted man, deliver to him such evidence of honorable discharge; but his accounts shall first be duly settled, and the fact, date, and amount of such settlement shall be clearly written across the face of such evidence of honorable discharge, and attested by the signature of the accounting officer before it is delivered.

[1] See the Forty-seventh Article of War.

Desertion is an unauthorized absenting of himself from the military service by an officer or soldier with the intention of not returning. In other words, it is the violation of military discipline familiarly known as absence without leave (whether consisting in an original absenting without authority or in an overstaying of a defined leave of absence), accompanied by an animus remanendi or non revertendi, this animus constituting the gist of the offense. In order to establish the commission of the specific offense both these elements—the fact of the unauthorized voluntary withdrawal and the intent permanently to abandon the service—must be proved. The intent may be inferred not indeed from the fact of absenting alone, but from the circumstances attending this fact, and here the duration of the absence is especially material. Thus the circumstance that the absence has been exceptionally protracted and quite unexplained will in general furnish a presumption of the existence of the necessary intent. An unauthorized absence, however, of a few hours, terminated by a forcible apprehension, may, under certain situations, be sufficient evidence of such intent, and thus proof of a desertion; while an absence for a considerable interval, unattended by circumstances indicating a purpose to separate permanently from the service, or to dissolve the pending engagement of the soldier, may be proof simply of the minor included offense. In order to determine whether or not the officer or soldier absented himself with the intent not to return, i. e., whether his offense was desertion or absence without leave, all the circumstances connected with his leaving, absence, and return (whether compulsory or voluntary) must be considered together. Each case must be governed by its own peculiar facts, and no general rule on the subject can be laid down. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1053.

No man will be reported a deserter until after the expiration of ten days (should he remain away that length of time), unless the company commander has conclusive evidence of the absentee's intention not to return; but the commanding officers will take steps to apprehend soldiers absent without leave as soon as that fact is reported. Should the soldier not return, or not be apprehended, within the time named, his desertion will date from the commencement of the unauthorized absence. An absence without leave of less than one day will not be noted upon the muster and pay rolls. Par. 144, A. R., 1901.

When a deserter surrenders or is delivered at a military post, the post commander will cause immediate inquiry to be made in regard to dates of enlistment and desertion, and if these indicate that trial is barred by law, and the deserter claims to have been within the limits of the United States during two years of his absence in desertion and there is no attainable evidence in disproof thereof, will require him to file an affidavit asserting his claim, will immediately set him at liberty with instructions to apply by letter to the Adjutant-General of the Army for a "deserter's release," and will then report his action to the Adjutant-General of the Army, transmitting with the report the affidavit above mentioned. Par. 131, ibid.

An enlisted man apprehended or surrendering as a deserter, and whose trial for desertion is not barred by the statute of limitations, will be examined by a medical officer at the post where he is received, and a report of this examination will be forwarded to department headquarters. If, on account of disease, age, or other permanent disability, the man is found unfit for service, the report, with the department commander's recommendation thereon, will be forwarded to the Adjutant-General of the Army. If the examination shows that the man is fit for service the department commander will bring him to trial, or restore him to duty without trial, as the interests of the Government may dictate. Par. 132, ibid.

Deserters will be brought to trial with the least practicable delay. While awaiting trial they will receive no pay, nor will they be permitted to sign pay rolls, and will be required to wear the clothes worn at the time of arrest, unless it should be imperative to issue other clothing, when, as far as practicable, only deserters' or other unserviceable clothing will be issued. Par. 140, ibid.

A deserter will not be restored to duty without trial, except by authority competent to order his trial. Such restoration does not remove the charge of desertion, nor relieve the soldier from any of the forfeitures attached to that offense. He must make good the time lost by desertion, refund the reward and expenses paid for apprehension and delivery, and forfeit pay while absent. Par. 132, A. R., 1895.

DISPOSITION OF EFFECTS OF DESERTERS.

The clothing abandoned by a deserter will be turned over to the quartermaster with a certificate from the company or detachment commander showing its condition and the name of the deserter to whom it belonged. All other personal effects of a deserter will be disposed of as in the case of unclaimed effects of deceased soldiers. Par. 141, A. R., 1901.

[1] The forfeiture of pay and allowances prescribed for deserters by paragraphs 126, 130, and 132 of the Army Regulations of 1895 can be imposed, in any case, only upon a satisfactory ascertainment of the fact of desertion. The same may indeed legally be enforced in the absence of an investigation by a military court, as, for instance, upon the restoration to duty without trial, by the order of competent authority, under paragraph 128 of the Army Regulations, of a deserter as such. But in general, in this case equally as in that of the statutory liability, the forfeiture can safely be applied only upon the trial and conviction by court-martial of the alleged deserter. The conviction must, of course, be duly approved; if it be disapproved, the soldier can not legally be subjected to the forfeiture, since he can not be treated as a deserter in law. Nor can he be subjected to the forfeiture if he is acquitted, though the finding be disapproved by the reviewing authority. A removal, in orders of the War Department, of a charge of desertion entered by mistake upon the rolls against a soldier, operates to relieve him of any and all stoppages which have been charged against his pay account for forfeitures authorized by the Army Regulations in cases of deserters. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 342, par. 9.

A deserter can not legally be subjected to any forfeiture other than those prescribed by statute or army regulation. He incurs, for example, no forfeiture of his own personal property. So, where it was proposed to sell certain private property belonging to and left by a deserter and devote the proceeds to the post fund, held that there was no legal authority for such appropriation by the military authorities. So a soldier, by reason of having deserted, does not forfeit bounty money which has been paid him upon enlistment or subsequently, or any other money found in his possession upon his arrest. And such money can not legally be withheld from him to be appropriated to a regimental or post fund or any other purpose, but being his own personal property, unaffected by his offense, must be treated as such. Ibid., par. 1064.

[2] A deserter will make good the time lost by desertion, unless discharged by competent authority. He will be considered again in service upon his return to military control; but if a deserter enlists while in desertion, his services under such unlawful enlistment will not be counted as making good any of the time lost by desertion. Par. 142, A. R., 1901. See 48th article of war.

Who may arrest deserters. Sec. 3, June 16, 1890, v. 26, p. 157.

1407. United States marshals and their deputies, sheriffs and their deputies, constables, and police officers of towns and cities are hereby authorized to apprehend, arrest, and receive the surrender of any deserter from the Army for the purpose of delivering him to any person in the military service authorized to receive him.[2] Sec. 3, act of June 16, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 157).

Arrest, etc., of deserters by civil officers. Sec. 2, Oct. 1, 1890, v. 26, p. 648.

1408. It shall be lawful for any civil officer having authority under the laws of the United States or of any State, Territory, or District, to arrest offenders, to summarily arrest a deserter from the military service of the United States and deliver him into the custody of the military authority of the General Government.[3] Sec. 2, act of June 18, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 484).

Reward for apprehension of deserters. Mar. 3, 1899, v. 30, p. 1070.

1409. For the apprehension, securing, and delivery of deserters and the expenses incident to their pursuit, and no greater sum than fifty dollars for each deserter shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be paid to any officer or citizen for such services and expenses.[1] Act of March 3, 1899 (*30 Stat. [1] The actual payment of the compensation in such cases is authorized by the annual army appropriation acts, which, in appropriating for the incidental expenses of the Quartermaster's Department, include as an item—"for the apprehension, securing, and delivering of deserters, and the expenses incident to their pursuit." Prior to the act of August 6, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 239), the maximum reward for the apprehension and delivery of a deserter from the military service was fixed at $30. The act of August 6, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 239), fixed the maximum amount of such reward at $10, and this provision was repeated in the acts of February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 659); March 16, 1896, 29 ibid., 65; March 2, 1897, ibid., 614, and March 16, 1898, 30 ibid., 30. Under the authority conferred by the above statute the following regulation was promulgated by the Secretary of War in G. O. 160, A. G. O., 1899:

A reward of $30 will be paid to any civil officer having authority for the apprehension and delivery to the proper military authorities at a military station (or at some convenient point as near thereto as may be agreed upon) of any deserter from the military service, except such as can claim exemption from trial under the statute of limitations, and such officer will also be reimbursed for actual cost of tickets over the shortest usually traveled route for himself to and from such station or point and for the deserter to such station or point not to exceed $20. The reward and actual cost of tickets will be paid by the Quartermaster's Department, and will be in full satisfaction of all expenses for arresting, keeping, and delivering the deserter. The payment will be reported to the commander of the company or detachment to which the deserter belongs. Par. 135, A. R., 1901.

Rewards or expenses paid for apprehending a deserter, and the expenses incurred in transporting him from point of apprehension, delivery, or surrender to the station of his company or detachment, or to the place of his trial, including the cost of transportation of the guard, will be set against his pay upon conviction of desertion by a court-martial, or upon his restoration to duty without trial. A soldier convicted by a court-martial of absence without leave will be charged with the expense incurred in transporting him to his proper station. The transportation and subsistence of witnesses will not be charged against a deserter. Par. 137, ibid.

If a soldier be brought to trial under a charge of desertion and acquitted, or convicted of absence without leave only, or if the sentence be disapproved by proper authority, any amount paid as a reward for his arrest will not be stopped against his pay unless, in case of conviction of absence without leave, the sentence of the court shall so direct. Par. 138, ibid.

The reward of $30, made payable by paragraph 156, Army Regulations, 1863, is not due merely on the apprehension of a deserter; he must also be delivered "to an officer of the Army at the most convenient post or recruiting station." The fact of the offer of a reward for the arrest of a deserter does not authorize a breach of the peace or commission of an illegal act in making the arrest. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1071 and note.

The amount of the reward and reimbursement provided for in G. O. 160, A. G. O., 1899, are there stated to be "in full satisfaction of all expenses for arresting, keeping, and delivering the deserter." Disbursements made by a civilian, where no arrest is effected, are at his own risk, and can not legally be reimbursed by the military authorities. Ibid., par. 1072.

The legal liability imposed upon the soldier by paragraph 137, Army Regulations, 1901, to have the amount of the reward stopped against his pay, is quite independent of the punishment which may be imposed upon him by sentence of court-martial on conviction of the desertion. Such stoppage need not be directed in the sentence; courts-martial indeed have sometimes assumed to impose it, like an ordinary forfeiture of pay, but its insertion in the sentence adds nothing to its legal effect. Ibid., par. 1073.

Where a soldier, charged with desertion, is acquitted, or where, if convicted, his conviction is disapproved by the competent reviewing authority, he can not legally be made liable for the amount of a reward paid or payable for his arrest as a deserter, since in such cases he is not a deserter in law. Ibid., par. 1074.

Where a soldier for whose apprehension as a supposed deserter the legal reward has been paid, is subsequently brought to trial upon a charge of desertion, and is found guilty not of desertion but only of the lesser and distinct offense of absence without leave, he clearly can not legally be held liable for the reward by a stoppage of the amount against his pay. In such a case, the instrumentality resorted to by

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS IN DESERTION.

Statute of limitation in desertion.
Apr. 11, 1890, v. 26, p. 54.

1411. No person shall be tried or punished by a court-martial for desertion in time of peace, and not in the face of an enemy, committed more than two years before the arraignment of such person for such offense, unless he shall the United States for determining the nature of his offense—the court-martial—having pronounced that it was not desertion, the Government is bound by the result, and to visit upon him a penalty to which a deserter only can be subject, would be grossly arbitrary and wholly unauthorized. Moreover, such action would be directly at variance with the terms of paragraph 137 of the Army Regulations of 1901, which fixes such liability upon the soldier tried in the event only of his conviction of desertion, unless indeed the sentence of the court expressly forfeits the amount. Ibid., par. 1075.

PAYMENT OF REWARDS.

To entitle a person (under paragraph 137, Army Regulations of 1901) to the reward for the arrest of a deserter, the party arrested must be still a soldier. Though, at the time of the arrest, the period of his term of enlistment may have expired, or he may be under sentence of dishonorable discharge, yet if he has not been discharged in fact, the official duly making the arrest, etc., on account of a desertion committed before the end of his term, becomes entitled to the payment of the reward specified in the regulations. Similarly held, where the soldier, arrested when at large as a deserter, had been sentenced to confinement (without discharge), and had escaped therefrom. Ibid., par. 1076.

The soldier arrested must be a deserter and legally liable as such. If he has been judicially determined to be not a deserter, as where he has been convicted of absence without leave only (see paragraph 126, Army Regulations); or, if, in view of the limitation of the one hundred and third article, he has a legal defense to a prosecution for desertion (General Orders 22 of 1893), the reward is not payable for his apprehension. Ibid., 347, par. 27. See also par. 127, A. R., 1895.

Where the soldier when arrested had been absent but three days, and was still in uniform, and had not been reported or dropped as a deserter, and his company commander had not the "conclusive evidence" of his "intention not to return," referred to in paragraph 144, Army Regulations, 1901, held that there was not sufficient evidence that he was a deserter to justify the payment of the reward for his arrest and delivery. Ibid., par. 1078.

The arrest made must be a legal one. Thus held that the reward was not payable for an arrest made on the soil of Mexico, involving a violation of the territorial rights of that sovereignty. An act done in violation of law can not be the basis of a legal claim. Ibid., par. 1080.

Where the deserter was not arrested by, but surrendered himself to, the civil official, who in good faith took him into custody and securely held and duly delivered him—advised that there had been a substantial apprehension and that the reward was properly payable. [See Circular No. 1 (H. A.), 1886.] Ibid., par. 1081.

The delivery should be personal and manual on the part of the civil official. Where a soldier who had deserted was sentenced to a penitentiary as a horse thief, and at the end of his term of imprisonment a United States marshal caused information that he was a deserter to be conveyed to the commander of a neighboring military post, who thereupon had him arrested and brought to the post, held that the marshal was not entitled to claim the reward. Ibid., par. 1082.

So, where a civil official merely informed a captain of artillery that two soldiers serving in his battery were deserters from the battalion of engineers, held that, though such information was correct, the official was not entitled to the reward; and that the amount of the same, which had been erroneously paid him on the certificate of the captain, should be charged against the latter under paragraph 736, Army Regulations, 1901. Ibid., par. 1083.

The reward should be withheld where there is evidence of collusion between the alleged deserter and the civil official. Advised that a suspicion of such collusion was properly entertained in a case where the soldier, after an absence of but a few days, voluntarily surrendered himself, at or near the post of delivery, to a policeman, wdo turned him over, without expense or difficulty, to the military authorities who hid meanwhile have absented himself from the United States, in which case the time of his absence shall be excluded in computing the period of the limitation: Provided, That said limitation shall not begin until the end of the term for which said person was mustered into the service.[1] Act of April 11, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 54).

not treat him as a deserter but caused him to be charged, tried, and convicted as an absentee without leave only. Ibid., par. 1086.

An officer of the customs, empowered by law to make arrests of persons violating the revenue laws, but having no such general authority as is ordinarily possessed by peace officers "to arrest offenders" (according to the terms of the act of October 1, 1890, authorizing certain civil officials to arrest deserters)—held not entitled to be paid the regulation reward for the apprehension, etc., of a deserter from the Army. Ibid., par. 1087.

Held that a justice of the peace of Idaho was not, by the laws of that State, a peace officer or authorized to arrest offenders, and was therefore not within the terms of the act of October 1, 1890, or legally entitled to be paid the reward for the arrest, etc., of a deserter. Such justice may by his warrant authorize and thus cause arrests, but actual arrest pertains, under the laws of the State, to another class—sheriffs, constables, city marshals, and policemen. But held that a member of the Indian police, established under the regulations of the Indian Office, was a civil officer having authority to arrest offenders, and was entitled to the reward for the arrest of a deserter. Ibid., par. 1088.

Circular No. 11 (H. A.), 1883 declares that the reward shall not be paid where the deserter, at the time of arrest, "is serving in some other branch of the Army," etc. Thus held that the reward was not payable for the arrest of a deserter from the cavalry, who subsequently to his desertion, had enlisted in an infantry regiment in which he was serving at the date of the arrest. Ibid., par. 1091.

Where a civil official in good faith and in compliance with military instructions, made the arrest and delivery of a deserter, who, however, was of the class of deserters specified in General Orders 22 of 1893, viz, those who "would have the right to claim exemption from trial and punishment" under the present one hundred and third article of war—a fact not within the knowledge of the official and which he could not have ascertained, but who therefore had no legal claim for the payment of the reward—held that the reasonable expenses of such official incurred in the arrest, etc., might well be allowed by the Secretary of War out of the appropriation for the contingent expenses of the Army. But the civil official takes the risk of the soldier being or not being an actual deserter. If he turns out to be not one the official loses his time and disbursements, if any. Thus held that such official could have no claim to be reimbursed his expenses incurred in making, in good faith, the arrest of a supposed deserter who was in fact a dishonorably discharged soldier. Ibid., 349, par. 37.

A deserter is not chargeable, under paragraph 137, Army Regulations, 1901, with the expenses of transportation therein specified, if his conviction has been duly disapproved; such disapproval being tantamount to an acquittal. Ibid., par. 1067.

The expense of the transportation of a convicted deserter, incurred in the course of the execution of his sentence is not chargeable against the deserter under paragraph 137, Army Regulations of 1901, but must be borne by the United States. Ibid., par. 1068.

[1] The so-called "deserter's release," provided for by General Orders, 55, of 1890, is accorded when, by reason of the period which has elapsed since the end of his term of enlistment, the deserter could successfully plead the statute of limitations to a prosecution for his desertion. This period is complete at the expiration of two years from the end of its term. But where a soldier, who would have been eligible for such release on May 9, 1894, was, in February preceding, arrested, brought to trial, convicted, and sentenced to be dishonorably discharged, and was so discharged accordingly, held that he was not within the privilege of the General Orders, and that the release could not be accorded him. [As to the purpose and effect of this "release," see Circular No. 5, H. Q. A., 1894.] Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1100.

The "deserter's release" is intended for deserters in whose favor the limitation of the present one hundred and third article of war has fully run, and who therefore have a perfect defense to a prosecution. It was designed to secure them against proceedings for desertion and to obviate the expenses to which the Government might be put in the matter of their arrest and their trial. But it is not, and can not, in view of the provisions of article 4, serve as a discharge from the Army. The language of General Orders, 55, of 1890, which describes it as a release "from the Army," is therefore faulty. Ibid., par. 1101.

A deserter who has been once dishonorably discharged is not a subject for the "release"—does not belong to the class of persons for whom it is intended. It is designed for soldiers actually in service. It can not therefore now be given to one who was a soldier of a volunteer organization during the late war of the Rebellion. Nor can it be issued in a case of a soldier who has deceased. Ibid., par. 1102.

[1] DISPOSITION OF EFFECTS.

When a soldier is killed in action, or dies at any post, hospital, or station, it shall be the duty of his immediate commander to secure his effects and to prepare the inventory required by the one hundred and twenty-sixth article of war, according to prescribed form and to notify nearest relative of the fact of death. Duplicates of the inventory, with final statements, will be forwarded direct to the Adjutant-General of the Army. Par. 175, A. R., 1901.

Duplicate receipts will be taken, one of which will be sent direct to the Adjutant-General of the Army and the other retained with the company records. Par. 176, A. R., 1901.

In all cases of sale by a council of administration, a detailed statement of the proceeds, duly certified by the council and commanding officer, will accompany the paymaster's receipt forwarded by the company commander to the Adjutant-General of the Army. The statement will be indorsed: "Report of the proceeds of the effects of ——— ———, late of Company——, ——— Regiment of ———, who died at ———, the —— day of ———, ———." Par. 177, Ibid.

The effects will be delivered, when called for, to the legal representatives of the deceased, and the receipts therefor forwarded to the Adjutant-General of the Army. Applications for arrears of pay and proceeds of sale of effects of deceased soldiers should be addressed to the Auditor for the War Department, Washington, D. C., who settles such accounts. Par. 178, ibid.

In the settlement of the accounts of deceased soldiers, the accounting officers dispense with administration, and, as it were, administer themselves, paying to the persons entitled such amounts as may be found to be due the deceased in a final settlement of his accounts with the United States. 3 Compt. Dec., 197.

FUNERAL EXPENSES.

The remains of deceased soldiers will be decently inclosed in coffins and transported by the Quartermaster's Department to the nearest military post or national cemetery for burial unless the commanding officer deem burial at the place of death to be proper, when a report of the fact will be made to the Adjutant-General of the Army. The expense of transporting the remains is payable from the appropriation for Army transportation; other expenses of burial are limited to $15 for noncommissioned officers and $10 for private soldiers. The annual acts of appropriation since that of August 8, 1846 (9 Stat. L., 68), have contained provision for the expenses of interment of noncommissioned officers and soldiers. The act of July 8, 1898 (30 Stat. [1] The terms of the act of appropriation authorizing the payment of certain expenses of burial in the case of enlisted men who die "while on duty," have been held by the Comptroller of the Treasury to prohibit the payment of such expenses in the case of a soldier who was killed while attempting to run the guard. VI Compt. Dec., 794; held similarly as to a soldier who died at his home, ibid., 343; of a soldier who died in confinement, ibid., 453; and of a soldier who had once been buried, ibid., 485.

The expense of burial in the case of an enlisted man, as establised at $35 by paragraph 162, A. R., 1895, as amended by G. O. 141, A. G. March 3, 1855 (10 Stat. L., 635). A third regiment of cavalry was organized by order of the President on May 4, 1861, confirmed by the act of July 29, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 279). In accordance with the authority conferred by the act of August 3, 1861, the six mounted regiments of the Army were consolidated into one corps and designated as follows:

The First Regiment of Dragoons, as the First Cavalry.
The Second Regiment of Dragoons, as the Second Cavalry.
The Regiment of Mounted Riflemen, as the Third Cavalry.
The First Regiment of Cavalry, as the Fourth Cavalry.
The Second Regiment of Cavalry, as the Fifth Cavalry.
The Third Regiment of Cavalry, as the Sixth Cavalry.

Four regiments of cavalry, the Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, and Tenth, the Ninth and Tenth composed of colored men, were added to the establishment under the authority conferred by the act of July 28, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 332); the Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth were added by section 2, act of February 2, 1901 (31 ibid., 748).

[1] THE REGIMENTAL, SQUADRON, AND BATTALION STAFF.

The staff of a regiment consists of the adjutant, the quartermaster, and the commissary, and they will be so designated respectively. They will be appointed by the regimental commander, who will at once report his action to the Adjutant-General by telegraph; the appointment of the quartermaster and commissary to be made subject to the approval of the Secretary of War. These appointments will not be antedated and will take effect on the day on which actually made. An officer will be entitled to the pay pertaining to his appointment from the date he enters upon duty under it. Squadron and battalion adjutants of cavalry and infantry will be appointed by the regimental commander upon the recommendation of the squadron and battalion commanders.

The adjutant, quartermaster, and commissary may hold office for four years, and the squadron and battalion adjutants and quartermasters for two years and no longer. They will not be eligible for a second tour of such duty, nor for appointment or reappointment to either position, except to serve an unexpired term of four or two years; but the time an adjutant or quartermaster of a regiment may have previously served as such, with the rank of lieutenant, and any period an officer may have served as squadron or battalion adjutant, will not be included in computing the four years for which he may hold the office of a regimental staff officer. Par. 234, A. R. 1895 (Par. 260, A. R. 1901), G. O. No. 16, A. G. O., 1899.

Staff appointments in a regiment are restricted to officers on duty with the regiment and who are not serving at a school of instruction. Should the regimental commander desire to appoint an officer absent from the regiment, he may apply for orders for such officer to join; but the officer must join before the appointment can be made. Par. 262, A. R. 1901, G. O. No. 116, A. G. O., 1899. Medical officers are no longer attached to regiments on the peace establishment.

Band. March 2, 1899, s. 2, v. 30, p. 977.

1424. Each cavalry band shall consist of one chief musician, one principal musician, one drum-major, who shall have the pay and allowances of a first-sergeant, four sergeants, eight corporals, one cook, and eleven privates.[1] Sec. 2, act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 977).

Squadron staff officers' pay. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 2, v. 31, p. 748.

1425. Squadron adjutants shall receive eighteen hundred dollars per annum and the allowances of first lieutenants; squadron quartermasters and commissaries shall receive sixteen hundred dollars per annum and the allowances of second lieutenants.[2] Sec. 2, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 748).

Veterinarians. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 20, v. 31, p. 753. Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 901.

1426. The grade of veterinarian of the second class in cavalry regiments, United States Army, is hereby abolished, and hereafter the two veterinarians authorized for each cavalry regiment and the veterinarians authorized for the Artillery Corps shall receive the pay and allowances of second lieutenants, mounted.[3] Sec. 20, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 753); act of March 2, 1901 (ibid., 901).

Cavalry troop. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 2, v. 31, p. 748. Sec. 1103, R.S.

1427. Each troop of cavalry shall consist of one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster sergeant, six sergeants, six corporals, two cooks, two farriers and blacksmiths, one saddler, one wagoner, two trumpeters, and forty-three privates, the commissioned officers to be assigned from those hereinbefore authorized.[4] Sec. 2, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 748).

Increase. Feb. 2, 1901, s. 2, v. 30, p. 748.

1428. The President, in his discretion, may increase the number of corporals in any troop of cavalry to eight, and the number of privates to seventy-six, but the number of enlisted men authorized for the whole Army shall not at any time be exceeded. Sec. 2, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 748).

[1] At the general reduction of the Army, effected in pursuance of the act of March 2, 1821 (3 Stat. L., 615), the artillery was consolidated into four regiments of nine companies each, one of which, in each regiment, was to be designated and equipped as light artillery. The Ordnance Department was merged in the artillery, a supernumerary captain, for ordnance duty, was added to each regiment, and the President was authorized "to select from the regiments of artillery such officers as may be necessary to perform ordnance duties who, while so detached, shall be subject only to the orders of the War Department." The Ordnance Department was separated from the artillery by the act of May 25, 1832 (4 Stat. L., 605). One company was added to each regiment by the act of July 5, 1838 (5 Stat. L., 256), and two companies by section 18 of the act of March 3, 1847 (9 Stat. L., 184), making twelve companies in all. The act of March 3, 1847, authorized the President to designate an additional company in each regiment to be armed and equipped as light artillery. The fifth regiment was added, as a regiment of light artillery, by order of the President, on May 5, 1861, the organization being confirmed by the act of July 29, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 279). The sixth and seventh regiments were added, and the organization of the first five regiments modified, by the act of March 8, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 261). This section replaces sections 1099–1101, Revised Statutes, the act of March 8, 1898 (30 ibid., 261), and section 3, act of March 2, 1899 (ibid., 977).

Officers on one list.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 5, v. 31, p. 749.

1432. All officers of artillery shall be placed on one list, in respect to promotion, according to seniority in their several grades, and shall be assigned to coast or to field artillery according to their special aptitude for the respective services. Sec. 5, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 749).

Increase; how effected.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 9, v. 31, p. 749.

1433. The increase herein provided for the artillery shall be made as follows: Not less than twenty per centum before July first, nineteen hundred and one, and not less than twenty per centum each succeeding twelve months until the total number provided for shall have been attained. All vacancies created or caused by this act shall be filled by promotion according to seniority in the artillery arm.[2] Second lieutenants of infantry and cavalry may, in the discretion of the President, be transferred to the artillery arm, taking rank therein according to date of commission, and such transfers shall be subject to approval by a board of artillery officers appointed to pass upon the capacity of such officers for artillery service: Provided, That the increase of officers of artillery shall be only in proportion to the increase of men. Sec. 9, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 749).

Details.
Feb. 2, 1901, s. 6, v. 31, p. 749.

L., 755), contained the requirement that "vacancies in the grade of field officers and captain created by this act in the cavalry, artillery, and infantry shall be filled by promotion according to seniority in each branch respectively." For method of filling vacancies created by that enactment in the grades of first and second lieutenant, see paragraphs 1455 and 1456, post.

The First Regiment of infantry was authorized by the act of April 30, 1790 (1 Stat. L., 119), the Second by the act of March 3, 1791 (ibid., 222), the Third and Fourth by the act of May 30, 1796 (ibid., 483), the Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh regiments by the act of June 26, 1812 (2 Stat. L., 764), and the number of regiments of infantry was fixed at seven by the act to reduce and fix the military establishment, approved March 2, 1821. The Eighth Regiment was added by the act of July 5, 1838, and the President was authorized, "whenever he may deem it expedient, to cause not exceeding two of the regiments of infantry to be armed and equipped as regiments of riflemen, and one other of the regiments of infantry to be armed and equipped and to serve as a regiment of light infantry." ized by the act of March 3, 1855 (10 Stat. L., 701). The Eleventh to the Nineteenth regiments, inclusive, were organized by order of the President on May 4, 1861, the organization being confirmed by the act of July 29, 1861 (12 Stat. L., 279). Twenty-five regiments, from the Twentieth to the Forty-fifth, inclusive, were authorized by the act of July 28, 1866, of which four, from the Thirty-eighth to the Forty-first, inclusive, were to be composed of colored men, and four, from the Forty-second to the Forty-fifth, inclusive, were to be composed of men who had been wounded in the line of duty and were to constitute a Veteran Reserve Corps. At the reduction effected in pursuance of section 2 of the act of March 3, 1869 (15 Stat. L., 318), the number of infantry regiments was reduced to twenty-five. In effecting the consolidation required by the act above cited, the designations of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-third regiments were not changed; the Eleventh Regiment was formed, by consolidation, from the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-ninth; the Fourteenth from the Fourteenth and Forty-fifth; the Fifteenth from the Fifteenth and Thirty-fifth; the Sixteenth from the Eleventh and Thirty-fourth; the Seventeenth from the Seventeenth and Forty-fourth; the Eighteenth from the Eighteenth and Twenty-fifth; the Nineteenth from the Nineteenth and Twenty-eighth; the Twenty-first from the Twenty-first and Thirty-second; the Twenty-second from the Twenty-second and Thirty-first; the Twenty-fourth from the Thirty-eighth and Forty-first; the Twenty-fifth from the Thirty-ninth and Fortieth. Five new regiments, from the Twenty-sixth to the Thirtieth, inclusive, were added by section 10, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 750).

The regiments organized prior to the 4th of May, 1861, were composed of ten companies each; those organized by Executive order of that date were each composed of three battalions of eight companies each. The organization prescribed by the act of July 28, 1866, fixed the organization of an infantry regiment at ten companies, of a cavalry regiment at twelve companies, and a regiment of artillery at the same number.

By the act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364), a battalion organization was adopted for the infantry, each regiment being composed of two battalions of four companies each, and of two skeleton, or unmanned companies. Upon a declaration of war by Congress, the President was authorized to organize a third battalion, to be composed of the two skeleton companies and two additional companies. By section 4 of the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 977), the regimental organization of infantry was made to consist of three battalions of four companies each; by section 15 of the same enactment, however, the regimental organization, as it existed on April 1, 1898, was required to be restored by the discharge of supernumerary officers and enlisted men. The artillery regiments were exempted from this reduction.

L., 748), paragraph 1427, ante; as to the artillery arm, see section 6, ibid., paragraphs 1437–1440, ante; as to the infantry company, see section 10, ibid., paragraphs 1450, 1451, ante; as to the engineer company, see section 11, ibid., paragraph 961, ante; for a similar authority to increase the strength of the several organizations in time of war, see the act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 364). Section 36, act of February 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 757), contains the requirement that the "total of the enlisted men of the line of the Army, together with the native force therein authorized, shall not exceed, at any time, one hundred thousand men."

The same. Ibid.

1455. Vacancies existing after the promotions have been made shall be provided for as follows: A sufficient number shall be reserved in the grade of second lieutenant for the next graduating class at the United States Military Academy. Persons not over forty years of age who shall have, at any time, served as volunteers subsequent to April twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, may be ordered before boards of officers for such examination as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, and those who establish their fitness before these examining boards may be appointed to the grades of first or second lieutenant in the Regular Army, taking rank in the respective grades according to seniority as determined by length of prior commissioned service; but no person appointed under the provisions of this section shall be placed above another in the same grade with longer commissioned service, and nothing herein contained shall change the relative rank of officers heretofore commissioned in the Regular Army.[1] Ibid.

The same. Ibid.

1456. Enlisted men of the Regular Army or volunteers may be appointed second lieutenants in the Regular Army to vacancies created by this act, provided that they shall have served one year under the same conditions now authorized by law for enlisted men of the Regular Army. Ibid.

COMPANY COOKS.

Cooks. Mar. 2, 1899, s. 9, v. 30, p. 979.

1457. The cooks authorized by this act shall have the pay and allowances of sergeants of infantry.[2] Sec. 9, act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 979).

[2] This enactment repeals and replaces the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 721), which authorized the enlistment of one cook for each troop, battery, and company in the Regular and Volunteer armies of the United States. The person so enlisted as cook was to "take rank as and be allowed the pay of a corporal of the arm of the service to which he belongs, and whose duties in connection with the preparation and serving of the food of the enlisted men of the company, battery, or troop, and with the supervision and instruction of enlisted men hereby authorized to be detailed to assist him, shall be prescribed in the regulations for the government of the Army."

[1] The Military Academy was established in pursuance of authority conferred by the act of March 16, 1802 (2 Stat. L., 137), which contained a requirement authorizing the President to establish a corps of engineers: "The said corps, when so organized, shall be stationed at West Point, in the State of New York, and shall constitute a military academy. Sections 26 and 27, act of March 16, 1802 (2 Stat. L., 137). The post of West Point ceased to be an engineer station and the control of the Military Academy was transferred from the Chief of Engineers to such officer or officers as the Secretary of War may assign to that duty by the act of July 13, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 92.)

Mar. 16, 1802, c. 9, s. 28, v. 2, p. 137; June 12, 1858, c; 156, s. 1, v. 11, p. 333; Apr. 29, 1812. c. 72, s. 2, v. 2, p, 720; Apr. 14, 1818. c. 61, s. 2, v. 3, p, 426; July 20, 1840. c. 50, s. 3, v. 5, p. 398; July 5, 1838. c. 162, s. 19, v. 5, p. 259; Aug. 8, 1846, c. 96, s. 3, v. 9, p. 71; Aug. 6, 1852, c. 81, v. 10, p. 29. [2] The office of professor of natural and experimental philosophy was established by section 2 of the act of April 29, 1802 (2 Stat. L., 702).

[3] The office of professor of mathematics was established by section 2 of the act of April 29, 1802 (2 Stat. L., 702).

[4] The office of professor of chemistry, mineralogy, and geology was established by section 19 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 Stat. L., 259).

[5] The office of teacher of drawing, first created by Executive order, received statutory recognition in section 2 of the act of April 29, 1802 (2 Stat. L., 720). The office of professor of drawing was established by section 3 of the act of August 8, 1846 (9 Stat. L., 161).

[6] The office of teacher of French, first established by Executive regulation, received statutory recognition in section 2 of the act of April 29, 1802 (2 Stat., L., 702). The office of professor of French was established by section 3 of the act of August 8, 1846 (9 Stat. L., 161). The act of June 20, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 34), contained the requirement that "when a vacancy occurs in the office of professor of the French language or in the office of professor of the Spanish language in the Military Academy, both these offices shall cease, and the remaining one of the two professors shall be professor of modern languages; and thereafter there shall be in the Military Academy one, and only one, professor of modern languages." On June, 30, 1882, a vacancy having occurred in the office of professor of Spanish, the statute became operative and the offices of professor of French and professor of Spanish were merged, by operation of law, in the office of professor of modern languages. The office of professor of Spanish, created by section 2 of the act of February 15, 1857 (11 Stat. L., 161), ceased to exist, by operation of law, on June 30, 1882, having been merged in the office of professor of modern languages in conformity to section 4 of the act of June 20, 1879 (21 Stat. L., 34).

Associate professor of mathematics. Pay and allowances. Longevity pay. Mar. 1, 1893, v. 27, p. 515.

1460. There shall be appointed at the Military Academy from the Army, in addition to the professors authorized by the existing laws, an associate professor of mathematics, who shall receive the pay and allowances of a captain mounted, and when his service as associate professor of mathematics at the Academy exceeds ten years, he shall receive the pay and allowances of major; and hereafter there shall be allowed and paid to the said associate professor of mathematics ten per centum of his current yearly pay for each and every term of five years' service in the Army and at the Academy: Provided, That such addition shall in no case exceed forty per centum of said yearly pay; and said associate professor of mathematics is hereby placed upon the same footing as regards restrictions upon pay and retirement from active service as officers of the Army. Act of March 1, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 515).

Chaplain of the Military Academy. Feb. 18, 1896, v. 29, p. 8.

1461. The duties of chaplain at the Military Academy shall hereafter be performed by a clergyman to be appointed by the President for a term of four years, and the said chaplain shall be eligible for reappointment for an additional term or terms and shall, while so serving, receive the same pay and allowances as are now allowed to a captain mounted.[2] Act of February 18, 1896 (*29 Stat. [1] The acts of June 27, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 319), and June 30, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 125), contain a similar provision.

[2] The office of chaplain was established by the act of April 4, 1818 (3 Stat. L., 426), which authorized the appointment of a chaplain at the Military Academy, who shall also be professor of geography, history, and ethics. By the act of February 18, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 8), the professorship thus authorized was discontinued, the duties of chaplain being performed by the officer whose appointment was authorized by that statute, and the duty of giving instruction in history being transferred by executive regulation to the department of law.

[3] The Military Academy is withdrawn from the control and supervision of department commanders by the terms of paragraph 208, Army Regulations of 1901.

[1] The act of June 30, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 123), contained the requirement that no graduate of the Military Academy should be assigned or detailed to serve as a professor, instructor, or assistant to either, within four years after his graduation.

[2] The office of superintendent was created by section 28 of the act of March 16, 1802, (2 Stat. L., 137), which contained the requirement that "the principal engineer and, in his absence, the next in rank, shall have the superintendence of the Military Academy under the direction of the President of the United States." So much of the act of March 16, 1802, as restricted the appointment to this office to the Corps of Engineers was replaced by section 6 of the act of July 16, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 92), which vested the supervision of the Academy in the War Department, under such office or officers as the Secretary of War may assign to that duty. By the act of January 12, 1858 (11 Stat. L., 333), the local rank of colonel of engineers was conferred upon the superintendent.

The act of June 20, 1840 (5 Stat. L., 398), contained the requirement that the commander of the corps of cadets should be either the instructor of infantry tactics, of cavalry or artillery tactics, or of practical engineering; and his pay and emoluments were in no case to be less than those allowed by law to the professor of mathematics. By the act of June 12, 1858 (11, ibid., 333), the pay of this officer was fixed at that of a lieutenant-colonel.

[3] The post of West Point is one of the military posts of the United States, and the appropriation for the construction of buildings at military posts is applicable to the erection of such quarters as are for the use of the military post at that place and independent of the Military Academy located there. 5 Compt. Thus where, in the Military Academy appropriation act, a certain amount was appropriated for models of guns and carriages, held, that the Secretary of War was authorized to transfer this amount for disbursement to the disbursing officer at Watervliet Arsenal, where the models were to be manufactured, instead of leaving the disbursement to the disbursing officer at West Point. Residents and visitors at the Academy. No person can be entitled, as a matter of right, to enter within the limits of this post unless he be authorized to do so by the laws of the United States, or by some officer having authority under the law to grant permission to enter such limits. The Superintendent of the Academy, as commandant of this post, has a general authority to prevent any person in civil life residing permanently or temporarily at the post, or occasionally resorting to the post, from interrupting its discipline, or obstructing in any way the performance of the duties assigned by law to the officers and cadets. In the exercise of a sound discretion, the commandant of the post may therefore order from it any person not attached to it by law whose presence is, in his judgment, injurious to the interests of the Academy. And in case any person so ordered shall refuse to depart, after reasonable notice and within a reasonable time, having regard to the circumstances of the case, I think the Superintendent may lawfully remove him by force. III Opin. Att. Gen., 268–273. When, however, the United States have leased a dwelling house within the post belonging to them to an individual, they have no greater right than an individual would have in respect to the ejectment of the lessee. Ibid.

No person has the right to enter the limits of the post of West Point, not even to visit the post-office there, unless specially authorized by the laws of the United States or by some officer having authority to grant permission. Ibid.

The Superintendent of the Military Academy is not in general authorized to arrest and confine in the guardhouse a civilian for a mere breach of the police regulations of the post or Academy. His proper remedy is to have the offender removed as soon as practicable, and without unnecessary force, from the reservation. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 520.

[1] The act of April 29, 1812 (2 Stat. L., 702), conferred upon the professor of natural and experimental philosophy the pay and emoluments of a lieutenant-colonel; and that of major upon the professors of engineering and mathematics. The professor of chemistry, mineralogy, and geology was placed upon the same footing, in respect to pay and emoluments, as the professor of mathematics, by section 19 of the act of July 5, 1838 (5 Stat. L., 259). By the act of March 3, 1851 (9 Stat. L., 594), the pay of the professors of engineering, natural and experimental philosophy, mathematics, and chemistry was fixed at $2,000 per annum, and that of the professors of French and drawing at $1,500 per annum, these sums to be "in lieu of pay proper, ordinary rations, forage, and servants." By section 2 of the act of February 16, 1857 (11 Stat. L., 161), the pay of professor of Spanish was fixed at $2,000 per annum, subject to the restrictions contained in the act of March 3, 1851. By section 13 of the act of July 15, 1870 (16 Stat. L., 319), professors whose service exceeded thirty-five years were to receive the pay and allowances of colonels; those whose service had been less than thirty-five years, but exceeded twenty-five years, were to receive the pay and allowances of lieutenant-colonels, and all other professors were to receive the pay and emoluments of major. By the act of February 28, 1873 (17 Stat. L., 479), professors whose service exceeded ten years were to receive the pay and emoluments science of gunnery[1] and of practical engineering[2] shall have the pay and allowances of major; and hereafter there shall be allowed and paid to the said professors ten per centum of their current yearly pay for each and every term of five years' service in the Army and at the Academy: Provided, That such addition shall in no case exceed forty per centum of said yearly pay; and said professors are hereby placed upon the same footing, as regards restrictions upon pay and retirement from active service, as officers of the Army.

Master of the sword.
Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 914.

1472. The master of the sword shall hereafter act as instructor of military gymnastics and physical culture at the Military Academy, and shall have the relative rank and shall be entitled to the pay, allowances, and emoluments of a first lieutenant, mounted: Provided, however, That whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of master of the sword and instructor of military gymnastics and physical culture the said office shall cease and determine, and the duties thereunto pertaining shall thereafter be performed by an officer of the line of the Army to be selected for that purpose by the Secretary of War. *Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. of colonels, and all other professors the pay, etc., of lieutenant-colonels. This statute was amended by section 4 of the act of June 23, 1874 (21 Stat. L., 34), so as to require ten years' service as a professor at the Military Academy as a condition precedent to receiving the pay and allowances of colonel.

The professors of the Military Academy do not belong to the staff of the Army within the meaning of section 1205, Revised Statutes, since they have no military rank or grade. The fact that they are authorized by the President to wear the uniform of the rank as of which they are paid does not invest them with such rank. This can be given them by Congress alone. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 615, par. 2.

A captain of cavalry does not vacate his office as such by the acceptance of that of professor of the Military Academy, there being no incompatibility in the functions of the two offices. Ibid., par. 3.

The professors of the Military Academy at West Point are commissioned officers of the Army, whose pay and allowances are assimilated to those of a lieutenant-colonel and a colonel; and in case of such disability as is described in section 4693, Revised Statutes, they are entitled to pensions at the same rate with officers of the rank of lieutenant-colonel. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 359.

[1] The office of instructor of ordnance and gunnery was established by the Secretary of War, on the recommendation of the academic board, on December 31, 1856; the duties of the former instructor of artillery, which were not connected with instruction in the drill regulations of the arm, being transferred to the office thus established. By the act of June 12, 1858 (11 Stat. L., 333), the duty of instruction in the drill regulations was vested in the commandant of cadets and the assistant instructors authorized by that enactment. An officer of ordnance was assigned to duty as instructor of ordnance and gunnery by Special Orders, No. 31, H. Q. U. S. Military Academy on February 27, 1857.

[2] The office of instructor of practical military engineering was established by section 2 of the act of July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. L., 397); upon the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, dated April 24, 1844, an officer of engineers was appointed to the office.

1477. The adjutant of the Military Academy shall have the pay of an adjutant of a cavalry regiment.

Quartermaster and commissary of cadets.

Supplies at cost.

Aug. 7, 1876, v. 19, p. 126.

[1] Assistant professors at the Military Academy are entitled to the quarters of captains. IX Opin. Att. Gen., 284. The distinction contended for at the Military Academy between academic and military rank is not allowable in the choice of quarters. 5 ibid., 627.

[2] Section 2 of the act of July 20, 1840 (5 Stat. L., 398), contained the requirement that the pay and emoluments of instructors in cavalry, artillery, and infantry tactics should not be less than was allowed by law (captain mounted) to the assistant professor of mathematics. This statute was replaced by the act of June 12, 1858 (11 Stat. L., 333), which conferred the pay of captain mounted upon the senior assistant instructor in each of the arms of service.

The annual acts of appropriation for the support of the Military Academy, since that of February 10, 1897 29 (Stat. L., 518), have contained a provision for the pay of a senior instructor in the Department of Ordnance and Gunnery. Those since March 5, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 254), have contained a similar provision in respect to the pay of the senior assistant in the Department of Practical Military Engineering.

[3] The annual acts of appropriation from that of February 18, 1871 (16 Stat. L., 414), to that of July 26, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 156), contained a provision authorizing the payment of $1,000 per annum for compensation of the librarian's assistant. In the acts of February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 631), and March 6, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 49), the compensation of the librarian's assistant was fixed at $1,200 per annum.

[4] The annual appropriation acts, since that of March 31, 1884, have contained a provision for extra pay for the quartermaster and commissary of cadets at the rate of $700 per annum, in addition to his pay as a captain of infantry. The act of June 30, 1892 (22 Stat. L., 123), authorizes the Secretary of War to detail a commissary sergeant to act as assistant to the commissary of cadets.

They shall be appointed by the President, and shall, with the exception of the thirty cadets appointed from the United States at large, be actual residents of the Congressional or Territorial districts, or of the District of Columbia, or of the States, respectively, from which they purport to be appointed.[1] *Sec. 4, act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. ---

[1] The first authorization of the employment of cadets in the military service will be found in the act of May 9, 1794 (1 Stat. L., 366), for raising a corps of artillerists and engineers; the new organization was to be formed by the consolidation of the existing corps of artillery with the additional force therein authorized, and was to consist of four companies, to each of which two cadets were to be attached, with the pay, rations, and clothing of sergeants of artillery. An additional regiment of artillerists and engineers was established by the act of April 27, 1798 (ibid., 552), with the same organization as the regiment already in service; by section 3 of the act of March 3, 1799 (ibid., 750), the pay of cadets was fixed at ten dollars per month, with two rations per day or their equivalent in money; by this enactment ten cadets were allowed for each regiment of cavalry and infantry and thirty-two for each regiment of artillery.

The act to fix the military peace establishment, approved on March 16, 1802 (2 ibid., 132), provided for one regiment of artillerists and engineers; it was to consist of twenty companies, to each of which two cadets were attached. By section 26 of this enactment authority was conferred upon the President to establish a corps of engineers, to which ten cadets were to be attached, and the monthly pay of the cadets was fixed at sixteen dollars and one ration per day; by section 27, the corps of engineers, when organized, was to be stationed at West Point and was to constitute the Military Academy. The acts of April 12, 1808 (2 ibid., 481), and June 11, 1812 (ibid., 671), authorized additions to the military establishment; by the former, 156 cadets were provided for, and by the latter, 64; in neither case, however, was the authorized establishment completed, nor does any considerable number of cadets seem to have been attached to the Military Academy, as is indicated by a report of the superintendent of January 5, 1810, at which date forty-seven cadets were undergoing instruction at the academy. An act making further provision for the Corps of Engineers, approved April 29, 1812 (ibid., 720), fixed the number of cadets in all arms of the service at 250, and authorized the President, in his discretion, to attach them, as students, to the Military Academy. The present apportionment by representative districts was established by section 2 of the act of March 1, 1843 5 (ibid., 604), which required cadets to be selected from the Congressional districts of the States or Territories from which the appointments purported to have been made. By this enactment authority was conferred upon the President to appoint ten cadets at

Cadets shall be appointed one year in advance of the time of their admission to the Academy, except in cases where, by reason of death or other cause, a vacancy occurs which can not be provided for by such appointment in advance; but no pay or other allowance shall be given to any appointee until he shall have been regularly admitted, as herein provided; and all appointments shall be conditional, until such provisions shall have been complied with.[1]

Appointees shall be admitted to the Academy only between the ages of seventeen and twenty-two years, except in the following case: Any person who has served honorably and faithfully not less than one year, in either the volunteer or regular service of the United States, in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, and who possesses large without being restricted to selection from Congressional districts. The act of March 3, 1875 (18 ibid., 467), authorized the President "to fill any vacancy occurring at said academy by reason of death or other cause of any person appointed by him;" but this clause was expressly repealed by section 4 of the act of June 11, 1878 (20 ibid., 111), which restricted the number of appointments at large to ten in all. The acts of March 1, 1843, and section 10 of the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. L., 979), which authorized the appointment of twenty cadets at large, were replaced by section 4 of the act of June 6, 1900 (31 ibid., 656), which fixed the number of cadets at one from each Congressional district, one from the District of Columbia, two from each State at large, and thirty from the United States at large.

[1] Appointments—How made.—Each Congressional district and Territory, also the District of Columbia, is entitled to have one cadet at the Academy. Two cadets at large from each State, and thirty from the United States at large are also appointed. The appointments (except those at large) are made by the Secretary of War, at the request of the Representative or Delegate in Congress from the district or Territory; and the person appointed must be an actual resident of the district or Territory from which the appointment is made. Those for a State at large are made, each upon the request of a Senator from the State so entitled. The appointments at large are specially conferred by the President of the United States.

Manner of making applications.—Applications can be made at any time by letter to the Secretary of War, to have the name of the applicant placed upon the register that it may be furnished to the proper Representative or Delegate when a vacancy occurs. The application must exhibit the full name, date of birth, and permanent abode of the applicant, with the number of the Congressional district in which his residence is situated.

Date of appointments.—Appointments are required by law to be made one year in advance of the date of admission, except in cases where, by reason of death or other cause, a vacancy occurs which can not be provided for by such appointment in advance. These vacancies are filled in time for the next annual examination.

Alternates.—The Representative or Delegate in Congress may nominate a legally qualified second candidate, to be designated the alternate. The alternate will receive from the War Department a letter of appointment, and will be examined with the regular appointee, and if duly qualified will be admitted to the Academy in the event of the failure of the principal to pass the prescribed preliminary examinations. The alternate will not be allowed to defer his reporting at West Point until the result of the examination of the regular appointee is known, but must report at the time designated in his letter of appointment. The alternate, like the nominee, should be designated as nearly one year in advance of date of admission as possible.

There being no provision whatever for the payment of the traveling expenses of either accepted or rejected candidates for admission, no candidate should fail to provide himself in advance with the means of returning to his home in case of his rejection before either of the examining boards, as he may otherwise be put to considerable trouble, inconvenience, and even suffering on account of his destitute condition. If admitted, the money brought by him to meet such a contingency can be deposited with the treasurer on account of his equipment as a cadet or returned to his friends.

[1] It being impossible for a candidate to conform to the conditions of this statute, it is now obsolete and no longer operative.

[2] For regulations prepared in accordance with the foregoing enactment see THE MILITARY ACADEMY REGULATIONS. Circulars containing the same information respecting the physical and mental examinations for admission are furnished candidates and others interested upon applications addressed to the Adjutant of the Military Academy at West Point, New York, or to the Adjutant-General of the Army in Washington.

[3] This enactment replaces the requirements of section 1319, Revised Statutes, act of June 16, 1866 (14 Stat. L., 359), in pari materia, which required candidates to "be well versed in reading, writing, and arithmetic, and to have a knowledge of the elements of English grammar, of descriptive geography, particularly that of the United States, and of the history of the United States."

[4] The pay of cadets was fixed by the act of March 16, 1802, 2 Stat. L., 137, at sixteen dollars per month and two rations per day. By the act of March 3, 1857, 11 Stat. L., 252, their pay was fixed at thirty-two dollars per month. Section 3 of the act of April 1, 1864, 13 Stat. L., 39, contained the requirement that the cadets at the Military Academy should receive the same pay (five hundred dollars per annum) as the midshipmen at the Naval Academy; section 2 of the act of February 28, 1867, 14 Stat. L., 416, contained the requirement that they should also be entitled to the ration (one hundred and nine dollars and fifty cents annual commutation value) then allowed to active midshipmen. This fixed the pay and emoluments of a cadet

GRADUATION AND APPOINTMENT.

1486. That when any cadet of the United States Military Academy has gone through all its classes and received a regular diploma from the academic staff, he may be promoted and commissioned as a second lieutenant in any arm or corps of the Army in which there may be a vacancy and the duties of which he may have been judged competent to perform; and in case there shall not at the time be a vacancy in such arm or corps, he may, at the discretion of the President, be promoted and commissioned in it as an additional second lieutenant, with the usual pay and allowances of a second lieutenant, until a vacancy shall happen.[1] Act of May 17, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 50).

at $609.50 per annum. The act of June 30, 1882, 27 Stat. L., 515, contained the requirement that no cadet should thereafter "receive more than at the rate of five hundred and forty dollars a year."

Four dollars a month shall be deposited with the Treasurer from the pay of each cadet, to be applied, at the time of his promotion, to the purchase of a uniform and equipments. Par. 117, Reg. U. S. M. A., 1894.

A person appointed to a position in the Army, either as a cadet or an officer, becomes a cadet or officer de facto when he accepts the appointment; but, in view of the act of July 2, 1862, 12 Stat. L., 502, his pay can not commence until he takes the oath of office. When a candidate passes the examinations and enters upon the duties of a cadet, he thereby accepts his appointment, and his service in the Army begins for all purposes of longevity, but his pay can not commence until he takes the oath of office required by law. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., par. 884. The requirements of section 1310 of the Revised Statutes that "no person who has served in any capacity in the military or naval service of the so-called Confederate States, or of either of the States in insurrection during the late rebellion shall be appointed a cadet," were repealed by the act of March 31, 1896, 29 Stat. L., 84.

L., 150, "That hereafter all vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant shall be filled by appointment from the graduates of the Military Academy so long as any such remain in service unassigned; and any vacancies thereafter remaining shall be filled by promotion of meritorious noncommissioned officers of the Army, recommended under the provisions of the next section of this act: Provided, That all vacancies remaining, after exhausting the two classes named, may be filled by appointment of persons in civil life," was repealed by section 5 of the act of July 30, 1892, 27 Stat. L., 336. See the chapter entitled COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

[1] Where a cadet was, by order of the Secretary of War, on the recommendation of the academic board, discharged from the Military Academy for deficiency in studies; Held, (1) that the order of discharge, having been completely executed, is beyond the power of revocation; (2) that section 1325, Revised Statutes, prohibits the returning or reappointing of the cadet to the Academy, except upon the recommendation of the academic board; (3) that Congress may thus limit or restrict the authority of the President to appoint cadets; (4) that accordingly it is not competent for the President to revoke the said order or to restore the cadet to the Academy, irrespective of the recommendation of the academic board. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 67.

A cadet applied to have his name changed on the register of the Military Academy; Held, that the Secretary of War would not be empowered to change the name as such, though he might make a new contract with the cadet in the new name. But advised, as the preferable mode of proceeding, that the cadet first procure the name to be changed in the mode prescribed by the statutes of his own State, after which the register would of course be made to correspond. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 657.

[2] These courts have the same composition as the general courts-martial authorized to be convened by the seventy-second and seventy-third articles of war.

Professors of the Military Academy are "commissioned officers of the Army." Decision of the Secretary of War, May 27, 1857. But they are not commissioned officers within the meaning of the seventy-fifth article of war, and therefore can not be detailed as members of courts-martial. Scott's Digest, paragraph 169, note 16. The President may, by his regulations of the civil police of the Academy, invest them with authority adequate to all the purposes of their professorships; but he can invest them with no portion of judicial power to affect the life or liberty of others. I Opin. Att. Gen., 469; see also last clause of paragraph 1463, ante.

The undergraduate cadets are not commissioned officers, and are, therefore, not competent to sit on a court-martial, and are triable by a regimental or garrison court-martial. VII Opin. Att. Gen., 323. In their internal academic organization as officers, noncommissioned officers, and privates they are not subject to the Articles of War as respects their relation to one another, but only as respects their relation to commissioned officers of the Army, on duty as such at the Academy. the Academy, (a) as "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline." Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 654.

They are not the "noncommissioned officers" of the acts of Congress and the General Regulations of the Army, which expression means "sergeants and corporals," and is inapplicable to the cadets. Ibid. They are inchoate officers of the Army, and subject to no discipline incompatible with that character. Ibid.

Where a cadet at West Point is sentenced by a court-martial to be dismissed the service, and the President commutes the sentence to suspension for a fixed period, it will not be inferred that his purpose was to deprive him of pay unless it is expressly so stated or is clearly established that such was his purpose. Conrad v. U. S., 32 Ct. Cls., 139. Where the President commutes the sentence of one cadet to suspension and of another to suspension without pay it is conclusive that he did not intend the former sentence to extend to loss of pay. Ibid.

The Superintendent of the Military Academy can have no power, by virtue of a regulation of the Academy, to try and punish a cadet for a military offense for which, under the Articles of War, he is amenable to trial by court-martial. A regulation assuming to confer upon him such power would be in contravention of law and inoperative. Otherwise of a regulation which merely authorized a measure of school discipline. So, where a cadet, on arraignment for a military offense, pleaded in bar that he had already for the same offense been punished by reduction from cadet officer to cadet private, under par. 107, Academy Regulations, held that, regarding such reduction as a form of discipline only, the plea was properly overruled by the court. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 656.

[1] This enactment replaces the penalty imposed by the act of March 31, 1854 (23 Stat. L., 7). Under the authority conferred by this statute regulations have been prepared by the Superintendent and promulgated with the approval of the Secretary of War. See paragraphs 125, 136, 137, and 140, Regulations for U. S. Military Academy.

In a case arising at the Naval Academy, under the act of June 23, 1874, it was held by the Attorney-General (XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 292) that the offense of hazing, not being an offense at the common law, and not being defined by statute, the definition of the offense must be gleaned from the rules and regulations of the Naval Academy that were in force at the date of the passage of the act in question. It was also held "that, to constitute the offense of hazing under the statute, it is essential that the victim of the maltreatment should be a new cadet of the fourth class."

Where a cadet entered the Naval Academy and became a member of the fourth class in 1885, and also remained a member of the same class in 1886, he is at the latter period as much an "older cadet" within the definition of the offense of "hazing" as a cadet who, having entered the Academy at the same time (1885), has since been advanced to a higher class, and (equally with the latter) is capable of committing that offense. a ACADEMIC REGULATIONS.

The regulations of the Military Academy may be altered by the Secretary of War with the approbation of the President. I Opin. Att. Gen., 469.

b In this connection may be noted the opinion of the Solicitor-General (XV Opins., 634), that, except for the offense of hazing, specially made punishable by the act of June 23, 1874, cadets of the Naval Academy are not subject to trial by court-martial.

THE BOARD OF VISITORS.

Par.
1497. Appointment.
1498. Duties.
Par.
1499. Compensation.
1500. The same, mileage, per diem.

Board of visitors.
Aug. 8, 1848, c. 96, s. 2, v. 9, p. 71; Mar. 16, 1868, c. 30, s. 1, v. 15, p. 42; Feb. 21, 1870, c. 18, v. 16, p. 67.
Sec. 1327, R.S.

1497. There shall be appointed every year, in the following manner, a board of visitors, to attend the annual examination of the Academy: Seven persons shall be appointed by the President, and two Senators and three members of the House of Representatives shall be designated as visitors, by the Vice-President, or President pro tempore of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, respectively, at the session of Congress next preceding such examination.

Duties of visitors.
Aug. 8, 1848, c. 96, s. 2, v. 9, p. 71; Feb. 21, 1870, c. 18, v. 16, p. 67.
Sec. 1328, R.S.

1498. It shall be the duty of the board of visitors to inquire into the actual state of the discipline, instruction, police administration, fiscal affairs, and other concerns of the Academy. The visitors appointed by the President shall report thereon to the Secretary of War, for the information of Congress, at the commencement of the session next succeeding such examination, and the Senators and Representatives designated as visitors shall report to Congress, within twenty days after the meeting of the session next succeeding the time of their appointment, their action as such visitors, with their views and recommendations concerning the Academy.

Compensation.
Aug. 8, 1848, c. 96, s. 2, v. 9, p. 71; Feb. 21, 1870, c. 18, v. 16, p. 67; Mar. 3, 1877, c. 109, v. 19, p. 382.
Sec. 1329, R.S.

1499. No compensation shall be made to the members of said board beyond the payment of their expenses[1] for board and lodging while at the Academy, and an allowance, not exceeding eight cents a mile, for traveling by the shortest mail-route from their respective homes to the Academy, and thence to their homes.[2]

Compensation.
June 11, 1878, v. 20, p. 110.

1500. Hereafter the expenses allowed by section thirteen hundred and twenty-nine of the Revised Statutes shall be paid as follows: Each member of the board of visitors shall receive not exceeding eight cents per mile for each mile traveled by the most direct route from his residence to West Point and return, and shall in addition receive five dollars per day for expenses during each day of his service at West Point.[2] Act of June 11, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 110).

[1] The amount payable under this paragraph for expenses is, by the act of June 11, 1878, par. 1500, post, limited to $5 per day.

[2] Under section 1339 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the acts of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 382), and June 11, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 110), the mileage of the board of visitors must be computed by "the most direct route" from their respective homes to West Point and return, and not by the "shortest mail route." 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., par. 830.

Sec. 1330, R.S.

1501. Leave of absence may be granted by the Superintendent, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War, to the professors, assistant professors, instructors, and other officers of the Academy, for the entire period of the suspension of the ordinary academic studies, without deduction from pay or allowances.

Congressional documents to library.
Apr. 23, 1856, c. 19, s. 3, v. 11, p. 5.
Sec. 1332, R.S.

1502. The Secretary of the Senate shall furnish annually to the library of the Academy one copy of each document published, during the preceding year, by the Senate.

Government publications.
Sec. 98, Jan. 12, 1895, v. 28, p. 624.

1503. The libraries of the eight Executive Departments, of the United States Military Academy, and United States Naval Academy are hereby constituted designated depositories of Government publications, and the superintendent of documents shall supply one copy of said publications, in the same form as supplied to other depositories, to each of said libraries. Sec. 98, act of January 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 624).

Purchases for library.
Mar. 6, 1896, v. 29, p. 52.

1504. For increase and expense of the library, namely: For periodicals, stationery, binding books, and scientific, historical, biographical, and general literature, to be purchased in open market on the written order of the Superintendent, [two thousand dollars].[1] Act of March 6, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 52).

Purchases of scientific and technical supplies.
Mar. 6, 1896, v. 29, p. 52.

1505. That all technical and scientific supplies for the departments of instruction of the Military Academy shall be purchased by contract or otherwise, as the Secretary of War may deem best.[1] Act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 645).

[1] The annual acts of appropriation since that of May 1, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 112) have contained this provision.

An appropriation for a library is a specific appropriation for books and other publications necessary or appropriate therefor. (VI Compt. Dec., 736.)

CLERKS AND EMPLOYEES.

The employment of clerical and other services is regulated by the annual acts of appropriation. That of February 27, 1891, contains provision—

For pay of the master of the sword, one thousand five hundred dollars; (a)

For pay of one teacher of music, one thousand and eighty dollars; (a)

For clerk to the disbursing officer and quartermaster, one thousand five hundred dollars;

---

[a] This salary is fixed by law. See paragraph 1472, ante.

CONTINGENT FUNDS.

1506. For contingencies for Superintendent of the Academy, one thousand dollars.[1] Act of March 6, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 49).

Contingencies of Superintendent.
Mar. 6, 1896, v. 29, p. 49.

1507. All funds arising from the rent of the hotel on Academy grounds, and other incidental sources, from and after this date be, and are hereby, made a special contingent fund, to be expended under the supervision of the Superintendent of the Academy, and that he be required to account for the same, annually, accompanied by proper Contingent fund.

May 1, 1888, v. 25, p. 112; Mar. 21, 1893, v. 27, p. 520.

For clerk to adjutant in charge of cadet records, one thousand five hundred dollars;
For one clerk to the adjutant, one thousand two hundred dollars;
For clerk to treasurer, one thousand five hundred dollars;
For one clerk to the quartermaster, one thousand two hundred dollars;
For pay of librarian's assistant, one thousand five hundred dollars;
For pay of one superintendent of gas works, one thousand five hundred dollars;
For pay of engineer of heating and ventilating apparatus for the academic building, the cadet barracks and office building, cadet hospital, chapel, and philosophical building, including the library, one thousand five hundred dollars;
For pay of assistant engineer of same, one thousand dollars;
For pay of eight firemen, four thousand eight hundred dollars;
For pay of one draftsman in department of civil and military engineering, one thousand dollars;
For pay of mechanic employed in chemical and geological section rooms and in lecture rooms, one thousand dollars;
For pay of mechanic assistant in department of natural and experimental philosophy, one thousand dollars;
For pay of custodian of new Academy building, one thousand dollars;
For pay of one electrician, nine hundred dollars;
For pay of one civilian plumber, one thousand two hundred dollars;
For pay of one assistant plumber, six hundred dollars;
For pay of one scavenger, at sixty dollars a month, seven hundred and twenty dollars;
For compensation of chapel organist, two hundred dollars;
For pay of keeper of post cemetery, seven hundred and twenty dollars;
For pay of engineer and janitor for Memorial Hall, nine hundred dollars;
For pay of printer at Headquarters U. S. Military Academy, one thousand two hundred dollars;
In all, for civilians employed at the Military Academy, thirty thousand five hundred and twenty dollars.

[1] Any appropriation for contingencies for the Superintendent of the Military Academy is available for such casual expenses as are necessary, or at least appropriate and convenient, in order to the performance of the duties required by law of the Superintendent. * * * The certificate of the Superintendent, as to the correctness and justness of expenditures from the appropriation for contingencies for said Superintendent may be accepted in the adjustment and settlement of Military Academy accounts. (3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., par. 828.) This provision has been repeated in the annual appropriation acts from that of February 2, 1869, to that of March 6, 1886, with the exception of those from August 7, 1876, to January 27, 1881.

All accounts for the expenditure of public moneys should be itemized so far as practicable, and a discretion given to the officer having control of an appropriation does not dispense with this requirement. Expenditures for contingencies of the Superintendent of the Naval Academy, appropriated by the act of March 3, 1897 (29 Stat. L., 662), should be made by the Superintendent, under the general direction of the Secretary of the Navy. (IV Compt. Dec., 159.)

An appropriation for contingencies for the Superintendent of the Military Academy is an appropriation for purposes of a contingent character—that is, such as might or might not happen, and which Congress could not easily foresee, and therefore could not provide for definitely. (III Dig. Dec. 2 Compt., par. 827.)

vouchers to the Secretary of War. Act of May 1, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 112). Provided, That all proceeds of the sale of gas shall be paid into the post fund. Act of March 1, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 520).

THE MILITARY ACADEMY BAND.

Organization, pay, etc. Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 912.

1508. The Military Academy Band shall hereafter consist of one teacher of music, who shall be the leader of the band, and of forty enlisted musicians. The teacher of music shall receive the pay of a second lieutenant, not mounted; and of the enlisted musicians of the band, twelve shall each receive thirty-four dollars per month, twelve shall each receive twenty-five dollars per month, and the remaining sixteen shall each receive seventeen dollars per month, and each of the aforesaid enlisted men shall also be entitled to the clothing, fuel, rations, and other allowances of musicians of cavalry; and the said teacher of music and the enlisted musicians of the band shall be entitled to the same benefits in respect to pay, emoluments, and retirement arising from longevity, reenlistment, and length of service as are, or may hereafter become, applicable to other enlisted men of the Army.[1] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 912).

GENERAL ARMY SERVICE MEN, QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

Par.
1509. Organization.
1510. Restriction on strength.
Par.
1511. Pay of certain enlisted men.

General Army Service men, etc. June 20, 1890, v. 26, p. 167.

1509. The enlisted men known as the artillery detachment at West Point shall be mustered out of the service as artillery men and immediately reenlisted as Army Service men in the Quartermaster's Department, continuing to perform the same duties and to have the same pay, allowances, rights, and privileges, and subject to the rules, regulations, and laws in the same manner as if their service had been continuous in the artillery, and their said service shall be considered and declared to be continuous in the Army.[2] Act of June 20, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 167).

---

[1] This enactment replaces sections 1111 and 1278, Revised Statutes, and the act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. L., 380), in pari materia.

[2] The act of June 20, 1890 (26 Stat. L. 167), which changed the name of the artillery detachment at West Point to "Army Service men in the Quartermaster's Department," contemplated only a change of name of the corps, without affecting their duties, pay, or allowances, including extra duty and extra pay therefor. (IV Compt. Dec., 353.) The act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 647), makes provision for the pay of an artillery detachment of forty enlisted men.

1510. The detachments of enlisted men at the Military Academy, heretofore designated as the General Army Service, Quartermaster's Department, and the cavalry detachment, shall be fixed at such numbers, not exceeding two hundred and fifteen enlisted men in both detachments, as in the opinion of the Secretary of War the necessities of the public service may from time to time require; but the number of enlisted men of the Army shall not be increased on account of this proviso or the two preceding paragraphs of this act.[1] Act of February 10, 1897 (29 Stat. L., 519).

Limit of strength.
Feb. 10, 1897, v. 29, p. 519.

1511. The noncommissioned officer in charge of mechanics and other labor at the Military Academy, the soldier acting as clerk in the adjutant's office, and the four enlisted men in the philosophical and chemical departments and lithographic office, shall receive fifty dollars a year additional pay.[2]

Pay of certain enlisted men.

THE CULLUM MEMORIAL HALL.

1512. The Memorial Hall to be erected under the provisions of this act shall be a receptacle of statues, busts, mural tablets, and portraits of distinguished and deceased officers and graduates of the Military Academy, of paintings of battle scenes, trophies of war, and such other objects as may tend to give elevation to the military profession; and to prevent the introduction of unworthy subjects into this hall the selection of each shall be made by not less than two-thirds of the members of the entire academic board of the United States Military Academy, the vote being taken by ayes and nays and to be so recorded. Sec. 6, act of July 23, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 262).

Purpose of the Memorial Hall.

[1] The act of April 26, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 365), which provides that in time of war no additional compensation shall be allowed to soldiers performing what is known as "extra or special duty," applies to enlisted men at the Military Academy. 4 Dec. Compt., 616.

The act of July 26, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 155), conferred authority upon the Secretary of War to increase the strength of this detachment to one hundred and fifty men. The act of March 6, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 48), fixes the strength of the cavalry detachment as follows: One first sergeant, five sergeants, four corporals, two farriers, one saddler, one wagoner, and fifty-two privates. The authorized strength of these detachments is now 215 enlisted men.

[2] The act of March 6, 1896 (29 Stat. L., 48), contains an appropriation for the payment of extra-duty pay to seventeen enlisted men with the proviso that none of the money so appropriated shall be paid to any enlisted man who receives extra-duty pay under existing laws or Army Regulations. The acts of June 20, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 167), March 2, 1891 (26 Stat. L., 820), July 14, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 171), March 1, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 520), July 26, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 155), and January 16, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 631), contain similar restrictions.

BUILDINGS FOR RELIGIOUS WORSHIP.

Buildings for religious worship.
July 8, 1898, v. 30, p. 722.

1513. The Secretary of War, in his discretion, may authorize the erection of a building for religious worship by any denomination, sect, or religion on the West Point Military Reservation: Provided, That the erection of such building will not interfere with the uses of said reservation for military purposes. Said building shall be erected without any expense whatever to the Government of the United States, and shall be removed from the reservation, or its location changed by the denomination, sect, or religious body erecting the same whenever, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, public or military necessity shall require it, and without compensation for such building or any other expense whatever to the Government. Act of July 8, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 722).

[1] The Artillery School was established at Fortress Monroe, Va., in pursuance of General Orders, No. 18, Adjutant-General's Office, of April 5, 1824. It ceased to exist, in 1835, by reason of the transfer of the troops composing the school to other duties. It was reestablished by General Orders, No. 9, Adjutant-General's Office, of October 30, 1856. A code of regulations and plan of instruction was approved by the Secretary of War and published to the Army in General Orders, No. 5, Adjutant-General's Office, of May 18, 1858. The school was again discontinued at the outbreak of the war of the rebellion in 1861. It was again organized on its present foundation by General Orders, No. 99, Adjutant-General's Office, of November 13, 1867. Although not created by statute, its existence has been recognized and the courses of study pursued have been sanctioned by Congress in several acts of appropriation. See acts of June 20, 1878, 20 Stat. L., 223; March 3, 1879, ibid., 389; March 3, 1881, 21 Stat. L., 445; August 7, 1882, 22 Stat. L., 320; March 3, 1883, ibid., 618; July 7, 1884, 23 Stat. THE UNITED STATES INFANTRY AND CAVALRY SCHOOL[3] AT FORT LEAVENWORTH, KANS.

Designation and purpose. May 26, 1900, v. 31, p. 205.

1518. To provide means for the theoretical and practical instruction at * * * the Infantry and Cavalry School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; * * * by the purchase of text-books, books of reference, scientific and professional papers, and for all other absolutely necessary expenses, to be allotted in such proportions as may, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, be for the best interest of the military service, eight thousand dollars. Act of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 205).

[1] The act of August 1, 1894 (28 Stat. L., 212), had contained the requirement that "the owners of hotels and other nonmilitary buildings now at Fort Monroe, Virginia, shall bear one-half of the expense of constructing said sewer," and the Secretary of War was authorized to "equitably and justly apportion among, assess against, and collect from the said owners and expend in construction of said sewer the moiety of the estimated cost thereof."

[2] Regulations for the apportionment and collection of assessments under this statute have been prepared and promulgated by the Secretary of War. Under the provision in the act of June 11, 1896 (29 Stat.L., 414), making an appropriation for a post-office building at Fortress Monroe, "that the building shall be erected upon plans, specifications, etc., to be approved by the Secretary of War," the building was placed, for the purpose of erection, under the control of the War Department, but upon the completion of the building it will pass by operation of law into the custody of the Treasury Department. (IV Compt. Dec., 521.)

[3] The Infantry and Cavalry School was established at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in pursuance of General Orders, No. 42, Adjutant-General's Office, of May 7, 1881. Although not created by statute, its existence has been recognized by Congress in several acts of appropriation. See acts of March 2, 1889, 25 Stat. L., 966; August 30, 1890, 26 Stat. L., 462; March 3, 1891, ibid., 979; August 5, 1892, 27 Stat. L., 379; March 3, 1893, ibid., 601; August 18, 1894, 28 Stat. L., 400; March 2, 1895, ibid., 951; and June 11, 1896, 29 Stat. THE CAVALRY AND LIGHT ARTILLERY SCHOOL[1] AT FORT RILEY, KANS.

Jan. 29, 1887, v. 24, p. 372.

1519. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to establish upon the military reservation at Fort Riley, a permanent school of instruction for drill and practice for the cavalry and light artillery service of the Army of the United States, and which shall be the depot to which all recruits for such service shall be sent; and for the purpose of construction of such quarters, barracks, and stables as may be required to carry into effect the purposes of this act the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Act of January 29, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 372).

Contracts for the military service to be made under direction of Secretary of War.
July 16, 1798, c. 85, s. 3, v. 1, p. 610; Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, v. 19, p. 249.
Sec. 3714, R.S.

1520. All purchases and contracts for supplies or services for the military and naval service shall be made by or under the direction of the chief officers of the Departments of War and of the Navy, respectively.[2] And all agents or contractors for supplies or service as aforesaid shall render their accounts for settlement to the accountant of the proper department for which such supplies or services are required, subject, nevertheless, to the inspection and revision of the officers of the Treasury in the manner before prescribed.[1]

[1] The United States in its political capacity may, within the sphere of the constitutional powers confided to it, and through the instrumentality of the departments to which those powers are intrusted, enter into contracts not prohibited by law and appropriate to the just exercise of these powers; no legislative authorization is required, such power being incident to the general right of sovereignty. Cls., 43; Allen v. U. S., ibid., 91.

[2] Under this statute the Secretary of War is the source of all authority to make contracts or purchases in all branches of the military establishment. "Whether he makes the contracts himself, or confers the authority upon others, it is his duty to see that they are properly and faithfully executed; and if he becomes satisfied that contracts which he has made himself are being fraudulently executed, or those made by others were made in disregard of the rights of the Government, or with the intent to defraud it, or are being unfaithfully executed, it is his duty to interpose, arrest

1521. No contract or purchase on behalf of the United States shall be made, unless the same is authorized by law or is under an appropriation adequate to its fulfillment, except in the War and Navy Departments, for clothing, subsistence, forage, fuel, quarters, or transportation, which, however, shall not exceed the necessities of the current year.[2]

the execution, and adopt effectual measures to protect the Government against the dishonesty of subordinates." U. S. v. Adams, 7 Wall., 463, 477; Parish v. U. S., 8 Wall., 489.

The head of an Executive Department may, when not prejudicial to the interests of the Government, or for its benefit, alter or modify the terms of a contract made under his direction, but his subordinates may not take such action without express authority from him. 2 Compt. Dec., 182.

The laws governing the purchase of supplies for the Army are equally applicable whether the purchases are made from funds received from the sale of stores or from the regular appropriations available therefor. 3 Dig. 2 Compt. Dec., 287.

It is only an express contract which (in the absence of special authority from Congress) can legally be entered into by the Secretary of War, or a military officer, or can be recognized and acted upon as binding upon the United States. Claims against the United States arising upon alleged implied contract can not be entertained, but the claimants must be referred to the Court of Claims or Congress. Further, the contract, to be legally made or recognized as legal, must be in writing (a) (except only—according to the ruling in Cobb's Case (b) when entered into without previous advertisement by reason of the existence of a "public exigency;" see infra). So, in a case where the only evidence of an alleged contract of lease consisted of vouchers, setting forth accounts for rent claimed, approved by an assistant quartermaster, held, that there was no sufficient evidence of an express or written contract upon which payment could be authorized by the Secretary of War. (c) Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 275, par. 1.

The Secretary of War has authority to extend the time for the execution of a contract made on behalf of his Department when the interests of the Government are not thereby prejudiced, and particularly when its noncompletion within the time limited is not due to the negligence of the contractor. 2 Compt. Dec., 242; Solomon v. U. S., 19 Wall., 17; U. S. v. Corliss Steam Engine Co., 91 U. S., 321; XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 101; 2 Compt. Dec., 635.

Approval of contract by superior authority.—Where a contract in terms "is subject to the approval of the Quartermaster-General," approval is a condition precedent to the legal effect of the agreement. Darragh v. U. S., 33 Ct. Cls., 377; Monroe & Richardson v. U. S., 35 ibid., 199. The refusal of the Quartermaster-General to approve a contract after work has been begun by the contractor is not a rescission. The contractor who begins work before approval does so at his own risk; and if he is paid for the work done, he can not recover profits as if there had been a breach. Ibid. Such approval need not be in writing. Speed's Case, 8 Wallace, 77. Though the failure of the Quartermaster-General to act within a reasonable time might validate a contract made subject to his approval, he is nevertheless entitled to time for inquiry and investigation and the discharge of the ordinary business of his department. For the jurisdiction of this court, see chapter VII, ante.

The restrictions of section 3732, Revised Statutes, are in the alternative, prohibiting a contract or purchase on the part of the United States unless "authorized by law" or unless such contract or purchase is made "under an appropriation adequate to its fulfillment." Contracts to be valid must be shown to come under one or the other of these provisions. Shipman v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 138.

When the authority to enter into a contract for a parlicular work in behalf of the United States depends wholly upon an appropriation of money made for that purpose, no officer of the Government has power to create a liability therefor beyond the amount of the appropriation, and a contractor can not recover more than the money appropriated, whatever may be the extent of his work. When an alleged liability rests wholly upon the authority of an appropriation they must stand or fall together, so that when the latter is exhausted the former is at an end, to be revived, if at all, only by subsequent legislation by Congress. Shipman v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 138, 147; McCullom v. U. S., 17 ibid., 92, 103; Trenton Co. v. U. S., 12 ibid., 147, 157.

If an officer is clothed with authority to do a piece of work without limitation as to cost, the contracts made by him therefor are binding upon the Government whether money is appropriated for the purpose or not. Acknowledgments and promises made by executive officers of the Government do not bind the United States when they are not made under express or implied authority of Congress. Leonard et al. v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 382.

[1] Authority to contract for the completion of an entire structure, the plan of which has been determined on, can not be inferred from the mere fact that an appropriation of a certain sum, to be expended on the structure, has been made. Hence a contract, though it be good to the extent of such appropriation, could not affix itself to future appropriations and control their expenditure. A contract of this character would be in violation of the spirit of section 3, act of July 25, 1868, sec. 3733, R. S., if not of its express terms. XV Op. Att. Gen., 236.

Under section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, 18 Stat. L., 111, all appropriations for "public buildings" are available until otherwise ordered by Congress. 3 Dig. 2 Comp. Dec., 29. A subappropriation for a public building must, under the act of June 20, 1874, 18 Stat. L., 110, 111, remain available until its object has been accomplished or until it has been exhausted, unless otherwise ordered by Congress. Ibid. See also 2 Comp. Dec., 365; 3 ibid., 487.

Supplies for Executive Departments.

[1] Denison v. U. S., 168 U. S. 241.

[2] The word "supplies," as used in section 3709 of the Revised Statutes evidently has reference to those things which the well-known needs of the public service will from time to time require in its different branches for its successful and efficient administration, and the statute was intended to afford the Government the pecuniary benefits, as well as the protection against fraud and favoritism, which open and honest competition is always likely to secure. It could not have been in the mind of the lawmaking power to require that purchases could only be made after advertisement of small articles which may occasionally be needed, and where in many cases the cost of advertising itself would exceed the value of the article purchased. It can not be said that such cases are governed by the emergency provision in the statute, for there may be, and are, many instances where the officer could not truthfully certify that immediate delivery was necessary. 3 Dig. 2 Compt. Dec., 288.

[3] The act of March 2, 1861, sec. 3709, R. S., while requiring such advertisement as the general rule, invests the officer charged with the duty of procuring supplies or services with a discretion to dispense with advertising if the exigencies of the public service require immediate delivery or performance. It is too well settled to admit of dispute at this day that where there is a discretion of this kind conferred on an officer or board of officers, and a contract is made in which they have exercised that discretion, the validity of the contract can not be made to depend on the degree of wisdom or skill which may have accompanied its exercise. U. S. v. Speed, 8 Wall., 77, 83; Child v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 176; Mason v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 495; Wentworth v. U. S., 5 Ct. Cls., 302. See, also, III Compt. Dec., 175, 314, 470.

[4] Section 3709, Revised Statutes, provides, generally, that the making of public contracts for supplies, etc., shall be preceded by an advertising for proposals "when the public exigencies do not require the immediate delivery of the articles or performance of the service." Exigencies growing out of a state of war, or hostilities with Indians, were probably mainly had in view, and it is exigencies of this class which have been considered in the adjudged cases in the Supreme Court and Court of Claims. (a) It is clear, however, that other exigencies may exist requiring that contracts or purchases be made at once or without the delay incident to advertising for proposals. Thus a loss of stores, structures, etc., on hand, caused by an actus Dei or vis major, as fire, storm, freshet, or a sudden riot or violent disorder; or a loss of supplies occasioned by the neglect of military subordinates in charge; or a failure of a contractor to fulfill a contract for supplies, transportation, or other service, might properly be regarded as constituting an "exigency" under the statute, if of such magnitude or injurious consequence to the Army as to necessitate an immediate making good of the deficiency. (a) The general rule, however, of the statute in requiring a notice and invitation to the public as a preliminary to the awarding of a contract, is founded upon a sound and well-considered public policy, and exceptions thereto, especially in time of peace, should be recognized as admissible only where, if the rule were strictly complied with, the public interests would manifestly be most seriously prejudiced. (b) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., 279, par. 9.

An exigency can not be created by the simple certificate of a public officer that it exists. An exigency involves a state of pressing necessity so great that the public interests would be prejudiced if the contemplated purchase was not made. A certificate made after the purchase of the articles is of no effect. 3 Dig. Compt. Dec., 286. The term "public exigency" refers to an exceptional and urgent necessity requiring the immediate performance of the work or service. Ibid., 328.

Proof of the existence of an exigency must be presented in order to authorize the accounting officers to pass a voucher for an exigency purchase under section 3709 of the Revised Statutes. Such proof must accompany the voucher in the form of a certificate by the officer who made the purchase that a public exigency required the immediate delivery of the articles purchased, and that they were, therefore, purchased in open market. In other words, there must be proof that the proper officer has actually determined that an exigency existed. The certificate may be made in the following form: "The exigencies of the public service required the immediate delivery of the articles specified in the voucher, and they were, therefore, obtained by purchase in open market, without advertisement, and at the lowest market rates." Ibid.

Except in the case of an existing public exigency a contract for supplies in the War Department or military branch of the service is to be preceded by an advertisement for proposals as directed in section 3709, Revised Statutes. This advertisement is not a mere facility for the convenience of an executive Department, which may be waived at discretion, but an essential proceeding prescribed by the statute as a condition to the exercise of the authority to enter into a contract for the United States. Thus enjoined, no omission or evasion of this prerequisite, however convenient such [b] As to the authority who is to decide whether there exists such an exigency as is contemplated by the statute, the Supreme Court, in the United States v. Speed, 8 Wallace, 83, has held that it is "the officer charged with the duty of procuring supplies or services who is invested with this discretion." This description is rather general, nor is the term "the purchasing officer," by which the Court of Claims explains it, in Thompson v. U. S., 9 Ct. Cls., 196, a much more precise definition. It is clear, however, that a subordinate officer charged with the duty of being the immediate representative of the United States in a contract or purchase should not, in general, venture to dispense with advertising, on the theory of the existence of a public exigency, in the absence of instructions or orders from a proper superior. Nor, on the other hand, will a superior officer, in entering into a contract for his command or branch of the service, properly assume that an "exigency" exists authorizing him to dispense with the statutory forms when the period is time of peace and no imperative necessity exists for the immediate delivery of the supplies or performance of the service proposed to be contracted for. It is to be noted that the cases both of Speed and Thompson related to contracts entered into during the civil war. In the instructive opinions of the Attorney-General on the "Fifteen per cent contracts" of April 27 and May 3, 1877, XV Opin., 235, 253, it is held that the "exigency" contemplated by the statute can be one of time only, and that it can be regarded as existing only where an immediate delivery or performance is required by a public necessity. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 853, note 1.

Department and other Government establishment in the city of Washington; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall designate the day or days in each year for the opening of such proposals and give due notice thereof to the other Departments and Government establishments. Such proposals shall be opened in the usual way and schedules thereof duly prepared and, together with the statement of the proposed action of each Department and Government establishment thereon, shall be submitted to a board consisting of one of the Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury and Interior Departments and one of the Assistant Postmasters-General, who shall be designated by the heads of said Departments and the Postmaster-General, an omission or evasion may be, can legally be allowed. (a) So, held, that it was no excuse for a noncompliance with the statute by a quartermaster that his contracts (made without advertisement) had been made with the most reliable parties and to the advantage of the United States. And, held, that the requirement as to advertising for proposals must be complied with in contracting for a supply of articles purchased for trial, equally as if the contract were for the regular yearly supplies. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 849.

The main object of the advertisement is to induce a free and open competition for the contracts of the Government, and thus to protect the United States from fraudulent combinations and collusive preferences in its business transactions. (b) At the same time the advertisement, in inviting proposals from the public, is properly to be viewed as a pledge on the part of the United States that the contract will, as a general rule, be awarded to the lowest bidder, provided he is a responsible person and his bid is a reasonable one, and provided, of course, he complies with the existing regulations as to bond, etc. Ibid., par. 855. See, also, 1 Compt. Dec., 363.

A military emergency can not be measured by precise rules. Thompson v. U. S., 9 Ct. Cls., 187. The act of March 2, 1861 (sec. 3709, R. S.), requires of a quartermaster that openness, diligence, prudence, and care which an individual might be supposed to exercise were he buying goods in just such an emergency and under just such circumstances. * * * A statute relating to national emergencies must necessarily be construed liberally, but a case under it can form no precedent for other cases. What was right for a quartermaster to do under certain circumstances can be lawful and right only when the precise cirsumstances are repeated. Childs & Co. v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 176.

An officer charged with the duty of making a contract or purchase is responsible under the laws and regulations for his action. Permission or orders to make a contract or purchase without inviting competition will not justify that procedure and will not be given. Par. 597, A. R., 1901.

In the absence of any emergency in fact, or any declared by the head of the Department in which a public work is being carried on, or any emergency that can be judicially inferred, the requirements of this section, in respect to advertisement, are mandatory, and a contract made in violation of it is void. Schneider v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cls., 547, 551.

[a] See VI Opin. Att. Gen., 406; 10 ibid., 28; also opinion of the Solicitor-General of March 20, 1876, XV Opin., 539, wherein, in holding contracts made without advertising to be not binding on the United States, he dissents from the opinion of Attorney-General Bates, in X Opin., 416, to the effect that while an absence of the prescribed advertisement will render illegal and inoperative an unexecuted contract, the Government can not, on account of such omission, rescind, to the damage of a contractor, a contract entered into by him in good faith and partly performed. In a later opinion of April 27, 1877, XV Opin., 236, the Attorney-General refers to the question, whether the provision of section 3709, Revised Statutes, requiring that contracts in general shall be preceded by advertisement, is mandatory or only directory, as one which has been much discussed (see, for example, the reference to this question in Fowler v. U. S., 3 Ct. Cls., 47), but is not required to be decided in that opinion. But whatever may be the true construction of this section, it is clear that no officer of the Army, in the absence of express authority to do so from the Secretary of War, can be justified in omitting to comply with the provision in regard to advertising.

Where the essential part of a contract is for personal services, advertising for proposals under section 3709, Revised Statutes, is not required. 2 Compt. Dec., 185.

Section 3709 does not require the advertising for proposals, nor the entering into contracts for the purchase of patented or copyrighted articles where the benefit of competition can not be secured. 2 Compt. METHODS OF PURCHASE.

A purchase of supplies or engagement of services will be made:

1. By contract, "reduced to writing and signed by the contracting parties with their names at the end thereof." Agreements of this character only are termed "contracts" in these regulations.
2. By written proposal and written acceptance.
3. By oral agreement.

When delivery or performance does not immediately follow an award or bargain the first method will be used; when delivery or performance immediately follows an award or bargain the second method may be resorted to. Par. 627, A. R., 1901.

Contracts will be made on forms furnished by the chiefs of bureaus, in cases where such forms are applicable, and those forms will be modified only to such extent as is necessary. All conditions will be stated therein as fully and clearly as possible. Par. 628, ibid.

If a contract made by a subordinate is, in terms, subject to the approval of his superior, approval is a condition precedent to the validity of the agreement. Monroe and Richardson v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cls., 199; Darragh v. U. S., 33 ibid., 377.

Where a contract provides that it is subject to the approval of a designated officer, such approval need not be in writing. Monroe and Richardson v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cls., 199; Speed's Case, 8 Wallace, 77.

ADVERTISING.

Par.
1529. No advertisement without authority.
1530. Rates.
1531. Advertising in District of Columbia; restriction.
1532. The same.
1533. Advertisements on Pacific coast.

No advertising without authority.
July 15, 1870, c. 292, s. 2, v. 16, p. 308.
Sec. 3828, R.S.

1529. No advertisement, notice, or proposal for any Executive Department of the Government, or for any Bureau thereof, or for any office therewith connected, shall be published in any newspaper whatever, except in pursuance of a written authority for such publication from the head of such Department; and no bill for any such advertising, or publication, shall be paid, unless there be presented, with such bill, a copy of such written authority.[1]

---

[1] The requirements of section 3828, Revised Statutes, are complied with by the issue of a general circular of instructions, and it is not necessary to file authority with each particular bill. Compt. Dec., 1893–94, 103; U. S. v. Odeneal, 10 Fed. Rep., 616.

By the terms of section 3709, Revised Statutes, and the acts of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 109), and February 12, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 654), advertising is required prior to purchase in the case of "all supplies for the use of the various departments and posts of the Army and all branches of the Army service," including the procurement of steel for gun construction. Advertising may be dispensed with in the emergency contemplated in section 3709 of the Revised Statutes; in the purchase of certain ordnance stores, when the aggregate of said purchase does not exceed $200 (act of July 16, 1892, 27 Stat. L., 174), and in the purchase of medicines and medical supplies (act of February 27, 1893, 27 Stat. L., 478). See also notes to paragraph 1151, ante.

A disbursing officer is not authorized to pay bills for newspaper advertising when he is satisfied that the price exceeds the commercial rates charged to private individuals, with the usual discounts, notwithstanding the affidavit of the proprietor of the newspaper to the contrary. 1 Compt. Dec., 312.

When the proprietors of a newspaper show by affidavit that the rates theretofore sworn to by them were, although not so limited, intended simply to cover advertising of a certain kind, they may be paid at their usual commercial rates for advertising not of the kind intended by their first statement of rates. Ibid., 373.

When advertising in connection with the purchase of subsistence supplies for the Army is, by law, a necessary condition precedent to the purchase of such supplies, and there is no specific appropriation for such advertising, the cost thereof is properly chargeable to the appropriation "Subsistence of the Army." 3 Dig. Comp. Dec., 23.

Under section 3709 of the Revised Statutes and paragraph 1486 of the Army Regulations (1881), the length of time for the publication of advertisements inviting proposals for furnishing Army supplies was left somewhat to the discretion of the purchasing officer. But the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 109), has fixed, in all cases excepting emergency purchases, the minimum period during which public notice shall be given, authorizing the purchase of "small amounts for immediate use" after public notice of not less than ten days, while all other purchases are required to be made after public notice of not less than thirty days. Ibid., 23.

Under the Army Regulations, advertisement may be made by handbills; but when this method is resorted to it must be shown that the handbills were circulated to such an extent as to render it probable that a large number of persons engaged in the business of furnishing the articles desired had thus been afforded an opportunity to compete for the contract which was to be let. Ibid., 24. See also 3 Comp. Dec., 730.

Rates of advertising.
June 20, 1878, v. 20, p. 216.

1530. Hereafter all advertisements, notices, proposals for contracts, and all forms of advertising required by law for the several Departments of the Government may be paid for at a price not to exceed the commercial rates charged to private individuals, with the usual discounts; such rates to be ascertained from sworn statements to be furnished by the proprietors or publishers of the newspapers proposing so to advertise: Provided, That all advertising in newspapers since the tenth day of April, eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, shall be audited and paid at like rates; but the heads of the several Departments may secure lower terms at special rates whenever the public interest requires it. Act of June 20, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 216).

Proclamations, etc., advertisements in District of Columbia; limitation.
July 31, 1876, v. 19, p. 105.

1531. All executive proclamations, and all treaties required by law to be published, shall be published in only one newspaper, the same to be printed and published in the District of Columbia and to be designated by the Secretary of State and in no case of advertisement for contracts for the public service shall the same be published in any newspaper published and printed in the District of Columbia unless the supplies or labor covered by such advertisement are to be furnished or performed in said District of Columbia. Act of July 31, 1876 (19 Stat. L., 105).

The same.
Jan. 21, 1881, v. 21, p. 317.
Sec. 3828, R.S.

1532. All advertising required by existing laws to be done in the District of Columbia by any of the departments of the Government shall be given to one daily and one weekly newspaper of each of the two principal political parties and to one daily and one weekly neutral newspaper: Provided, That the rates of compensation for such service shall in no case exceed the regular commercial rate of the newspapers selected; nor shall any advertisement be paid for unless published in accordance with section thirty-eight hundred and twenty-eight of the Revised Statutes.[1] Act of January 21, 1881 (21 Stat. L., 317).

Advertisements for supplies for Quartermaster's Department.
July 13, 1866, c. 176, s. 4, v. 14, p. 92.
Sec. 3716, R.S.

1533. The Quartermaster's Department of the Army, in obtaining supplies for the military service, shall state in all advertisements for bids for contracts that a preference shall be given to articles of domestic production and manufacture, conditions of price and quality being equal, and that such preference shall be given to articles of American production and manufacture produced on the Pacific coast, to the extent of the consumption required by the public service there. In advertising for Army supplies the Quartermaster's Department shall require all articles which are to be used in the States and Territories of the Pacific coast to be delivered and inspected at points designated in those States and Territories; and the advertisements for such supplies shall be published in newspapers of the cities of San Francisco, in California, and Portland, in Oregon.

[1] The subject of advertising in the War Department and its several bureaus and offices, and in the military establishment generally, is regulated by the provisions of paragraphs 598–602, Army Regulations of 1901. See notes to paragraph 1526, ante.

PROPOSALS—BIDDERS' BONDS.

Par.
1534. Secretary of War to prescribe regulations.
1535. Bidders' bonds.
1536. Opening bids.
1537. Separate proposals and contracts.
1538. The same exception; river and harbor works.

1534. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to prescribe rules and regulations to be observed in the preparation and submission and opening of bids for contracts under the War Department.[1] Act of April 10, 1878 (20 Stat. L., 36).

Secretary of War to prescribe rules, etc.; bonds. Apr. 10, 1878, v. 20, p. 36.

1535. He may require every bid to be accompanied by a written guaranty, signed by one or more responsible persons, to the effect that he or they undertake that the bidder, if his bid is accepted, will, at such time as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War or the officer authorized to make a contract in the premises, give bond, with good and sufficient sureties, to furnish the supplies proposed or to perform the service required. If after the acceptance of a bid and a notification thereof to the bidder he fails within the time prescribed by the Secretary of War or other duly authorized officer to enter into a contract and furnish a bond with good and sufficient security for the proper fulfillment of its terms, the Secretary or other authorized officer shall proceed to contract with some other person to furnish the supplies or perform the service required, and shall forthwith cause the difference between the amount specified by the bidder in default in the proposal and the amount for which he may have contracted with another party to furnish the supplies or perform the service for the whole period of the proposal to be charged up against the bidder and his guarantor or guarantors, and the sum may be immediately recovered by the United States for the use of the War Department

Opening bids; notification. Jan. 31, 1868, Res. 8, v. 15, p. 246. Sec. 3710, R. S.

1536. Whenever proposals for supplies have been solicited, the parties responding to such solicitation shall be duly notified of the time and place of opening the bids, and be permitted to be present either in person or by attorney, and a record of each bid shall then and there be made.

Separate proposals and contracts. Sec. 3717, R. S.

1537. Whenever the Secretary of War invites proposals for any works, or for any material or labor for works, there shall be separate proposals and separate contracts for each work, and also for each class of material or labor for each work.

Two or more river and harbor works in one contract, etc. R. S., sec. 3717, modified, v. 25, p. 423. Sec. 2, Sept. 19, 1890, v. 26, p. 452.

1538. Nothing contained in section thirty-seven hundred and seventeen of the Revised Statutes of the United States, nor in section three of the river and harbor act of August eleventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, shall be so construed as to prohibit or prevent the cumulation of two or more works of river and harbor improvement in the same proposal and contract where such works are situated in the same region and of the same kind or character. Sec. 2, act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. L., 452).

PREPARATION AND EXECUTION OF CONTRACTS.

Par.
1539. Contracts to be in writing.
1540. No member of Congress to be interested.
1541. Copies to be filed with Auditor for War Department.

The returns office; contracts to be in writing. June 2, 1862, c. 93, s. 1, v. 12, p. 411. Sec. 3744, R. S.

1539. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, of the Secretary of the Navy, and of the Secretary of the Interior, to cause and require every contract made by them severally on behalf of the Government, or by their officers under them appointed to make such contracts, to be reduced to writing, and signed by the contracting parties with their names at the end thereof;[2] a copy of which shall be filed by the officer making and signing the contract in the Returns Office of the Department of the Interior, as soon after the contract is made as possible, and within thirty days, together with all bids, offers, and proposals to him made by persons to obtain the same, and with a copy of any advertisement he may have published inviting bids, offers, or proposals for the same. All the copies and papers in relation to each contract shall be attached together by a ribbon and seal, and marked by numbers in regular order, according to the number of papers composing the whole return.[1]

[1] It may be considered as settled that so much of section 3744 as provides that all contracts shall "be reduced to writing and signed by the contracting parties with their names at the end thereof" is mandatory, and contracts which do not comply with its requirements are void. In looking at the scope and purpose of this law and at the words in which it is couched, I can not doubt of the intention of Congress in its enactment. To my mind it is clear that it was designed to require every executory contract, at least, to be put in writing, so that its terms might not be mistaken and that the character and extent of the outstanding engagements of the United States might at all times be known to the executive and legislative departments, or be capable of being ascertained in a reasonable time and with appropriate exactitude. Henderson v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 75, 83. There is no class of cases in which a statute for preventing frauds and perjuries is more needed than in this. And we think that the statute in question was intended to operate as such. It makes it unlawful for contracting officers to make contracts in any other way than by writing signed by the parties. This is equivalent to prohibiting any other mode of making contracts. Clark v. U. S., 95 U. S., 539, 542; South Boston Iron Co., 18 Ct. Cls., 165, 176; U. S. v. Lamont, 2 D. C. App., 532. The provisions of this section apply to contracts made in emergencies. Cobb et al. v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 514, 532; Clark v. U. S., 95 U. S., 539. Offers and acceptances by letter are preliminary memoranda only and do not constitute a valid contract within the meaning of the statute. South Boston Iron Co. v. U. S., 118 U. S., 37, 42. Where, however, a parol contract has been wholly or partly executed on one side, the party performing will be entitled to recover the fair value of his property or services as upon an implied contract for a quantum meruit. Clark v. U. MISCELLANEOUS REQUIREMENTS.

Par.
1542. American material preferred.
1543. Purchases, where made.
1544. Cavalry and artillery horses.
1545. The same, restriction on purchases.
1546. Draft animals, restriction.
1547. Means of transportation.
1548. Transportation of stores by contract.
1549. Expenditures on buildings, restriction.
Par.
1550. Post bakeries, schools, etc.
1551. Post gardens, exchanges.
1552. Contracts for subsistence.
1553. Purchases of steel.
1554. Purchases from Indians.
1555. Names of contractors to appear on articles purchased.
1556. Contracts for stationery, restriction.

American material preferred for public improvements.
Labor on same.
Sec. 2, Mar. 3, 1875, v. 18, p. 455.

1542. In all contracts for material for any public improvement the Secretary of War shall give preference to American material; and all labor thereon shall be performed within the jurisdiction of the United States. Sec. 2, act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L., 455).

3743 of the Revised Statutes, with the proper Comptroller of the Treasury, because they are connected with the settlement of public accounts. Ibid., p. 111.

Under section 3743 of the Revised Statutes all contracts in any manner connected with the settlement of public accounts by the Second, Third, and Fourth Auditors and the Second Comptroller are to be deposited or filed in the Second Comptroller's Office within ninety days after their respective dates. This statutory requirement includes not only all formal written contracts or specialties in any manner connected with the settlement of accounts, but also all properly authorized extensions or other modifications of such contracts, every modification of a contract being in the nature of a new contract and connected with the settlement of accounts. Ibid., p. 112.

Only formal written contracts are required under section 3743 of the Revised Statutes to be filed in the office of the Second Comptroller. Informal contracts and the papers pertaining thereto should be filed with the accounts or vouchers to which they relate, in order to facilitate the examination and revision of accounts and vouchers. Ibid., 109.

A separate notification is required in each case of extension of a contract, so that it can be filed, with the contract to which it pertains, in the office of the Second Comptroller. Otherwise notifications of extensions of contracts will fail of the purpose contemplated in section 3743 of the Revised Statutes. Ibid., 112.

Formal written contracts made and filed in the proper office in pursuance of law must be regarded as necessary in the settlement of public accounts or claims, and therefore can not properly be returned either for cancellation or amendment. Ibid.

The Second Comptroller is not authorized to deliver to either of the parties to a contract, for any purpose whatever, any contract connected with the settlement of public accounts which has been properly placed in his custody under the provisions of section 3743 of the Revised Statutes. Ibid.

CONTRACTORS' BONDS.

Bonds for the faithful performance of contracts for supplies or service will be required in the following cases:

1. When the consideration is $3,000 or more, whatever may be the length of time required for the full performance of the contract.
2. When the consideration is over $250, but less than $3,000, and the contract can not be fully performed within thirty days from its date.

Bonds may be exacted or, in the discretion of the respective chiefs of bureaus concerned, waived in the following cases:

1. When the consideration is less than $3,000 and the contract is to be fully performed within thirty days from its date.
2. When the consideration is not more than $250, whatever may be the length of time required for full performance.
3. When the contract is for furnishing meals to recruits and recruiting parties.

The amount of penalty in a contractor's bond will be fixed by the contracting

1543. Hereafter, except in cases of emergency or where it is impracticable to secure competition, the purchase of all supplies for the use of the various departments and posts of the Army and of the branches of the army service shall only be made after advertisement, and shall be purchased where the same can be purchased the cheapest, quality and cost of transportation and the interests of the Government considered; but every open-market emergency purchase made in the manner common among business men which exceeds in amount two hundred dollars shall be reported for approval to the Secretary of War under such regulations as he may prescribe.[1] Act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 905).

officer, and will not be less than one-tenth nor more than the full amount of the consideration of the contract.

Nothing in this paragraph is to be construed as authorizing the waiving of bonds required under paragraph 644. Par. 638, A. R., 1901.

When bonds for the faithful performance of contracts are exacted, they will be made and executed with the necessary justification and certification of sufficiency of sureties, in accordance with the instructions printed on the blank forms of contractors' bonds furnished by the chief of bureaus. Such bonds must be executed by the contractor as principal, and by a surety company, or by at least two sufficient and responsible persons who must be citizens of the United States, as sureties. Each must affix his signature and seal, and each signature must be attested by at least one witness. When practicable there will be a separate witness to each signature. Par. 639. Ibid.

A company duly incorporated under the laws of the United States, or of any State, and legally authorized to guarantee bonds, may be accepted as surety, under the conditions prescribed in Article LVI. A firm, as such, will not be accepted as surety, nor a partner for a copartner or firm of which he is a member. Stockholders who are not officers of a corporation may be accepted as sureties for such corporation. Par. 640, ibid.

A guarantor, or the guarantors, to a bidder's guaranty may be accepted as surety, or sureties, to the bond of the same person as contractor, provided such guarantor or guarantors are able to justify as required for the bond. Par.641, ibid.

The sureties, if individuals, must jointly justify in double the amount of the penalty. The affidavit of justification must be taken before a person authorized by the laws of the United States, State, Territory, or District, to administer oaths. Justification will be followed by the certificate of a judge or clerk of a United States court, a United States district attorney, United States commissioner, a judge or clerk of a State court of record with the seal of said court attached, that the sureties are known to him, and that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, each is worth, over and above all debts and liabilities, the sum stated in his affidavit of justification. If found necessary, separate certificates may be furnished as to each surety. Par. 642, ibid.

Contractors' bonds will be executed in duplicate, one to accompany the copy of the contract which is sent to the Auditor for the War Department, and the other retained by the officer who makes the contract. Par. 643, ibid.

When a contract is entered into for the construction of any public building, or the prosecution and completion of any public work, or for repairs on any public building or public work, the contractor will be required, before entering upon performance of the same, to include in the bond given for the faithful performance of the contract the further obligation that he will promptly make payments to all persons who supply him with labor and materials for the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract. A certified copy of this contract and bond will be furnished to any person who has supplied such labor or materials, upon his application to the War Department, accompanied by an affidavit that the labor or materials have been supplied by him and have not been paid for by the contractor. Par. 644, ibid.

[1] This enactment replaces the acts of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 109), February 27, 1893 (27 ibid., 483), August 6, 1894 (28 ibid., 233), March 15, 1898 (30 ibid., 322),

Cavalry and artillery horses.
July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 109.

1544. Hereafter all purchases of horses under appropriations for horses for the cavalry and artillery and for the Indian scouts shall be made by contract, after legal advertisement, by the Quartermaster's Department, under instructions of the Secretary of War, the horses to be inspected under the orders of the General Commanding the Army; and no horse shall be received and paid for until duly inspected.[1] Act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 109).

Limitation on purchases.
Feb. 12, 1895, v. 28, p. 660; Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 906.

1545. The number of horses purchased under this appropriation, added to the number on hand, shall be limited to the actual needs of the mounted service; and unless otherwise ordered by the Secretary of War no part of this appropriation shall be paid out for horses not purchased by contract, after competition duly invited by the Quartermaster's Department, and an inspection by such Department, all under the direction and authority of the Secretary of War.[2] Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 906).

Draft animals; limit of purchases.
Feb. 9, 1887, v. 24, p. 398; Sept. 22, 1888, v. 25, p. 486.

1546. Hereafter no part of this appropriation shall be expended in the purchase for the Army of draft animals until the number on hand shall be reduced to five thousand, and thereafter shall only be expended for the purchase of a number sufficient to keep the supply up to five thousand. Act of September 22, 1888 (25 Stat. L., 486).

and section 3729 of the Revised Statutes. For regulatious governing open-market purchases, see paragraphs 645–648, Army Regulations of 1901.

It has been held by the Attorney-General that "the object of this legislation is to secure for the Government the benefit of competition in obtaining supplies and to prevent favoritism in making the purchases thereof. It contemplates one general mode of purchase, namely, by contract, after advertisement, with 'the lowest responsible bidder for the best and most suitable article,' with but a single exception, and that is where an 'emergency' exists requiring the purchase to be otherwise made. Such emergency may arise not only before the required public notice can be given, but after it has once been given, in consequence of the failure to receive any bids or proposals; in either case the purchase thereupon would be an emergency purchase, and come within the requirement of the statute for an immediate report to the Secretary of War for his approval. This requirement is, I think, designed to extend to all purchases which are not made agreeably to the general mode above indicated, and hence it applies to the purchase of parts of machinery, or parts of stoves or ranges, for repairs, or of patented articles, when the same is (as in cases of emergency, and those only, it may be) made in open market." XVIII Opin. Att. Gen., 349.

[1] The provisions of the act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 109), that purchases of supplies for the Quartermaster's and Commissary's departments in cases of emergency "must be at once reported to the Secretary of War for his approval" is directory only, and the failure of certain officers of these departments to make reports of such purchases does not invalidate the purchases or the payments therefor. 5 Compt. Dec., 259.

[2] This paragraph has appeared, as a proviso, in each annual appropriation bill since June 30, 1886. See acts of June 30, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 97); February 5, 1887 (24 ibid., 398); September 22, 1888 (25 ibid., 485); March 2, 1889 (ibid., 830); June 13, 1890 (26 ibid., 153); February 24, 1891 (ibid., 775); July 16, 1892 (27 ibid., 179); February 27, 1893 (ibid., 483); August 6, 1894 (28 ibid., 239); February 12, 1895 (ibid., 660). The several acts of appropriation for the support of the Army since that of June 30, 1886 (24 Stat. L., 96), have contained a proviso that no part of the appropriations "shall be expended for printing unless the same shall be done by contract, after due notice and competition, except in such case as the emergency will not admit of the giving notice for competition."

Purchase of means of transportation.
July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 110.

1547. Hereafter all purchases of horses, mules, or oxen, wagons, carts, drays, ships and other seagoing vessels, also all other means of transportation, shall be made by the Quartermaster's Department, by contract, after due legal advertisement, except in cases of extreme emergency. Act of July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 110).

Transportation of stores, etc., by contract.
July 5, 1884, v. 23, p. 109; Mar. 2, 1901, v. 31, p. 907.

1548. The number of draft animals purchased from this appropriation, added to those now on hand, shall be limited to such numbers as are actually required for the service; all transportation of stores by private parties for the Army shall be done by contract, after due legal advertisement, except in cases of emergency, which must be at once reported to the Secretary of War for his approval. Ibid. (23 Stat. L., 109). Act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 907).

Limit of expenditures on buildings and grounds.
Feb. 27, 1893, v. 27, p. 484.

1549. Hereafter no expenditures exceeding five hundred dollars shall be made upon any building or military post, or grounds about the same, without the approval of the Secretary of War for the same, upon detailed estimates by the Quartermaster's Department; and the erection, construction, and repair of all buildings and other public structures in the Quartermaster's Department shall, as far as may be practicable, be made by contract, after due legal advertisement.[1] Act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 484).

[1] This paragraph continued to appear as a proviso in several acts of appropriation for the support of the Army prior to the act of February 27, 1893 (27 Stat. L., 454). See acts of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. L., 360); June 30, 1886 (24 ibid., 97); February 9, 1887 (ibid., 399); September 22, 1888 (25 ibid., 486); March 2, 1889 (ibid., 830); June 13, 1890 (26 ibid., 154); February 24, 1891 (ibid., 776); July 16, 1892 (27 ibid., 180); February 27, 1893 (ibid., 484). The same act requires that the posts at which hospital stewards' quarters are to be constructed shall be designated by the Secretary of War, and that such quarters shall, whenever practicable, be built by contract. 27 Stat. L., 484.

Government contracts, by whom made, binding force, etc.—Where a public agent acts in the line of his duty and by legal authority, his contracts made on account of the Government are public and not personal. They inure to the benefit of and are obligatory on the Government, not the officer. Hodgin v. Dexter, 1 Cranch, 345, 363; Parks v. Ross, 11 Howard, 362. The Government is not bound by the act of its agent, unless it clearly appear that he acted within the scope of his authority, or was employed as a public agent to do, or was held out as having authority to do, such act. Whiteside v. U. S., 93 U. S., 247; Lee v. Munroe, 7 Cranch, 366; Filer v. U. S., 9 Wall., 45. Where service was performed under a general appropriation, the contractor is not bound to know the condition of the appropriation. Myerle v. U. S., 33 Ct. Cls., 1.

Where a contract is subject to the approval of superior authority, such approval is a condition precedent. Monroe and Richardson v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cls., 199; Filor v. U. S., 9 Wallace, 45. Such approval need not be in writing. Speed v. U. S., 8 Wallace, 77; Monroe and Richardson v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cls., 199, 204.

Where a contract provides that an officer named in the contract may, on inspection, accept or reject any part of the work done under it if not, in his opinion, "strictly in accordance with the drawings and specifications," his decision, in the absence of fraud, or such gross error as would imply bad faith, is final. Driscoll v. U. S., 34 Ct. Cls., 508. Such action on the part of the officer being final and conclusive, it becomes the duty of the contractor, at his own expense, to "remedy any defect or unsatisfactory material or work" so rejected, by conforming the same to Post bakeries, schools, kitchens, gardens, etc.

June 13, 1890, v. 26, p. 152.

1550. For the current fiscal year and thereafter there may be expended from the appropriation for regular supplies the amounts required for the necessary equipments of the bakehouse to carry on post bakeries; for the necessary furniture, text-books, paper, and equipments of the post schools; for the tableware and mess furniture for kitchens and mess halls; * * * each and all for use of the enlisted men of the Army. *Act of June 13, 1890 (26 Stat. Post gardens and exchanges.
July 16, 1892, v. 27, p. 178.

1551. Hereafter no money appropriated for the support of the Army shall be expended for post gardens or exchanges, but this proviso shall not be construed to prohibit the use by post exchanges of public buildings or public transportation when, in the opinion of the Quartermaster-General, not required for other purposes. Act of July 16, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 178).

Sec. 3715, R. S.

1552. Contracts for subsistence supplies for the Army, made by the Commissary-General, on public notice, shall provide for a complete delivery of such articles, on inspection, at such places as shall be stipulated.

Purchase of steel.
Feb. 4, 1891, v. 26, p. 767.

1553. No contract for the expenditure of any portion of the money herein provided, or that may be hereafter provided, for the purchase of steel shall be made until the same shall have been submitted to public competition by the Department by advertising. *Act of February 24, 1891 (26 Stat. Purchases from Indians.
Jan. 19, 1891, s. 4, v. 26, p. 721.

1554. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed when making purchases for the military posts or service on or near Indian reservations to purchase in open market, from the Indians as far as practicable, at fair and reasonable rates, not to exceed the market prices in the localities, any cattle, grain, hay, fuel, or other produce or merchandise they may have for sale and which may be

Name of contractor to appear on supplies.
July 17, 1862, c. 200, s. 15, v. 12, p. 596.
Sec. 3731, R. S.

1555. Every person who shall furnish supplies of any kind to the Army or Navy shall be required to mark and distinguish the same with the name of the contractor furnishing such supplies, in such manner as the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy may, respectively, direct; and no supplies of any kind shall be received unless so marked and distinguished.

Contracts for stationery, etc., limited to one year.
Jan. 31, 1868, Res. No. 8, v. 15, p. 246.
Sec. 3735, R. S.

1556. It shall not be lawful for any of the Executive Departments to make contracts for stationery or other supplies for a longer term than one year from the time the contract is made.

ASSIGNMENTS.

Transfers of contracts prohibited.
July 17, 1862, c. 200, s. 14, v. 12, p. 596.
Sec. 3737, R. S.

1557. No contract or order, or any interest therein, shall be transferred by the party to whom such contract or order is given to any other party, and any such transfer shall cause the annulment of the contract or order transferred, so far as the United States are concerned. All rights of action, however, for any breach of such contract by the contracting parties, are reserved to the United States.[1]

---

[1] This clause is imperative and bars any action by the assignor as well as the assignee. Wanless v. U. S., 6 Ct. Cls., 123. The purpose of the act of July 17, 1862 (sec. 3737, R. S.), prohibiting the transfer of Government contracts, was to secure the personal attention and services of the contractor and to render him liable to punishment under section 16 of the same act. * * * No formal or written transfer is necessary to bring the case within the prohibition of the act. It is sufficient to annul the contract that the facts disclose a substantial transfer. Francis v. U. S., 11 Ct. Cls., 638; Wheelan v. U. S., 5 Ct. Cls., 504; McCord's Case, 9 Ct. Cls., 155.

In view of the positive prohibition of section 3737, Revised Statutes, that no contract or interest therein shall be transferred by the contractor, and the further provision that any such transfer shall operate as an annulment of the contract, "so far as the United States are concerned," held that an officer of the Army representing the United States in a contract for military transportation would not be authorized, of his own discretion, to consent or waive objection to an assignment, in whole or in part, of a contract, by the contractor, so as to admit the assignee to perform the service.(a) Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 897.

Where a contract has been once formally entered into with a certain party, for the officer representing the United States to assume to admit additional parties into the

[a] That an assignment of a contract transfers no legal claim or right of action to the assignee, and that a contract when assigned is no longer binding upon the United States, see Wheeler v. U. S., 5 Ct. Cls., 504; Wanless v. U. S., 6 ibid., 123; Gill v. U. S., 7 ibid., 523; McCord v. U. S., 9 ibid., 156; Francis v. U. S., 11 ibid., 638; X Opin. Att. Gen., 523. But it has been held by the Attorney-General that the statute on the subject (sec. 3737, R. S.) is intended simply for the benefit and protection of the United States, which, therefore, is not compelled to avail itself of a transfer by the contractor to annul the contract, but may recognize the same and accept and pay the assignee. "Were it to be held," observes the Attorney-General, "that a transfer of an interest would absolutely avoid the contract, it would enable any party making a contract with the United States to avoid it by simply transferring an interest therein, which is a construction manifestly inadmissible." Opinion in the case of the "Fifteen per cent contracts" (XV Opins., 235). And similarly held by the same authority in a later opinion. in XVI Opins., 277, that while the United States may avail itself of an assignment to declare the contract annulled, it is not required to do so, but, if deemed to be for its interests, may recognize the assignee. But it is clear that an officer of the Army could not properly assume to treat an assignment of a contract (or interest therein) as valid without the authority and direction of the Secretary of War. That for a mail contractor to contract with another person to transport the mail for him, and as his servant or employee, was not an assignment of his contract with the United States, was held in the recent case of Frye v. Burdick, 67 Maine, 408.

Members of Congress not to be interested in contracts.
Apr. 21, 1868, c. 48, s. 1, v. 2, p. 484; June 22, 1874, c. 389, v. 18, p. 177.
Sec. 3739, R. S.

1558. No Member of or Delegate to Congress shall directly or indirectly, himself, or by any other person in trust for him, or for his use or benefit, or on his account, undertake, execute, hold, or enjoy, in whole or in part, any contract or agreement made or entered into in behalf agreement and undertaking (thus in fact consenting to a transfer by the contractor of an interest in the contract), would be wholly unauthorized. Ibid., par. 898.

A mere power of attorney given by a contractor to another person authorizing him to receive for the contractor moneys coming due under the contract can not, of course, operate as a transfer of an interest therein; but where, by a written agreement between a contractor and another party, the latter was empowered to receive the payments from the United States, in consideration of which he undertook to continue and complete the work contracted for, held that such agreement was a power coupled with an interest, and operated as a transfer within the meaning of section 3737, Revised Statutes. (b) Ibid., par. 899. A contractor with the United States for the construction of a public improvement does not, by contracting with a third party to furnish material for such work, make an assignment or a transfer of his contract within the prohibition of section 3737, Revised Statutes. U. S. v. Farley, 91 Fed. Rep., 474.

Under no circumstances can the United States permit or recognize the transfer of a contract to a third party, for the reason that such transfers are prohibited by section 3737 of the Revised Statutes, and that, if the United States could permit any such transfer, its assent would release the sureties on the contractor's bond. 3 Dig. 2nd Compt. Dec., 113.

Under section 3737, Revised Statutes, the assignment of a contract wholly invalidates it, unless the Government elects to treat it as still in force. Where the Government accepts from the assignee work or materials under the contract, or permits a part performance, it ratifies the assignment. (c) Where the War Department assented to the transfer of a contract for the manufacture of ordnance from one iron works to another, and accepted deliveries from the latter, held that the contract remained in full force. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., p. 299, par. 61.

An assignment, to have the effect of invalidating a contract, need not be express, nor need it be technical, formal, or written. (d) It may be evidenced by the various facts or circumstances illustrating the relations and intention of the parties. Ibid., par. 902.

This provision is intended only for the protection of the United States. The Government may avail itself of the assignment or transfer to annul the contract, but it is not compelled to do so. XVI Opin. Att. Gen., 278; 15 ibid., 236. Dulaney v. Scudder 94, Fed. Rep., 6.

There is a distinction between the assignment of a Government contract and an assignment of a claim for money due under a contract. The former is void under the act of July 17, 1862 (sec. 3737, R. S.), and passes no title, legal or equitable; the latter passes title to the money due, as though it were the sale of a chattel. McCord v. U. S., 9 Ct. Cls., 155; Lawrence v. U. S., 8 ibid., 252. The sale of a quartermaster's voucher by a contractor to a third party works a transfer of his claim against the Government, or of so much of it as is represented by the voucher. But such vouchers are in no sense negotiable paper, and the purchaser will take them subject to all the equities that may exist against a contractor. Lawrence & Crowell v. U. S., of the United States, by any officer or person authorized to make contracts on behalf of the United States. Every person who violates this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined three thousand dollars. All contracts or agreements made in violation of this section shall be void; and whenever any sum of money is advanced on the part of the United States, in consideration of any such contract or agreement, it shall be forthwith repaid; and in case of refusal or delay to repay the same, when demanded, by the proper officer of the Department under whose authority such contract or agreement shall have been made or entered into, every person so refusing or delaying, together with his surety or sureties, shall be forthwith prosecuted at law for the recovery of any such sum of money so advanced.[1]

Sec. 3740, R. S.

1559. Nothing contained in the preceding section shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any contract or agreement made or entered into, or accepted by any incorporated company, where such contract or agreement is made

---

8 ibid., 252. An officer purchasing an article is without authority of law to issue a voucher for the purchase money to a third person, at the vendor's request, there being no privity of contract between the United States and such third person. Johnston v. U. S., 13 ibid., 217.

It has, however, been held that section 3477, which prohibits or makes null and void all transfers and assignments of claims against the Government does not apply to involuntary assignments in bankruptcy (Erwin v. United States, 97 U. S., 392), or even to voluntary assignments for the benefit of creditors (Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S., 556). It seems to me that the reasoning of these cases applies with equal force to section 3737. 2 Compt. Dec., 50.

Under sections 3477 and 3737 of the Revised Statutes, a person having a contract can not assign any part of the money coming to him thereunder so as to affect any one but himself, and the acceptance by a disbursing agent of the United States of an order upon such fund has no validity against third persons. Greeneville Sav. Bank et al. v. Lawrence et al., 76 Fed. Rep., 545.

[1] Under sections 3739–3742, Revised Statutes, it is illegal for an officer of the United States to enter into a contract or make a purchase of a firm or association (not incorporated) of which a Member of or Delegate to Congress is a member, or in which one is pecuniarily interested.(a) Dig. Opin., Opin. J. A. G., par. 895.

Paragraph 671 of the Army Regulations of 1901 prohibits purchases by officers of the Army "from any other person in the military service." Held that this prohibition did not embrace civilians employed in the public service under the War Department, or in connection with the military administration, and therefore did not preclude the making of a contract by an ordnance officer, as representing the United States, with a civil employee at an arsenal, for the use of an invention patented by the latter.(b) Ibid., par. 896.

The form of a proposed contract contained the stipulation that "no person belonging to or employed in the military service of the United States is or shall be admitted to any share or part of this contract." The description "person employed in" is understood to mean all such clerks, mechanics, laborers, or other civilians as are legally employed by the military authorities in or in connection with military works, operations, or other authorized transactions. So where a lowest bidder was a civilian laborer at the Springfield Armory, advised that the contract be made with the next lowest bidder, who was under no such incapacity. Ibid., 296, par. 52.

Att. Gen.), citing 16 ibid., 406.

1565. Every officer of the United States, and every person acting for or on behalf of the United States, in any official capacity under or by virtue of the authority of any department or office of the Government thereof; and every officer or person acting for or on behalf of either House of Congress, or of any committee of either House, or of both Houses thereof, who asks, accepts, or receives any money, or any contract, promise, undertaking, obligation, gratuity, or security for the payment of money, or for the delivery or conveyance of anything of value, with intent to have his decision or action on any question, matter, cause, or proceeding which may, at any time, be pending, or which may be by law brought before him in his official capacity, or in his place of trust or profit, influenced thereby, shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding section.[2]

Officer of the United States guilty of extortion. Mar. 3, 1825, c. 65, s. 12, v. 4, p. 118. Mar. 3, 1875, c. 144, v. 18, p. 479. Mar. 3, 1875, c. 145, v. 18, pp. 479, 480. Sec. 5481, R.S.

1566. Every officer of the United States who is guilty of extortion under color of his office shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, except those officers or agents of the United States otherwise differently and specially provided for in subsequent sections of this chapter.

[1] Though an officer may have full power to enter into a contract, yet the contract may be void for fraud as having been made by the collusion of the officer, and all negotiations and circumstances surrounding the contract, as well as its terms, may be examined to prove fraud. Hitchcock v. City of Galvestion, 3 Woods, 292. Three persons, one of them the Government agent who had charge of letting the contract, entered into an agreement by which two were to do the work, and each was to have one-third of the profits. Held that such a contract was a fraud on the Government, and that an action founded thereon by one partner against the other could not be maintained. Bartle v. Coleman, 3 Cranch, C. C., 283.

[2] An agreement to use personal influence with a Government agent in order to procure a Government contract is void. So where plaintiff, being consul-general of the Turkish Government, agreed with defendant to use his personal influence with a special agent of the Turkish Government to procure contracts between that Government and defendant, and did use such influence with success, it was held that plaintiff could maintain no action for his services in procuring such contracts. Oscanyan v. Arms Company, 13 Otto, 261.

For the penalty referred to in this paragraph see section 5500, Revised Statutes, which provides that "every person who promises, offers, gives, or causes or procures to be promised, offered, or given, any money or other thing of value, or makes or tenders any contract, undertaking, obligation, gratuity, or security for the payment of money, or for the delivery or conveyance of anything of value, to any member of either House of Congress, either before or after such member has been qualified or has taken his seat, with intent to influence his vote or decision on any question, matter, cause, or proceeding which may be at any time pending in either House of Congress, or before any committee thereof, shall be fined not more than three times the amount of money or value of the thing so offered, promised, given, made, or tendered, or caused or procured to be so offered, promised, given, made, or tendered, and shall be, morever, imprisoned not more than three years."

The returns office; contracts to be in writing.
June 2, 1862, c. 1, s. 93, v. 12, p. 411.
Sec. 3744, R.S.

1567. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, of the Secretary of the Navy, and of the Secretary of the Interior to cause and require every contract made by them severally on behalf of the Government, or by their officers under them appointed to make such contracts, to be reduced to writing, and signed by the contracting parties with their names at the end thereof; a copy of which shall be filed by the officer making and signing the contract in the Returns Office of the Department of the Interior, as soon after the contract is made as possible, and within thirty days, together with all bids, offers, and proposals to him made by persons to obtain the same, and with a copy of any advertisement he may have published inviting bids, offers, or proposals for the same. All the copies and papers in relation to each contract shall be attached together by a ribbon and seal, and marked by numbers in regular order, according to the number of papers composing the whole return.[1]

[1] It may be considered as settled that so much of section 3744 as provides that all contracts shall "be reduced to writing and signed by the contracting parties with their names at the end thereof" is mandatory, and contracts which do not comply with its requirements are void. In looking at the scope and purpose of this law and at the words in which it is couched, I can not doubt of the intention of Congress in its enactment. To my mind it is clear that it was designed to require every executory contract, at least, to be put in writing so that its terms might not be mistaken and that the character and extent of the outstanding engagements of the United States might at all times be known to the executive and legislative departments, or be capable of being ascertained in a reasonable time and with appropriate exactitude. Henderson v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 75, 83. There is no class of cases in which a statute for preventing frauds and perjuries is more needed than in this. And we think that the statute in question was intended to operate as such. It makes it unlawful for contracting officers to make contracts in any other way than by writing signed by the parties. This is equivalent to prohibiting any other mode of making contracts. Clark v. U. S., 95 U. S., 539, 542; South Boston Iron Co., 18 Ct. Cls., 165, 176. The provisions of this section apply to contracts made in emergencies. Cobb et al. v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 514, 532; Clark v. U. S., 95 U. S., 539. Offers and acceptances by letter are preliminary memoranda only, and do not constitute a valid contract within the meaning of the statute. South Boston Iron Co. v. U. S., 118 U. S., 37, 42. Where, however, a parol contract has been wholly or partly executed on one side, the party performing will be entitled to recover the fair value of his property or services as upon an implied contract for a quantum meruit. Clark v. U. S., 95 U. S., 539. See also Warren & Goss v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cls., 77; South Boston Iron Co. v. U. S., 18 ibid., 165, and 118 U. S., 37, Clark v. U. S., 95 U. S., 543; The International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 2 Ct. App. D. C., 532. See also Lindsley v. U. S., 4 C. Cls. R., 359; Burchiel v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 549; Bernheimer v. U. S., 5 Ct. Cls., 65.

The verification and return provided for in these sections have been held to be mandatory only upon the officer who made the contract. A contract reduced to writing and executed with all the formality which the law requires will not be invali-

Oath to return, etc. Sec. 2, ibid. Sec. 3745, R.S. 1568. It shall be the further duty of the officer, before making his return, according to the preceding section, to affix to the same his affidavit in the following form, sworn to before some magistrate having authority to administer oaths: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the copy of contract hereto annexed is an exact copy of a contract made by me personally with ———; that I made the same fairly without any benefit or advantage to myself, or allowing any such benefit or advantage corruptly to the said ———, or any other person; and that the papers accompanying include all those relating to the said contract, as required by the statute in such case made and provided."

Penalty for omitting to make returns. Sec. 3, ibid. Sec. 3746, R.S. 1569. Every officer who makes any contract, and fails or neglects to make return of the same, according to the provisions of the two preceding sections, unless from unavoidable accident or causes not within his control, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred, and imprisoned not more than six months.

Instructions to be furnished. Sec. 5, ibid. Sec. 3747, R.S. 1570. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, of the Secretary of the Navy, and of the Secretary of the Interior to furnish every officer appointed by them with authority to make contracts on behalf of the Government with a printed letter of instructions, setting forth the duties of such officer under the two preceding sections, and also to furnish therewith forms, printed in blank, of contracts to be made, and the affidavit of returns required dated by a failure of the officer to make a proper return of the same. That is made his exclusive duty by the law, and he alone is to be punished for it by the stringent and severe penalties prescribed by the act. Henderson v. U. S., 4 Ct. Cls., 75, 81; Clark v. U. S., 95 U. S., 539; Power v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cls., 263.

A mere understanding or oral agreement can not constitute a contract in the War Department. Were it not indeed for the provisions of section 3744, Revised Statutes, the acceptance of a bid would, under the general law of contracts, bind the United States. But this section has been construed by the Supreme Court as being in the nature of a statute of frauds and mandatory in its requirements, and therefore making it essential that a contract, to be legal and obligatory, shall be in writing and signed by the parties. (a) The mere proposal of a bidder, accepted on the part of the Government, does not therefore operate as a contract, but is simply a proceeding preliminary to contract; nor does such an acceptance bind the United States to enter into a contract. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 295, par. 48.

It is proper to remark that in the event of a suit being instituted against a principal or surety on a contract of the United States, the copy of the contract filed in the Returns Office would have no evidential value, and a copy of the original filed in the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury under the provisions of section 3743, Revised Statutes, paragraph 1185, supra, would have to be produced subject to the authentication required in section 886 of the Revised Statutes.

The eight-hour law is in the nature of a direction from a principal to his agent, in which third party has no interest. [1] The term "extraordinary emergency," employed in the first section of the act of August 1, 1892, can not properly be construed in advance as referring or applicable to any particular class of cases. The question whether there is or was such emergency should be left to be determined by the facts of each special instance as it arises. A case in which it appeared that a compliance with the statute was not possible might well be held to be one of "extraordinary emergency." Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1239.

[2] Held, that the term "laborer," as used in the act of 1892, was apparently intended in a comprehensive sense, and that to declare certain classes of employment as "peculiar," and therefore excepted from the operation of the act, would be a restriction not warranted by the language of the statute. Thus a proposed regulation excepting "watchmen, messengers, teamsters, engineers, firemen, seamen," and some others, as not included in the description "laborers and mechanics," not recommended to be adopted. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., 380, par. 4.

Seamen on a Government vessel are employed upon the "public works of the United States" within the meaning of the act of August 1, 1892 (27 Stat. L., 340), when engaged in removing obstructions to navigation in rivers and harbors, and to exact from them more than eight hours' labor per day at this work or in the actual care and repair of appliances necessary to carry it on will subject the offender to indictment. U. S. v. Jefferson, 60 Fed. Rep., 736.

Extra pay fixed by statute for services in excess of eight hours a day is a matter of public policy which can not be interfered with by a postmaster. Rush v. U. S., 25 Ct. Cls., 223.

A timber dry dock is one of the "public works" of the United States under the eight-hour law of August 1, 1892. XX Opin. Att. Gen., 445.

[3] The original statute on this subject—the act of June 25, 1868, incorporated in section 3738, Revised Statutes—merely provided that eight hours should "constitute a day's work" for laborers, etc., employed by the United States. It has been held by the Supreme Court, U. S. v. Martin, 94 U. S., 400, (a) that this enactment was merely "a direction by the Government to its agents," not "a contract between the Government and its laborers, that eight hours shall constitute a day's work," and that it did not "prevent the Government from making agreements with them by which their labor may be more (or less) than eight hours a day." The act thus failed of its apparent object. To cure this defect was passed the act of August 1, 1892, chapter 352. Held, therefore, that the term "public works of the United States," used in the first section of the latter act, should not be narrowly construed. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., par. 1235.

1575. The provisions of this act shall not be so construed as to in any manner apply to or affect contractors or subcontractors, or to limit the hours of daily service of laborers or mechanics engaged upon the public works of the United States or of the District of Columbia for which contracts have been entered into prior to the passage of this act. Sec. 3, ibid.

of the United States in the sense of the act of August 1, 1892, chapter 352, section 1, although the United States did not own the land. A proprietorship in or jurisdiction over the thing constructed is not necessary. The United States expends annually more than twenty millions for the improvement of rivers and harbors, but the greater part of this is done without acquiring title or jurisdiction to or over the premises. The question under the act is not in whom is the title or jurisdiction, but who is doing the work. The construction of these levees is a particular work appropriated for by Congress and to be contracted for by the United States. It is therefore one of the public works of the United States, and subject to the provisions of this statute.(a) Ibid., par. 1236.

Held, that it was not essential that the requirement of the act of August 1, 1892, be embodied in a contract, the law itself being self-acting. The responsibility rests on contractors to comply with it, irrespective of the terms and conditions of their contracts. The officers who enter into contracts on behalf of the United States are not charged with the duty of enforcing the law with reference to those with whom they contract, the latter being directly responsible in the matter. Any construction by the War Department of the requirements of the act would, if erroneous and not sustained by the courts, be no protection to contractors. Ibid., par. 1237.

Inquiry having been made of the War Department by certain contractors whether the men employed on dredges, scows, and tugs on Lake Erie, under contracts with the United States, were not to be regarded as excepted from the application of the act of 1892, held that it was not the duty or province of this Department to determine such questions, but the same were for the courts to decide, on trials under the second section of the act, of persons charged with violations of its provisions. Neither this or other Department of the Government can lay down rules or make constructions of the law for contractors which would effectually protect them were they brought to trial.(b) Ibid., par. 1238.

No provision is contained in the act of 1892 for the suspension of its operation, and the Secretary of War has no power to suspend it as to certain work or places of work on the theory that an "emergency" exists as to the same. Nor can he lay down in advance any general rule as to what would be such an emergency as would relieve an officer or contractor from liability, or give him an immunity from prosecution. The question of the existence of an emergency is to be determined, in the first instance, by the person carrying on, or in charge of the work; in the second, by the court, if the case come before one. It may be said generally that when the emergency can be foreseen it is not extraordinary; that increased expense and inconvenience can not constitute an emergency which can not be foreseen and guarded against. Ibid., par. 1240.

[a] In the recent case of U. S. v. Jefferson, 60 Fed. Rep., 736, it is held that seamen employed on a steam snag boat belonging to the War Department, engaged in removing obstructions to navigation, were employed upon a "public work of the United States," and that the master of the boat, in exacting from them more than eight hours labor per diem, was indictable under the act of August 1, 1892.

[b] In a communication to the Secretary of War of August 29, 1892, the Attorney-General, whose opinion had been asked with regard to the application in general of the act to the "construction of levees on the Mississippi River," declines to give an official opinion with a view to the guidance of persons who may propose to enter in contract relations with the United States, in the absence of a special case requiring the action of the Secretary. L.*, 278).

Action on bond for labor or materials furnished.

[1] When a contract is entered into for the construction of any public building, of the prosecution and completion of any public work, or for repairs on any public building or public work, the contractor will be required, before entering upon performance of the same, to include in the bond given for the faithful performance of the contract the further obligation that he will promptly make payments to all persons who supply him with labor and materials for the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract. A certified copy of this contract and bond will be furnished to any person who has supplied such labor or materials, upon his application to the War Department, accompanied by an affidavit that the labor or materials have been supplied by him and have not been paid for by the contractor. Par. 644, A. R., 1901.

The act of August 13, 1894, which requires that the bond given to the United States by any contractor on a Government work shall contain the additional obligation that such contractor will promptly make payments to all persons supplying him with labor, materials, etc., does not establish any privity between the United States and such persons so as to authorize the officers of the Government to satisfy such claims from the moneys due the contractor on the failure of the latter to do so. 3 Compt. Dec., 708.

The act of August 13, 1894, giving to persons supplying labor and materials to a contractor on a Government work the right to maintain a suit in the name of the United States for their own benefit against the contractor and the sureties on his bond, does not authorize payment of the amount due the contractor from the United States to the sureties upon their claim that they will be held liable for certain amounts due for labor and materials which the contractor had failed to pay. Ibid.

When a contract has been fully completed payment of the balance remaining due from the United States to one of two copartners appearing as contractors in the name of the partnership will be a valid acquittance of the United States whether the other partner was ever legally bound as a party to the contract or not. Ibid.

When the Government, under the terms of a contract, takes possession of and finishes the uncompleted portion of the work for less than the amount which would have been payable to the contractor therefor, the latter is not entitled to the profit thus accruing to the Government. Ibid.

Where, in the erection of a public building, the United States reserves the right to withhold a part of the money in case the contractor fails to pay claims for material and labor, the contractor can not, by an assignment of moneys so withheld, give the L., 278, for the protection of persons furnishing material and labor for the construction of public works, and providing that, on furnishing an affidavit to the department of the Government, any person may have a copy of the bond and contract, upon which such person may bring suit, has reference only to the procuring of the copy of the contract and bond, and is not a prerequisite to the right to maintain an action. This requirement is for the purpose of satisfying the Government official that the person has furnished labor or material on the particular contract. Surety Co. v. U. S., 77 Illinois, App. 106.

The condition in the bond of a contractor with the United States for public work, prescribed by the act of August 13, 1894, 28 Stat. 1583. The same, military reservations.

1581. All lands belonging to the United States, to which the Indian title has been or may hereafter be extinguished, shall be subject to the right of preemption, under the conditions, restrictions, and stipulations provided by law.

[1] Lands acquired by the United States for public uses, by purchase with the consent of the legislatures of the States, or acquired by an exercise of the right of eminent domain are not "public lands," that term applying only to such lands as are subject to sale or other disposition under general laws. Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S., 761; V Opin. Att. Gen., 578. Power over such lands is vested in Congress by the Constitution, without limitation, and is the foundation upon which the Territorial governments rest. U. S. v. Gratiot, 14 Pet., 526. The power of Congress over the public land and the effect of its grants can not be interferred with by State legislation. Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall., 92.

Congress has the sole power to declare the dignity and effect of titles emanating from the United States, and the whole legislation of the Federal Government, in reference to the public lands, declares the patent the superior and conclusive evidence of legal title. Until its issuance the fee is in the Government; by the patent, it passes to the grantee, and he is entitled to recover the possession in ejectment. Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Peters, 436, 450; Wilcox v. Jackson, ibid., 498, 516; Langdon v. Sherwood, 124 U. S., 74, 83; Hussman v. Dunham, 165 U. S., 144; Carter v. Ruddy, 166 U. S., 493; Kirwan v. Murphy, 83 Fed. Rep., 275.

There is no way for titles to land to be divested out of the United States, except in strict pursuance of some law of the United States, and, as no statute of limitations runs against the United States, occupancy and possession alone, even for a great length of time, can not ripen into title as against the United States. Drew v. Valentine, 18 Fed. Rep., 712.

In the administration of the public lands the decisions of the Land Department upon questions of fact are conclusive, and only questions of law can be reviewed by the courts. Catholic Bishop of Nesqually v. U. S. 158 U. S., 155.

Sec. 2258, R.S.

1582. The following classes of lands, unless otherwise specially provided for by law, shall not be subject to the rights of preemption, to wit:

First. Lands included in any reservation by any treaty, law, or proclamation of the President, for any purpose.[1]

Second. Lands included within the limits of any incorporated town, or selected as the site of a city or town.

Third. Lands actually settled and occupied for purposes of trade and business, and not for agriculture.

Fourth. Lands on which are situated any known salines or mines.

Sec. 2393, R.S.

1583. The provisions of this chapter[2] shall not apply to military or other reservations[3] heretofore made by the United States, nor to reservations for light-houses, custom-houses, mints, or such other public purposes as the inter-

[3] MILITARY RESERVATIONS.

No specific statutory authority exists empowering the President to reserve public lands; but the right to reserve such lands for public uses is recognized by the courts. 14 Dec. Int. Dep., 426, 607, 628; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S., 755, 768; Walcott v. Des Moines Co., 5 Wall., 681. Such reservation may be effected by proclamation or by Executive order. 13 Dec. Int. Dep., 426. For cases in which the specific authority of law exists for the establishment of reservations, see the title Forest Reservations, in the chapter entitled NATIONAL PARKS.

A military reservation, being simply territory of the United States withdrawn from sale, preemption, (a) etc. (VII Opin. Att. Gen., 574, 757; 14 ibid., 775), the mere fact of the establishing of such a reservation can not affect the power of the State or Territorial authorities (according as it may be located in a State or Territory) to

[a] The Constitution (Art. IV. sec. 3, ¶ 2) has vested in Congress the exclusive power "to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory" (held in U. S. v. Gratiot (14 Peters, 537) to mean "lands") "or other property belonging to the United States." As a consequence perhaps of the indefiniteness of this grant (see 7 Opin. Att. Gen., 574) no general enactment providing for the setting apart of land for military reservations has ever been made by Congress. In a few cases, indeed, a special authority to establish a military reserve has been conferred upon the President by statute, but the great majority of the military reservations heretofore located or now existing have been made by the President without any such specific authority whatever. But though no general authority has been directly given by Congress for the reserving of lands for military purposes, an authority for the purpose has been deemed to exist, and this authority is found in the usage of the executive department of the Government, as indirectly sanctioned by Congress in repeated preemption acts, acts relating to the survey of the public domain, appropriation acts, etc., in which lands reserved for military purposes by the President have been in general terms excepted from sale, exempted from entry, etc., or special provision has been made for the cost of improvements to be erected upon the same. In Grisar v. McDonald (6 Wallace, 381) the United States Supreme Court, by Field, J., observes: "From an early period in the history of the Government it has been the practice of the President to order, from time to time, as the exigencies of the public service required, parcels of land belonging to the United States to be reserved from sale and set apart for public uses." Further, "The authority of the President in this respect is recognized in numerous acts of Congress." The court then cites several statutes as containing this recognition, including the preemption acts of May 29, 1830, and September 4, 1841, and adds: "The action of the President in making the (military) reservations" (the title to which was at issue in the particular case) "was indirectly approved by the legislation of Congress in appropriating moneys for the construction of fortifications and other public works upon them." And see XII Opin. Att. Gen., 381; XIV ibid., 182; XVII ibid., 258; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Peters, 512; U. S. v. Hare, 4 Sawyer, 653; also U. S. v. R. R. Bridge Co., 6 McLean, 517;

It is, moreover, to be noted that the provision of the act of 1841, referred to by the Supreme Court, has been incorporated as a general enactment in the Revised Statutes in the chapter (chapter 4 of title 32) on preemptions, section 2258 expressly excepting from the lands of the United States, "subject to the rights of preemption," "lands included in any reservation by any treaty, law, or proclamation of the President for any purpose." And see section 2393, specifically excepting military reservations from the operation of the laws authorizing the establishing of town sites.

The "proclamation" of the President reserving lands for military purposes is usually in the form ests of the United States may require, whether held under reservations through the Land Office by title derived from the Crown of Spain or otherwise.

serve civil or criminal process therein, or to attach or levy upon personal property, except in so far, of course, as such service may be specially precluded or restricted by law as to military persons in general.(b) Where indeed there has been a cession of exclusive jurisdiction over the land by the State to the United States, the question whether the State authorities may still serve process within the reservation on account of liabilities incurred or crimes committed outside of its limits will depend upon the terms of the cession. Dig. Opin. J. A. Gen., par. 1699.

Land which has been set apart as a portion of an Indian reservation, under a treaty, can not be occupied as a military reservation; nor can even a military post be maintained thereon, in derogation of the terms of the treaty or against the consent of the Interior Department.(c) Ibid., par. 1701.

Held that the right to the "free and open exploration and purchase" of mineral lands, accorded to citizens, etc., by section 2319 Revised Statutes, could not authorize an entry, for the purpose of prospecting for mines, upon a military reservation once duly defined and established by the President, the mineral lands intended by the statute being clearly such as are included within the "public lands" of the United States. Ibid., par. 1703.

Mineral lands belonging to the public domain, which are reserved from sale under section 2318 of the Revised Statutes, may be reserved for military or other purposes by the President. Where such lands are included in a military reservation, they are not open to exploration and purchase under section 2319 of the Revised Statutes. It is otherwise where a right has once attached to mineral land, under the laws relating thereto, in favor of the locator of a mining claim. Here the land, during the existence of such right, is not subject to reservation by the President; and if it be subsequently reserved, the locator may nevertheless perfect his title. XVII Opin. Att. Gen., 230.

When public land subject to homestead settlement has been duly entered under the homestead law, it thenceforth ceases to be at the disposal of the Government so long as the entry of the settler subsists. Hence it can not, while such entry stands, be set apart by the President for a military reservation. Ibid., 160.

Where a part of the public domain has once been reserved by the President for military or other public purposes, and subsequently the land so reserved becomes unnecessary for such purposes, it can not be restored to the public domain without authority from Congress. Ibid., 168; XVI ibid., 123.

The President's power in the matter of military reservations is limited to the setting apart and declaring of the reservation; and, for the purpose of adding to and modifying the boundaries of the original reserved tract, a reservation may be redeclared by the Executive. But the President can not unreserve duly reserved land, either by revoking the order of reservation or otherwise. After lands have once been reserved for military purposes, the President, in the absence of authority from Congress, is not empowered to withdraw or restore them. By the authority, indeed, of the act of July 5, 1884, he may abandon a useless military reservation and turn the lands over to the Interior Department for disposition and sale. But he can not rereserve lands once turned over, they being no longer a part of the public domain, but lands in regard to which Congress has expressed a different will. Dig. Opin. J. A. G., paragraphs 1706, 1707.

Land Dec. Int. Dept., 30, 1702; 6 id., 18, 317; 13 id., 426, 607, 628; 8 Fed. Rep., 883; 12 id., 449; 92 U. S. 733; 101 id., 768; 5 Wallace 681.

of a military general order, issued by the Secretary of War, whose act in this, as in other administrative proceedings pertaining to the military administration, is in legal contemplation the act of the President, whom he represents. But no head of a Department or executive official inferior to the President can, of his own authority, make a reservation of public lands. The power is vested only in Congress and the President. United States v. Hare, 4 Sawyer, 653, 669.

In this connection may be noted the ruling of Attorney-General Bates (X Opins., 359), in opposition to that of Justice McLean, of the Supreme Court (in U. S. v. The Railroad Bridge Co., 6 McLean, 517), but apparently concurred in by Attorney-General Williams (XIV Opins., 246), to the effect that where a tract of land of the United States has once been legally reserved for military purposes the President is not empowered, in the absence of authority from Congress, to relinquish such reservation and restore the land reserved to the general body of the public lands.

[b] As by section 1237, Revised Statutes, exempting enlisted men from arrest for certain debts, or by the operation of the provisions of the fifty-ninth article of war as to the form to be observed in making criminal arrests of military persons.

[c] By Article VI, section 2, of the Constitution, "all treaties made under the authority of the United States" are declared to be "the supreme law of the land;" and Indian reservations "have generally been made through the exercise of the treaty-making power, and in fulfillment of treaty obligations." XIV Opin. Att. Gen., 182. That land can not be reserved or occupied for military purposes to the prejudice of a title previously vested in an individual or a corporation, see, further, IX Opin., 339; XIII ibid., 469.

Soldier's homesteads.
Mar. 1, 1901, v. 31, p. 847.
Sec. 2304, R.S.

1586. Every private soldier and officer who has served in the Army of the United States during the recent rebellion for ninety days, and who was honorably discharged and has remained loyal to the Government, including the troops mustered into the service of the United States by virtue of the third section of an act approved February thirteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and every seaman, marine, and officer who has served in the Navy of the United States or in the Marine Corps during the rebellion for ninety days, and who was honorably discharged and has remained loyal to the Government, and every private soldier and officer who has served in the Army of the United States during the Spanish war, or who has served, is serving, or shall have served in the said Army during the suppression of the insurrection in the Philippines for ninety days, and who was or shall be honorably discharged; and every seaman, marine, and officer who has served in the Navy of the United States or in the Marine Corps during the Spanish war, or who has served, is serving, or shall have served in the said forces during the suppression of the insurrection in the Philippines for ninety days, and who was or shall be honorably discharged, shall, on compliance with the provisions of this chapter, as hereinafter modified, be entitled to enter upon and receive patents for a quantity of public lands not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, or one quarter section, to be taken in compact form, according to legal subdivisions, including the alternate reserved sections of public lands along the line of any railroad or other public work not otherwise reserved or appropriated, and other lands subject to entry under the homestead laws of the United States; but such homestead settler shall be allowed six months after locating his homestead and filing his declaratory statement within which to make his entry and commence his settlement and improvement. Act of March 1, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 847).

Deduction for military service.
Mar. 1, 1900, v. 31, p. 847.
Sec. 2305, R.S.

1587. The time which the homestead settler has served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect title, or if discharged on account of wounds received or disability incurred in the line of duty, then the term of enlistment shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect title, without reference to the length of time he may have served; but no patent shall issue to any homestead settler who has not resided upon, improved, and cultivated his homestead for a period of at least one year after he shall have commenced his improvements: Provided, That in every case in which a settler on the public land of the United States under the homestead laws died while actually engaged in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States as private soldier, officer, seaman, or marine, during the war with Spain or the Philippine insurrection, his widow, if unmarried, or in case of her death or marriage, then his minor orphan children or his or their legal representatives, may proceed forthwith to make final proof upon the land so held by the deceased soldier and settler, and that the death of such soldier while so engaged in the service of the United States shall, in the administration of the homestead laws, be construed to be equivalent to a performance of all requirements as to residence and cultivation for the full period of five years, and shall entitle his widow, if unmarried, or in case of her death or marriage, then his minor orphan children or his or their legal representatives, to make final proof upon and receive Government patent for said land; and that upon proof produced to the officers of the proper local land office by the widow, if unmarried, or in case of her death or marriage, then his minor orphan children or his or their legal representatives, that the applicant for patent is the widow, if unmarried, or in case of her death or marriage, his orphan children or his or their legal representatives, and that such soldier, sailor, or marine died while in the service of the United States as hereinbefore described, the patent for such land shall issue. Ibid.

Persons who have entered less than 160 acres, rights of.
June 8, 1872, c. 338, s. 2, v. 17, p. 333.
Sec. 2306, R.S.

1588. Every person entitled, under the provisions of section twenty-three hundred and four, to enter a homestead who may have heretofore entered, under the homestead laws, a quantity of land less than one hundred and sixty acres, shall be permitted to enter so much land as, when added to the quantity previously entered, shall not exceed one hundred and sixty acres.

Widow and minor children of persons entitled to homestead, etc.
June 8, 1872, c. 338, s. 3, v. 17, p. 333.
Sec. 2307, R.S.

1589. In case of the death[1] of any person who would be entitled to a homestead under the provisions of section twenty-three hundred and four, his widow, if unmarried, or in case of her death or marriage, then his minor orphan children, by a guardian duly appointed and officially accredited at the Department of the Interior, shall be entitled to all the benefits enumerated in this chapter, subject to all the provisions as to settlement and improvements therein contained; but if such person died during his term of enlistment, the whole term of his enlistment shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect the title.

[1] Section 6 of the act of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. L., 855), provides that the requirements of that section shall not "be construed as affecting any rights to location of soldiers' certificates heretofore issued under section 2306 of the Revised Statutes."

Actual service in the Army or Navy equivalent to residence, etc.
June 8, 1872, c. 338, s. 4, v. 17, p. 333.
Sec. 2308, R.S.

1590. Where a party at the date of his entry of a tract of land under the homestead laws, or subsequently thereto, was actually enlisted and employed in the Army or Navy of the United States, his services therein shall, in the administration of such homestead laws, be construed to be equivalent, to all intents and purposes, to a residence for the same length of time upon the tract so entered. And if his entry has been canceled by reason of his absence from such tract while in the military or naval service of the United States, and such tract has not been disposed of, his entry shall be restored; but if such tract has been disposed of, the party may enter another tract subject to entry under the homestead laws, and his right to a patent therefor may be determined by the proofs touching his residence and cultivation of the first tract and his absence therefrom in such service.
